Parties taking part in arbitration proceedings cannot later contest any want of formality in the appointment of the arbitrator and order of reference or the proceedings.[32] The party agreeing to refer the disputes to the arbitration cannot raise the plea that the disputes were beyond the scope of arbitration agreement only because the award is passed against it.[33] The party participating in the arbitration proceedings without any protest was estopped from challenging its proceedings after the award was passed.[34] However, it was held that mere participation in arbitration proceedings and raising objections would not operate as estoppel in challenging the jurisdiction of the arbitrators to give an award.[35] The Supreme Court observed that an arbitrator has to give an award within four months unless the time was extended by court. An award given beyond that time is without jurisdiction and invalid and the parties are not estopped from challenging the validity of such an award merely because they participated in the proceedings after the expiry of the prescribed period.[36] Where the agreement provided for the appointment of an arbitrator only by one of the parties but an arbitrator was appointed by the court at the instance of the other party; it was held that the award made by such arbitrator can be set aside and the appearance of the parties does not estopped the party from challenging the award.[37] Party participating in arbitration proceedings without protest cannot after awards challenge the whole proceedings as without jurisdicion on ground of known disability of the other party.[38] Where a contract with Government contained arbitration clause and reference to arbitration was made accordingly, and the Government took part in the arbitration proceedings is, it estopped from raising objection that the contract and the arbitration clause were void owing to non-compliance with Section 175(3) of the Government of India Act, 1935.[39] It was however held in the undermentioned case that where a party takes part willingly in the arbitration proceedings after expiry of the period for submitting the award and the award was made thereafter, the party is estopped from challenging the award on the ground that the award was made after expiry of the period.[40] When arbitrators failed to make an award within the time, the court directed, on consent of the parties, the umpire to act as sole arbitrator and make the award. When parties took part before the umpire, it was held they were estopped from questioning the award given by the umpire on the

---

29. Hiralal Pannalall v. Dal Housie Jute Co., AIR 1978 Cal 119; Albion Jute Mills v. Jute and Gunny Brokers Ltd., 1953 Cal 458.
30. Garg Builders & Engineers v. U.P. Rajkiya Nirman Nigam Ltd., AIR 1995 Del 111 (para 6).
31. Vijay Singh v. Hindustan Zinc Ltd., AIR 1992 Raj 92. See also Noble Engineering Works v. H.P. State Electricity Board, AIR 1994 HP 153 (paras 50 and 51); Kamala Solvent v. Manipal Finance Corporation Ltd., AIR 2001 Mad 440 (paras 9 and 10).
32. Assaudullah Mokhdoomi v. Lassa Baba, AIR 1966 J&K 1; New India Assurance Co. v. Dalmia Iron & Steel Ltd., AIR 1965 Cal 42; Tasapore & Co. v. Cochin Shipyard Ltd., AIR 1984 SC 1072; (Company agreeing to refer without prejudice cannot contend that award is not binding as reference was made without prejudice); Dhar B.K. v. Union of India, AIR 1965 Cal 424; Union of India v. K.P. Mandal, AIR 1958 Cal 415; Union of India v. B.M. Sen, AIR 1963 Cal 456; Jupiter & Co. v. Corporation of Calcutta, AIR 1956 Cal 470; State of W.B. v. A.K. Ghosh & Brothers, AIR 1975 Cal 227; Neelkantan and Brothers v. Supt. Engineer National Highways Salem, AIR 1988 SC 2045; Union of India v. Sohan Singh & Co., AIR 1989 J&K 14; R.C. Bhalla v. N.C. Bhalla, AIR 1996 Del 24 (para 17).
33. International S &I. Agency Ltd. v. Delhi Municipal Corporation, AIR 2001 Del 283 (para 23).
34. Vaish Brothers & Co. v. Union of India, AIR 1999 Del 105 (para 3).
35. Khardah Co. Ltd. v. Raymon & Co., AIR 1962 SC 1810; Waverly Jute Mills Co. v. Raymon & Co., AIR 1963 SC 90; Ajit v. Fateh, AIR 1962 Punj 412; Omprakash v. Union of India, AIR 1963 All 242; Jagannath v. Premier Credit Inst. Corp., AIR 1973 All 49; Ramkinkar Rai v. Tufani Ahir, AIR 1931 All 35.
36. State of Punjab v. Hardyal, AIR 1985 SC 920.
37. Food Corp. of India v. A. Md. Yunus, AIR 1987 Ker 231.
38. Jupiter Insce Co. v. Calcutta Co-operation, AIR 1956 Cal 470; B.K. Dhar Pvt. Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1965 Cal 424.
39. Union of India v. Rallia Ram, AIR 1960 Punj 567; Union of India v. Khem Chand Raj Kumar, ILR (1973) 1 Cal 529.
40. Bokaro & Ramgur Ltd. v. Prasun Kumar, AIR 1968 Pat 150 (FB); State of Bihar v. S.K. Sahay, AIR 1971 Pat 37; N.M.T. Co-op. Society v. Dy. Registrar Co-op. Society, AIR 1977 Raj 233; Ganesh Chandra v. Artatrana, AIR 1965 Ori 17.

ground of lack of jurisdiction.[41] The award passed by an Agricultural Tribunal after the prescribed period, is enforceable, particularly when the party challenging the award participates in the proceedings without protest.[42] Where an objection is raised to an award that it was delivered out of time, it is open to the other party to contend that the first party was barred by estoppel by his conduct from raising that plea.[43] Where the Government and the contractor sumitted to arbitration, it was held that the parties could not resile and the Government was not competent to direct the arbitrator not to act and to terminate the proceedings.[44]

Where the court set aside the award of the arbitrator and appointed a second arbitrator, and the State filed an appeal against the order of court appointing the second arbitrator but participated in the proceedings before the second arbitrator, it was held that the statutory right of appeal is not affected by the principle of estoppel.[45] Where the arbitrator was the Managing Director of the petitioner company, it was held that he can continue arbitration proceedings even after his retirement from the service of the company and the parties are estopped from questioning the reference.[46]

Res judicata not expressly pleaded will be deemed to have been waived.[47]

Admission by contractor of Government's claim for extra expenditure cannot estop contractor from challenging the claim and seeking arbitration regarding it under the arbitration clause.[48]

An agreement to be bound by arbitration at the instance of some partners, though not originally binding on other partners, might become binding later on by acquiscence or acceptance of benefit tendered and they would be estopped from challenging the award.[49] Where a company enters into contract with the Government in its pseudo or trade name, and deposits earnest money as well as securiy deposit and also tenders part of contracted stores for inspection, the company is estopped from challenging the contract and reference to arbitration.[50]

An invalid reference does not amount to waiver or estoppel.[51]

63. CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE

A decree holder's right to execute the decree is controlled by O. XXI, C.P.C. There can be no estoppel against right conferred by statute.[52] Executing court cannot sell property which is admittedly non-saleable. Failure to raise objection in time does not create any estoppel because there is no estoppel against statute. Doctrine of estoppel or waiver is not applicable to the protection under Section 60 of the Code of Civil Procedure Code (5 of 1908).[53] Second appeal under Section 100 of C.P.C. respecting finding of facts is not barred where the finding is based on non-appreciation of the conduct of the parties in proper perspective and misapplication of law.[54]

64. EXCISE ACT

A bidder at an auction of liquor shop held under the Punjab Excise Act is not estopped from challenging the legality of the conditions of sale announced at the time of the auction, if they are at variance with the conditions laid down by the statutory rules.[55]

---

41. Chellappan v. Kerala State Electricity Board, AIR 1975 SC 230.
42. Padmanabhan Nair v. Thankappan, AIR 1980 Ker 156.
43. Kamta Pd. Nigam v. Ram Dayal, AIR 1951 All 711.
44. State of Maharashtra v. Ranjeet Construction, AIR 1986 Bom 76.
45. State of Kerala v. Valliammal Bhaskaran, AIR 1990 Ker 42.
46. National Research Development Corpo. of India v. Britelite Carbons Ltd., AIR 1987 Del 317
47. Sukhni v. Sukhbasi, AIR 1967 All 423.
48. Union of India v. Rishi Raj & Co., AIR 1973 Del 15.
49. Rai Dwarkanath v. Haj Mohammad, AIR 1914 PC 33; See also 1971 Cur LJ 604.
50. Modi Industries Ltd. v. Union of India, ILR (1970) 1 Del 621.
51. Union of India v. S.N. Das & Brothers, AIR 1962 Cal 82.
52. Narayana v. Godavarma, AIR 1952 Tra/Co. 561.
53. Gowranna v. Basavana Gowda, AIR 1975 Kant 84; Ram Naresh v. Ganesh Mistri, AIR 1952 All 680.
54. Bijan Kumar Barman v. Bhaskar Chandra Barman, AIR 2001 Cal 98 (para 17).
55. Union of India v. Narain Singh, AIR 1953 Punj 274.

65. EVIDENCE ACT

Evidence of oral agreement contrary to written agreement is excluded by virtue of Section 92 of the Evidence Act. Section 115 does not override Section 92 as there is no estoppel against statute.[56]

66. MUNICIPAL ACT

There is no estoppel against the statutory provisions of a minicipal enactment and the municipality is entitled to remove illegal encroachments.[57]

67. BANK

Where a depositor nominated his two wives as his nominess while making the deposit and the bank accepted it, it was held that the bank is estopped from refusing to pay the nominees on the ground that the nomination of two nominess was irregular.[58] Where a money decree in respect of a bank loan was passed in favour of the bank but as a result of compromise proposal by the judgment-debtor, a deposit of part of money was made during the period of negotiation, it can not create estoppel against the bank to reject the proposal and to execute the decree.[59] The bank is not estopped from claiming any lien over the pledged goods even after the payment of the amount due if the debtor has not cleared his amount in connection with another loan.[60]

68. ESTOPPEL ON POINT OF LAW

There is no estoppel on a point of law[61] or a settled proposition of law.[62] Operation of law can not be prevented by estoppel.[63] Estoppel refers to a belief in a fact and not in a proposition of law. A person cannot be estopped for a misrepresentation on a point of law. An admission on point of law is not an admission of a "thing" so as to make the admission matter of estoppel.[64] Where certain claims have been allowed in a tax matter, there is no estoppel as against similar claims in future.[65] Any act done under misapprehension of legal right does not create estoppel, nor does a question of estoppel arise when the parties know the correct position.[66] Where persons merely represent their conclusions of law as to the validity of an assumed or admitted adoption, there is no representation of a fact to constitute an estoppel.[67]

No question of estoppel can ever arise where both the parties are labouring under a mistake of law and one party is not more to blame than the other. Estoppel arises only when the plaintiff by his act or conduct makes a representation to the defendant of a certain state of facts which is acted upon by the defendant to his detriment; it is only then that the plaintiff is estopped from setting up a different state of facts. Even if this position can be availed of where the representation is in regard to a position in law, no

---

56. Ranbaxy Laboratories Ltd. v. Doon Apartment (P) Ltd., ILR (1979) 1 Del 84.
57. Ramjidas v. State of Assam, AIR 1964 Assam 60.
58. Chandramma v. General Manager, State Bank of Hyderabad, AIR 1988 AP 289.
59. Thakur Steel Tubes Ltd. v. State Bank of India, Chandigarh, AIR 1997 P&H 215.
60. State Bank of India, Kanpur v. Deepak Malviya, AIR 1996 All 165 (paras 16, 18, 20 and 27).
61. Raghava Rajagopala Chari v. State of Assam, AIR 1965 Assam 109. Appointment in clear violation of Regulation, no estoppel, Ravinder Sharma v. State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 277 (para 12); Union Territory, Chandigarh Administration v. Managing Society Goswami GDSDK, AIR 1996 SC 1759 (paras 3 and 4), reversing Decision of P&H High Court, Dt. 22-10-1991; M. Pyarali v. M. Sarifbhai, 1996 AIHC 716 (para 14) (Guj); B.S. Balaji v. T. Govindaraju, 1996 AIHC 2184 (para 7) (Kant); undertaking to not to approach Court will not act as estoppel Abu Zaid v. Principal, Madarsa-Tul-Islah, Saraimir, Azamgarh, AIR 1999 All 64 (paras 11 and 12); Kennedy Sigamani v. Kiruba Gnanaseeli Prema, AIR 2000 Mad 337 (para 17); Rijhan Nag v. State of Bihar, 2000 AIHC 2455 (paras 5, 6 ad 8) (Pat); Adhartal Shiksha Samiti v. State of M.P., AIR 2001 MP 3 (paras 13, 15 and 16).
62. C. Doctor and Company Ltd. v. B.S. Mills Ltd., AIR 1995 All 19 (Para 3).
63. C.I.T v. B.N. Bhattachargee, ITR (1979) 118 461 : 1979 Tax LR 1180; Jairam v. Laxmidevi, ILR (1963) 2 All 976; Prasun Kumar v. R.S. College, AIR 1954 Pat 486; Chinto v. Niranyan Singh, 1957 Punj 217; Dinbai v. Dominionof India, AIR 1951 Bom 72; Life Insurance Corporation of India v. Advani & Co., 2001 AIHC 421 (para 22) (All).
64. Jagwant Singh v. Silam Singh, ILR (1899) 21 All 285.
65. Dunlop India Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1977 SC 597.
66. Shanker Lal v. Narendra, AIR 1967 All 405.
67. Dhanraj v. Soni Bai, (1925) 27 Bom LR 837 : 52 IA 231 : ILR 52 Cal 482.

such occasion arises when the mistake of law is common to both the parties. The other circumstances would be such as would entitle a Court of Equity to refuse the relief claimed by the plaintiff because on the facts and circumstances of the case it would be inequitable for the Court to award the relief to the plaintiff. These are, however, equitable considerations and could scarcely be imported when there is a clear and unambiguous provision of law which entitles the plaintiff to the relief claimed by him. Observations of KAUSHALENDRA RAO, J. in AIR 1951 Nag 372, Not approved.[68]

In a suit for partition of properties purchased in the names of minor son, it was found that they were acquired by the father himself and on his death the properties devolved on his heirs. Any subsequent admission of wife and sons in the alleged partition deed or in some previous case, would not change the legal position and principle of estoppel would not be attracted.[69] No estoppel arises by reason of the admission by a party as to the legal effect of facts fully set out and admitted.[70] No amount of admission contrary to law can create as estoppel.[71]

Interpretation of a document is a question of law and there can be no estoppel in such matter.[72] Whether a suit is bad for partial partition or not, is a question of law. Hence the plea of estoppel is not available.[73]

When a person applies for a stay order under Section 34 of the Arbitration Act without representing that he is a party to the agreement and obtains an order but the contract containing the arbitration clause itself is found to be illeggal, he is not estopped from saying that he was not a party to the agreement.[74] Relinquishment of future inheritance does not operate as estoppel as such reliquishment is prohibited by Mohammedan Law as void.[75]

Where future right of inheritance is relinguished for consideration, estoppel applies. There is no conflict between Section 6(a) T.P. Act and Section 115 Evidence Act. Jamma Masjid v. K. Deviah[76], where it was held that Section 6(a) does not conflict with Section 43, as Section 43 also is a species of estoppel.[77]

The wrong acts of the court would not estop the party to support his claim.[78] Where the wife of a judgment-debtor claimed that the attached property belonged to her, the court referred her claim to a regular suit under Order XXI, R. 58, C.P.C. The opposite party was not estopped from contending that the suit was barred under Section 47, C.P.C.[79] Where on a writ petition the High Court directed the Government to pass an order under Fundamental R. 54 in favour of the petitioner and the Government accordingly passed an order, there is no estoppel against the petitioner from denying the applicability of the rule to his case and the order of the High Court in the writ petition will not operate as a bar to the High Court going into the validity of the order.[80] In an election petition, the tribunal set aside the election of the returned candidate, A writ petition was preferred against that order on the ground that the Tribunal failed in its duty to summarily dismiss the election petition for non-compliance with Rule 75 of Bihar Panchayat Election Rules. An objection was taken that the writ petitioner having contested the election petition had acquiesceed to the jurisdiction and was estopped from taking such plea. It was held that the principles of acquiescence and estoppel would not apply in such cases.[81] The dispute, relating to the number of votes secured by the candidates in an election and whether any valid vote of the opposite party was rejected while accepting invalid votes of the petitioner, cannot be adjudicated upon effectively without recounting of votes and the consent of the parties/candidates securing equal number of votes for

---

68. Sales Tax Officer, Banaras v. Kanhaiya Lal Makund Lal Saraf, AIR 1959 SC 135.
69. Girindranath Mukherjee v. Soumen Mukherjee, AIR 1988 Cal 375.
70. Kalidas v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 62 : 1955 SCR 88.
71. D.B. Dey & Co. v. Sib Thakur Jiu, AIR 1969 Cal 565.
72. Sudesh Kumar v. Mool Chand, AIR 1969 Raj 22.
73. Amarnath v. Ganesha Ram, AIR 1971 Punj 241.
74. V.K. Murthi v. C.V. Rama Iyyer, ILR (1974) 2 Cal 1.
75. Sulaiman Sahib v. Kader Ibrahim, AIR 1953 Mad 161.
76. AIR 1962 SC 847.
77. Damodaran v. Rajappan, AIR 1992 Ker 397.
78. Balgobind v. Sheo Kumar, 22 All LJ 79.
79. Machamma v. Kanakamma, AIR 1935 Mad 923.
80. Raghava Raja Gopala Chari v. State of Assam, AIR 1965 Assam 109.
81. R.P. Singh v. Baidhyanath Prasad, 1973 Pat 289.

draw of lots cannot operate as estoppel.[82] But when the parties themselves requested the judge to decide the case contrary to the ordinary procedural law of the court and had taken part in the proceedings, they could not be allowed to complain against the procedure adopted by the judge.[83] Where the municipality has no legal power to effect closure of an existing market, it cannot do so even with the consent of the concerned party for such consent does not validate closure.[84]

Where the decree holder obtained decree on the basis of tenancy, he is estopped from pleading in the execution proceedings that the judgment debtor was not a tenant.[85] Where a party proceeded on the basis that certain rules are valid, cannot during argument challenge the validity of those rules.[86]

69. SUPREME COURT DIRECTIONS

There is no estoppel insofar as the duty of all concerned to enforce and comply with the directions of the Supreme Court is concerned.[87] However, where the owner of the land constructed building after completing the formalities after he received a letter of the Development Authority that the notification for acquisition had been quashed but subsequently the Supreme Court upheld the acquisition proceedings and the owner applied for release of that part of the land, the Supreme Court directed the Govt. to consider the same sympathetically.[88]

70. ESTOPPEL AGAINST PUBLIC POLICY AND PUBLIC INTEREST

Where a statute prohibits sub-leting the premises on the ground of public policy, even when the owner gives oral permission to the tenant allowing him to sub-let the premises, he is not estopped from pleading that subletting was unlawful.[89] The Rajasthan Land Reforms and Resumption of Jagirs Act 6 of 1952 confers no authority on the Government to grant exemption from resumption and an undertaking by the Government not to resume will be invalid, as there can be no estoppel against a statute.[90]

A person, who had earlier consented to an agreement, can plead that the agreement is a nullity being opposed to public policy: In Union Carbide Corporation v. Union of India, AIR 1992 SC 248 the Supreme Court observed the observation of ATKIN LJ "Illegalities are incurable" citing In re A Bankruptcy Notice (1924) 2 ChD 76 at 97: "It is well established that it is impossible in law for a person to allege any kind of principle which precludes him from alleging the invalidity of that which the statement has, on grounds of general public policy, enacted shall be invalid". In Maritime Electric Co. Ltd. v. General Dairies Ltd., AIR 1937 PC 114 at 116-117, it was observed ".... an estoppel is only a rule of evidence which under special circumstances can be invoked by a party to an action, it can not therefore avail in such a case to release the plaintiff from an obligation to obey such a statute, nor can it enable the defendant to escape from statutory obligation of such a kind on his part. It is immaterial whether the obligation is onerous or otherwise to the party suing. The duty of each party is to obey the law..... The court should first of all determine the nature of the obligation imposed by the statute and then consider whether the admission of an estoppel would nullify the statutory provision..... There is not a single case in which an estoppel has been allowed in such a case to defeat a statutory obligation of an unconditional character."[91]

The State Government announced a policy declaring incentive and concessions, one of them being refund of sales tax to selective industries. It was held that as the scheme of refund was opposed to public policy the doctrine of promissory estoppel is not applicable.[92]

---

82. Basanti Das v. Kamala Nayak, AIR 1999 Ori 187 (para 4).
83. Atro Ram Paul v. Balai Chandra Paul, ILR (1973) 1 Cal 64.
84. Ramanlal v. Piparia, AIR 1963 MP 134.
85. John v. Karthiayani, AIR 1953 Tra-Co. 581.
86. Adarsha Fishery Co-op. Society v. State of Assam, AIR 1968 Assam 48.
87. Managing Society, D.M. C. & Hospital v. State of Punjab, AIR 1995 P&H 225 (para 21). See also Lalitha E.P. v. State, AIR 1996 Ker 133 (para 11).
88. Delhi Administration v. Gurdip Singh Uban, AIR 2000 SC 3737 (para 64).
89. Waman Shriniwas v. R.B. & Co., AIR 1959 SC 689; Thakuram v. Shivnath, AIR 1969 MP 130.
90. Amar Singhji v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1955 SC 504.
91. Also referred State of Kerala v. Gwalior Rayon Silk Manufacturing Co., AIR 1973 SC 2734 at 2745; Union Carbide Corpn. v. Union of India, AIR 1992 SC 248.
92. Amrit Banaspati Co. Ltd. v. State of Punjab, AIR 1992 SC 1075.

Transfer of hereditory office being opposed to public policy, the transferor or his representative in interest is not estopped from contesting its validity.[1] Any prohibition made by law on the ground of public policy, cannot be defeated by raising the plea of estoppel.[2]

The declaration of a Minister in public function that the Govt. had decided to withdraw certain lands from acquisition, does not amount to policy decision. The newspaper report cannot also form the basis of claiming that the Govt. was estopped from proceeding further with acquisition.[3] Where the defendant claimed deduction on the ground that by virtue of an agreement entered into between the ancestors of the parties to deduct Rs. 96 per annum from the amount received by way of pension in order to enable him to maintain the dignity of his office, it was held that this agreement was an assignment of future interest in a portion of a pension and governed by Section 12, Pensions Act. Since the agreement of this kind was rendered void by Section 12, the plaintiff's right to claim her full share, was not affected.[4]

Government can change its policy in public interest and promissory estoppel would not apply[5] but where the Govt. action is arbitrary, say in violation of a stay order, the Court would interfere.[6] No estoppel is available against public interest.[7]

71. VOID TRANSACTIONS

Where a sale deed is void ab inito, there would be no question of estoppel as against the transferor.[8] When prior proceedings are held void, the decision therein cannot operate as estoppel.[9] Government is liable to compensate for goods, delivered in pursuance of a contract which is void and cannot be ratified by the Government.[10] Where the alternative plea was raised by the plaintiff at the outset alongwith the contention that the transaction in question was void and the defence itself was willing and ready to act in accordance with the plea, the alternative plea was maintainable.[11]

72. SOME INSTANCES OF ESTOPPEL

Where the owner of property clothes a third person with apparent ownership of property and right of disposition thereof and the third party disposes of that property, the real owner is estopped from asserting

---

1. Nallasami v. Sadasiva, 67 MLJ 759.
2. Adinarayana v. Chengiah, AIR 1937 Mad 918; Ramakrishnamma v. Venkatasubbbaiah, ILR 58 Mad 389; State of Gujarat v. Vishnu Automobiles, AIR 1999 Guj 92 (para 21); G.T.N. Textiles Ltd v. Asstt. Directors, R O T Commissioner, AIR 1993 SC 1596 (paras 9-12); Shakti Tubes Ltd. v. State of Bihar (FB), AIR 1994 Pat 162 (para 11); Darshan Oils Pvt. Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1995 SC 370 (paras 7 and 8); Principal, Madhav Institute of Technology and Science v. R.S. Yadav, AIR 2000 SC 2487 (paras 8, 9 and 11), reversing LPA No. 218 of 1997, Dt. 15-10-1997 (MP); N.K. Metalia High School v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2001 Guj 63 (para 11); Ajantha Travels Trivandrum v. Govt. of India, AIR 2001 Ker 112; Laxmi Udyog Rock Cement Pvt. Ltd. v. State of Orissa, AIR 2001 Ori 51 (para 12), following Sales Tax Officer v. Shree Durga Oil Mills, AIR 1998 SC 591 : 1998 AIR SCW 186.
3. Mohmadbhai v. State of Maharashtra, 2000 AIHC 1945 (para 18) (Bom).
4. Parwati Bai v. Sakharam, AIR 1953 Nag 221.
5. Sales Tax Officer v. Shree Durga Oil Mills, AIR 1998 SC 591. See also Sanjaya Sales Corporation v. National Mineral Development Corporation, AIR 1993 AP 62 (para 12); A.J. Joy v. Govt. of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1993 Mad 282 (paras 36 and 37); Nagappa v. State, AIR 1994 Kant 77 (paras 20 and 23); Union of India v. Binani Consultants (P) Ltd., AIR 1995 Cal 234 (para 17); P.T.R. Exports (Madras) P. Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1996 SC 3461 (para 5).
6. Md. Ehsan v. Union of India, 1998 AIHC 2477 (paras 8 and 12) (Cal).
7. Himalaya Rice Mill, Motinagar v. State, AIR 1997 All 155. Also see Y. Konda Reddy v. State of A.P., AIR 1997 AP 121, tenders cancelled even after informing of acceptance to lowest tenderer. Withdrawal of whole scheme of development of tourism and inter-related activities at certain places by the Govt. in public interest, after petitioner's proposals were accepted, no estoppel Lotus Constructions v. Govt. of A.P., AIR 1997 AP 200. Also see K.A.S. Senthilnathan v. Union of India, AIR 1997 Mad 208. Government can change its industrial policy in public interest, no estoppel. Sales Tax Officer v. Shree Durga Oil Mills, AIR 1998 SC 591 (paras 14, 17 and 20) reversing OJC No. 2090 of 1980, decided on 15.9.1987 (Ori); National Oxygen Ltd v. Tamil Nadu Electricity Board, AIR 1996 Mad 229 (para 16); Bharat Wools, Ludhiana v. State of Punjab, AIR 1996 P&H 215 (para 30); State of Rajasthan v. Mahaveer Oil Industries, AIR 1999 SC 2302 (para 14); Cosmopolitan Club v. Government of T.N., AIR 2000 Mad 120 (para 27.17).
8. Biranchi Narayan v. Biranchi Narayan, AIR 1953 Ori 333.
9. Kameshwar v. Deolal, AIR 1964 Pat 247.
10. In re : Reghubansh Narain, AIR 1962 Pat 330.
11. Krishnabai C. Kadam v. Wellworth Developers, AIR 2001 Bom 9 (paras 27 and 28).

his title against the transferee in good faith and for value.[12] Where a mother was appointed by the court as guardian of the minor daughter on the basis of a statement by the mother that she would not claim interest in the property adverse to the daughter, she is estopped from filing a suit for possession of property on the basis of her title in respect of the son's property.[13] Where the grant in favour of the highest bidder in an execution was cancelled, and a second auction was held, in which the previous highest bidder participated, he is estopped from questioning the validity of the cancellation of the earlier auction in his favour.[14]

73. TRUSTEE MORTGAGING TRUST PROPERTY AS HIS OWN CANNOT DISPUTE SALE BY MORTGAGEE

A trustee, alleging that the trust property, consisting of land was his own property, mortgaged it. The mortgagee took the mortgage in good faith, for valuable consideration, and without notice of the trust. The mortgagee obtained a decree against the trustee for the sale of the land, and the land was sold in execution of that decree. The trustee subsequently brought a suit to recover the land from the purchaser on the ground that it was trust property and that he had no power to transfer it. To this none of the beneficiaries under the trust were parties. It was held that the plaintiff was estopped by his conduct from recovering possession of the land.[15] A person, who acted as a trustee of a public temple and obtained a decree of Court in that capacity, cannot subsequently turn round and claim the temple to be a private temple and its properties as his absolute properties.[16]

74. JOINT FAMILY—ESTOPPEL IN CASES OF ALIENATION BY A WIDOW

There are three classes of estoppel that may arise for consideration in dealing with reversioner's challenge to a widow's alienation. They are (1) that which is embodied in Section 115 of the Evidence Act, (2) election in the strict sense of the term whereby the person electing takes a benefit under the transaction and (3) ratification i.e., agreeing to abide by the transaction. A presumptive reversioner coming under any one of the aforesaid categories is precluded from questioning the transaction, when succession opens and when he becomes the actual reversioner. But if the presumptive reversioner is a minor at the time he has taken a benefit under the transaction, the principle of estoppel will be controlled by another rule goverining the law of minors. If after attaining majority he ratifies the transaction and accepts the benefit thereunder, there cannot be any difference in the application of the principle of election.[17]

Where a widow had taken a loan from the reversioners and alienated the property to pay off that debt, the reversioners are not estopped from challenging the alienation on ground of want of legal necessity.[18] A compromise by a presumptive reversioner under which he takes a benefit cannot debar his descendants who happen to be the actual reversioners from claiming to succeed to the reversion, when the succession open.[19]

Where a Hindu woman gave consent to her son to alienate her absolute property, she is estopped from claiming the property.[20] Where the son, who was the Karta, alienated property alleging, it was for legal necessity and his widowed mother consented, she is estopped from challenging the sale.[21]

Where a managing member of the joint family consented to the execution of a mortgage by a widow of the family and had an agreement from the mortgagee to have the option of having the mortgage transferred to him, he was estopped from challenging it.[22] A sale deed was executed by a widow and the

---

12. Li Tse Shi v. Pong Tosi Ching, AIR 1935 PC 208.
13. Harchand Singh v. Mohinder Kaur, AIR 1987 P&H 138.
14. Rahaman Bhai v. State of Orissa, AIR 1989 Ori 233.
15. Gulzar Ali v. Fida Ali, ILR (1883) 6 All 24.
16. Venkata Ramana v. Rama Mandiram, AIR 1966 AP 197.
17. S. Shanmugam Pillai v. K. Shanmugam Pillai, AIR 1972 SC 2069; Seetharamayya v. Sarva Chandrayya, AIR 1955 Andhra 68; D. Subba Reddy v. G. Govinda Reddy, AIR 1961 AP 430; Ramgowad Annagowda Patil v. Bhausaheb, 1927 PC 227; Pullayya v. Appanna, AIR 1957 AP 846.
18. Narainu v. Sant Ram, AIR 1952 Bail 6.
19. Bindu Kuer v. Lalita Prasad, AIR 1936 PC 304.
20. Jagari Bai v. Ramkhilawan, AIR 1976 MP 106.
21. K.C. Kapoor v. Radhika Devi, AIR 1981 SC 2128.
22. Bhagwan v. Ujagar, AIR 1928 PC 20.

daughter of the last male holder of a property. The sale was challenged by the daughter's son on the ground, the sale was not for legal necessity. The widow died during the pendency of litigation and the daughter became the absolute owner of the property under Section 14 of the Hindu Succession Act. It was held her son's suit was not maintainable and the daughter who was a co-executant was estopped from challenging the alienation.[23] A Hindu widow alienated most of her husband's property by three deeds among which one was a sale-deed in favour of A, a reversioner. A survived the widow and did not challenge the alienation. In a suit for the recovery of the properties by the heirs of A, it was held that the three deeds were part and parcel of the one transaction, and the plaintiffs were precluded from questioning them.[24] Where in a dispute between a limited onwer and a claimant there was a compromise dividing the property between them which was acted upon for several years and later when succession opened to the claimant as s reversioner and he claimed the rest of the estate, it was held that he was estopped.[25] By making avertment in the plaint that the defendant filed tax returns showing suit properties as joint, he was estopped from claiming them as separate properties.[26] Where the father of a join Hindu family mortgages the family property and the mortgage deed is signed by the coparceners, the coparceners are estopped from questioning the validity of the mortgage.[27] Where in a suit by mortgagee against the widow mortgagor, the reversioners stated in their written statement that they had no objection to the sale of property, their successors in interest cannot subsequently challenge the sale. It was not open to them to take a contrary plea to the prejudice of the person who, on the faith of the concession, got the property auctioned and pruchased it.[28] A person taking a share of properties, by accepting an arbitration on the footing that they were self acquired, is estopped from setting up the plea of joint acquisition.[29]

75. ADOPTION

Even in the case of an invalid adoption which was made under the belief that it was valid, the principle of estoppel by conduct would apply.[30] Where an adoption was recognised by the family members for a very long time and it altered the position of the adopted boy, if questioned after a long lapse of time, estoppel by conduct would arise in such a case.[31] The doctrine of estoppel cannot confer on a person the status which an adoption alone can give him. But the doctrine can be invoked to prevent a challenge to the adoption by one who has induced the adopted boy to change his position so irrevocably as to render it impossible for him to revert to his original position in his natural family.[32] A Hindu widow's power to take a son in adoption to her deceased husband was extinguished due to the presence of her widowed-daughter-in-law. The senior widow adopted 'X' and induced the daughter-in-law, to change her status of being a legal heir on the date of the adoption, by marrying the adopted son X. It was held, that the widow was estopped by her conduct both before and after the adoption from changing her ground and challenging the adoption by her of X.[33] In a suit to set aside an adoption brought by the adoptive mother against her adopted son it was found that the plaintiff had represented that she had authority to adopt, and this representation was acted on by the defendant; that the ceremony of adoption was carried out on the faith of this representation; that the marriage of the defendant was likewise on the strength of it celebrated, and the defendant performed the shradha ceremony of his adoptive father. It was further found that the defendant had been obliged to defend a suit brough against him by an alleged reversioner to the estate of his adoptive father, and that for this purpose he had incurred heavy liabilities. It was held that the plaintiff was estopped from maintaining a suit for a declaration that the adoption was without authority and void.[34]

---

23. Gobardhan Manton v. Hariram Mahta, AIR 1963 Pat 335.
24. Ramgowda v. Bhausaheb, AIR 1927 PC 227.
25. Kanhailal v. Brijlal, AIR 1918 PC 70.
26. Lt. Col. Sawai Bhawani Singh v. Maharaj Jagat Singh, 1996 AIHC 4165 (Del).
27. Sohan Lal v. Chhagan Lal, AIR 1957 Raj 355.
28. Somnath Singh v. Ambika Prasad, AIR 1950 All 121.
29. Md. Wali Khan v. Mohiuddin Khan, AIR 1919 PC 47.
30. Sarat v. Gopal, ILR (1892) 20 Cal 296 (PC): disagreeing with Vishnu v. Krishna, ILR (1883) 7 Mad 3 (FB); Kannammal v. Virasami, ILR (1892) 15 Mad 486; Ravji Vinayakrav v. Lakshmibai, ILR 11 Bom 381; Chitko v. Janaki, (1874) 11 BHCR 199.
31. Rajendra v. Jogendra, 14 MIA 67; Rama Krishna v. Tirumaravana, AIR 1932 Mad 198; Umaram Gogoi v. Purak, AIR 1925 Cal 993.
32. Laxman v. Bayabai, AIR 1955 Nag 241; Fullamoni v. Netrahanda Sahu, AIR 1967 Ori 103.
33. Draupadi v. Sambari, AIR 1958 Ori 242.
34. Kumal Sheriff v. Mi Shwe Ywet, (1875) SJLB 49.

There can be no estoppel against law. Therefore when an adoption is not legally valid, no conduct can estop an interested person from challenging the validity of the adoption. Moreover, mere participation in the ceremonies of adoption in the absence of evidence showing consent to such adoption, or acts subsequently to such adoption not leading to the adoption, cannot estop a person from challenging the validity of the adoption.[35] A childless Hindu widow agreed with the plaintiff's father to adopt the plaintiff, stating that her husband had given her authority to adopt. Subsequently she adopted the plaintiff and had his thread-ceremony performed in the adoptive family next day, and administered her husband's property as the minor's guardian for about eighteen months, when she repudiated the adoption and refused to maintain the plaintiff. It was held that the adoption being invalid on the ground that the widow had not as a fact, acted under authority from her husband, she was not estopped from denying the adoption by the fact of her having treated it as effective for the period of eighteen months. In order that an estoppel by conduct may raise the invalid adoption to the level of a valid adoption, there must have been a course of conduct long continued on the part of the adopting family, and the situation of the adoptee in his original family must have become so altered that it would be impossible to restore him to it.[36]

76. ILLATOM ADOPTION

Where neither any document was executed by the illatom son-in-law relinquishing his right in his natural family nor was there any evidence to show that since the year of his marriage he was excluded from enjoyment of the joint family properties and had ceased to be a member of the joint family, the illatom son-in-law was not estopped from claiming his share in the joint family property.[37]

77. MAINTENANCE

Where a compromise was reached between the parties upon an application for enhancement of maintenance under Section 127, Cr.P.C., subsequent application under Section 127, Cr.P.C. in the changed circumstances will not operate as estoppel or waiver.[38] Cohabitation after a compromise decree for maintenance obtained by the wife against the husband, would have no effect on the decree.[39] Where the order of maintenance under Section 125, Cr.P.C. was passed after the commencement of the Muslim Women (Protection of Rights on Divorce) Act, 1986 without obtaining the necessary consent of the husband in writing prefering to be governed by the provisions of S. 125, Cr.P.C., the order will not be binding on the husband and even if he had paid some amount in the first execution petition, he is not estopped from contending that the order was not binding upon him.[40] Where the wife had accepted maintenance under the ex parte foreign judgment in petition filed by the husband which was held to be a nullity, she was not estopped from filing a subsequent petition for divorce.[41]

78. FAMILY ARRANGEMENT

A widow claiming through her husband cannot impeach a settlement made by her husband with other members of the family whereby he released, by necessary implication, the interest which he had in the property.[42] Where an arrangement was entered by the father and his sons to settle a family dispute and even the normal succession was altered, any party to a family arrangement cannot subsequently question the legality thereof.[43] Where under compromise the presumption reversioners purported to give

---

35. Babu Ram v. Kishan Dei, AIR 1963 All 509 relied on in Satya Gupta v. Om Prakash, 2001 AIHC 1276 (para 45) (All); Tirkangauda v. Shivappa, ILR (1943) 19 Bom 706 : AIR 1944 Bom 40; Ramchandra v. Murlidhar, AIR 1938 Bom 20; Permanand v. Laxminarayan, AIR 1955 Mad 129.
36. Parvatibayamma v. Ramakrishna, ILR (1894) 18 Mad 145.
37. Papanna v. Madappa, AIR 1993 Kant 24 (paras 14-17).
38. Joydel Kumar Biswas v. Maduri Biswas, 1994 Cr LJ 3342 (para 11) (Cal).
39. K.L. Veera Venkataratnam v. Kudupudi Sri Krishna Vara Prasad, AIR 1999 AP 226 (paras 6, 7 and 8); holding B. Anusuya v. B. Rajaiah, AIR 1971 AP 296 not a good law in view of Mahua Biswas v. Swagata Biswas, 1998 (4) JT (SC) 252 and dissenting from P. Ammal v. Amavasikan, AIR 1957 Mad 113.
40. Nazimunnisa Begum v. Abdul Mujeeth, 1995 Cr LJ 3156 (para 7) (Mad).
41. Veena Kalia v. Jatinder Nath Kalia, AIR 1996 Del 54 (para 4)
42. Dadabhoy Framji v. Cowasji Dorabji, AIR 1925 PC 306.
43. Chinnathayi v. Kulasekara, AIR 1952 SC 29; Shriniwas v. Chandra Bhaga Bai, AIR 1958 Bom 420; Partha Talukdar v. Mina Hardinge, AIR 1993 Cal 118 (para 27, relying on AIR 1966 SC 323. See also Radhey Shyam Nigam v. Jyoti Shrivastava, 2001 AIHC 3706 (para 19) (MP) : AIR 2001 NOC 116 (MP).

a portion of the suit properties absolutely to the widow in consideration of her giving up her claim in respect of the other properties, they would be estopped from contending that they are entitled to succeed to the properties given to the widow.[44] Parties taking advantage under a family settlement cannot resile on the ground that the settlement was not registered[45] and the party, who has himself gone against the provisions of the family arrangement, cannot take the plea of estoppel to enforce the said provisions strictly against the other party or parties.[46] Where a Hindu widow the next reversioner and the remote reversioners were all parties to a family settlement entered into in order to bring harmony in the family and to avoid disputes and litigation, and the remote reversioners were greatly benefited by the compromise, after the death of the next reversioner, the remote reversioners, who were the heirs when the succession opened, could not be permitted to say that at the time of the settlement, they had no title and could not enter into a compromise with the next reversioner. The principle of estoppel was clearly applicable under the circumstances.[47] In a family settlement by the award of an arbitrator one reversioner gave up his half share in the property in the possession of widow after her death, it was held that it is not a transfer of spes successionis or an agreement to transfer the same and was not hit by Section 6 of the T.P. Act. The reversioner, having taken advantage of the settlement is estopped from claiming the entire property.[48] Where there was a representation in an agreement that the vendor was the owner of the property and there was no evidence to reveal that the property belonged to the joint family of which the vendor was the Karta, it was held that he was estopped from raising a plea of want of title in a suit for specific performance on the ground that the property belonged to the family.[49]

A plea of estoppel can be invoked only in support of or to maintain a family arrangement where the Court finds that the parties should not be allowed to resile from a particular arrangement under which they had taken benefit but where continued enforcement of the family arrangement was wholly impracticable, unnecessary and unjust in the changed circumstances of the case, there was no question of applying the equitable principle of estoppel, especially where the arrangement was only for a limited time or purpose.[50]

The Supreme Court granted relief on the ground of promissory estoppel and fair play to a daughter-in-law who was married persuant to some arrangement between her father and her father-in-law settling some property in her favour.[51]

79. ESTOPPEL BY CONSENT OR COMPROMISE DECREE

Decree passed by a court on compromise. Judgment by consent or compromise operates as an effective estoppel, between the parties as a judgment in a contested case may create an estoppel by conduct.[52] Where an order is passed by the court by the consent of a party on some assumption, the party cannot turn round and say that the very foundation of order was erroneous. The earlier compromise decree operates as an estoppel by judgment.[53] In a suit filed against the order of the Road Transports

---

44. Krishna Beharilal v. Gulabchand, AIR 1971 SC 1041; Sakerlal v. Chunilal, AIR 1953 Sau 146.

45. Kale v. Dy. Director of Consolidation, AIR 1976 SC 807; Thayyullathil Kunhikannan v. Thyyullathil Kalliani, AIR 1990 Ker 226.

46. P.G. Hariharan v. Padaril, AIR 1994 Ker 36 (para 32).

47. Ram Charan v. Girijanandani Devi, AIR 1959 All 473. See also Bakshi Ram v. Brij Lal, AIR 1995 SC 395 (para 4).

48. Mukandilal v. State, AIR 1952 All 212.

49. Chand Rani Mehra v. Om Shankar Mehra, AIR 1987 Del 194.

50. P.G. Hariharan v. Padaril, AIR 1994 Ker 36 (para 31).

51. N.A. Mohammed Kasim v. Sulochana, AIR 1995 SC 1624 (para 6).

52. Subba Rao v. Jagannadha Rao, AIR 1967 SC 591; Garaj Narain v. Babulal, AIR 1975 Pat 58; Sundarabai v. Devaji, AIR 1954 SC 82; Autar Singh v. Sohanlal, AIR 1970 J&K 26 (FB); Baldevdas v. Filmistan Distributors, AIR 1970 SC 406; Indirabai v. B.A. Patel, AIR 1974 AP 303; Chandi Charan v. Nabagopal, AIR 1957 Pat 365; C.H. Kinch v. E.K. Welcott, AIR 1929 PC 289; Sailendra Narayan v. State of Orissa, AIR 1956 SC 346; Narasimham v. Atchayya, AIR 1954 Mad 739; Krishna Subala v. Dhanpati Dutta, AIR 1957 Cal 59; Karunakar v. State of Mysore, AIR 1963 Mys 153; Kailash Chandra v. Kulamani Chakra, AIR 1956 Ori 210; Hindu Rao v. Shorilal, ILR (1962) 2 Punj 108; Chander v. Indraj, ILR (1959) Raj 1264; Bunga Sarkar v. Raghbir Singh, AIR 1951 Punj 257; Kesavan v. Padmanabhan, AIR 1971 Ker 234; Bhanwarlal v. Raja Babu, AIR 1970 Raj 104; Ibrahim v. Dy. Director Consolidation, AIR 1973 All 379; Shivadas Subarao v. Divekar, AIR 1969 Mys 73; Rikhi Ram v. Dhanpat Rai, AIR 1928 PC 190.

53. Sailendra Narayan v. State of Orissa, AIR 1956 SC 346; Kesavan v. Padmanabhan, AIR 1971 Ker 234; Radha Kishan v. Election Tribunal-cum-Sub-Judge, Hissar (FB), AIR 2000 P&H 1 (paras 28 and 29) : 2000 AIHC 34; Veena Mehra v. International Amusements Ltd., 2000 AIHC 1283 (para 8) (Del); Wester Press Pvt. Ltd., Mumbai v. Custodian, AIR 2001 SC 450 (paras 8, 11 and 12); Radha Kishan v. Election Tribunal-cum-Sub-Judge, Hissar (FB), Authority parties came to a compromise and the authority issued orders in terms of the compromise. It was held that the parties had taken benefits under the orders of authority and a writ of certiorari would not be granted.[54] S died leaving a daughter M and subsequently there was dispute between M and B who was S's father's brother's son. B claimed S's entire estate by survivorship which dispute was referred to arbitration and subsequently award was delivered. M was given suit properties as absolute owner. Rest of estate was given to B. Later M died in 1929 survived by two grandsons D and J. B died in 1890 survived by his sons L and P. L died in 1940 leaving two sons K and N. There was suit by K and N against D and J claiming property given to M as next reversioners. M's son having precedeased her, even if the award was invalid, plaintiff's claim was held to be completely answered by plea of estoppel.[55]

Where the plaintiff, who was entitled to a sum of money under a compromise entered into by his mother on his behalf, during his minority, withdrew that money under an order of the court at a time when a suit on his behalf challenging the very compromise was pending, the plaintiff clearly elected to abide the compromise. He thereby precluded himself on the broad principles of estoppel from challenging the compromise subsequently on the ground that it was brought about wrongly and against his interests. Where the judgment-debtor and decree holder had made a pre-decretal agreement against execution of the decree and the judgement-debtor, acting on the agreement, refrained from pressing his contention the decree holder was held to be precluded from challenging the agreement.[56] In a compromise, the parties acknowledged their respective title and rights for the purpose of the compromise, with a view to avoid determination of their true nature. Even if one or both the parties may have been under a mistake in respect of the title as was subsequently discovered, that circumstances will not detract from the finality and binding character of the compromise. When a matter is compromised, it binds the parties and mistake has no place therein.[57] If the parties to a suit agree that they shall not proceed with the suit and consequently the suit was dismissed due to non-appearance of the plaintiff, it cannot be said as a dismissal for default as contemplated under O. IX, R. 8, C.P.C. and the principle of estoppel with bar the defendant from contending so.[58]

Persons taking active part in the matter of framing scheme, are estopped by conduct from questioning the validity of the scheme.[59] Where the petitioner-bidder along with others had handed over the possession of the ferry to the Zila Parishad, he was subsequently estopped from challenging the right of the Zila Parishad to settle the ferry.[60]

Where a person by a consent decree got his suit against vendee for setting aside sale of certain land dismissed on conditions that the vendee gave up his claim for the costs of the suit, he was estopped by his conduct from claiming any right in that land in subsequently proceedings.[61] But, a compromise entered into in a proceeding under Section 145, Cr.P.C., as to possession, would not create any title as to estop either of the parties in a subsequent civil suit in regard to title.[62] In an insolvency petition filed under the Presidency Towns Insolvancy Act by a creditor against a firm and its partners A, B and C, acts of insolvency were proved. By consent of parties, payment of debt in monthly instalments was ordered. In case of default, order of adjudication was deemed to have been passed. Only B and C appealed. It was held that the order cannot be impeached as it was a consent order, and the plea that the court did not find as a fact that insolvency was committed, is not open to B and C who participated in the proceedings.[63] Where a reversioner enjoyed the benefit for a long time under a compromise by the Hindu widow, he is estopped from challenging the compromise.[64] Where a society, already knowing that a party was a

---

AIR 2001 P&H 68 (para 29) : 2001 AIHC 1355: A P. Sarpanchs Association v. Govt of A P (FB), AIR 2001 AP 474 (para 13).

54. M.S.R.T. Copn. v. B.R.M. Service, AIR 1969 SC 329.
55. Dhyan Singh v. Jugal Kishore, AIR 1952 SC 145; Kanhailal v. Brijlal, AIR 1918 PC 70 : 45 IA 118 followed.
56. Usman v. Mammooty, AIR 1961 Ker 179.
57. Subramoniaru v. State, AIR 1954 Tra Co 128.
58. Ramalingam v. Venugopal, 2000 AIHC 2450 (paras 17, 19 and 20) (Mad) . AIR 2000 NOC 56 (Mad).
59. Janaradana v. Cochin Dewaswom Board, AIR 1957 Tra Co. 307.
60. Samsuddin v. State of W.B., 1996 AIHC 930 (Cal).
61. Ibrahim v. Dy. Director, Consolidation, AIR 1973 All 378.
62. Gopidas v. Madho, ILR 45 All 162.
63. Sita Ram Sawhney v. Kundanlal Sahni, ILR (1968) 1 Cal 257.
64. Ekkari Ghosh v. Chittarekha, AIR 1958 Cal 447.

member of another society allowed that party dual membership, the society could not thereafter turn around and deny the benefit of membership to that party.[65]

An estoppel by consent decree can arise only when the question raised in the subsequent suit was present to the minds of the parties and was actually dealt with by the consent decree. In order to effect an estoppel it is also necessary that it should appear on record that the question had been put in issue.[66]

Any judgement or order passed even on consent of parties by a court having no jurisdiction, cannot operate as an estoppel.[67] Consent decree containing terms contrary to law or public policy, unless set aside in proper proceedings, will operate as res judicata or estoppel.[68] Where a compromise was arrived at between the self-styled leaders of Hindu and Muslim Communities of a village in respect of taking out procession on public roads before mosques accompanied with music and it was filed in proceedings under Section 107, Cr.P.C., it is not binding on the Hindu Community, when the compromise was not arrived at in a suit filed in a representative capacity. The law of estoppel does not debar the parties from asserting their right in a civil court.[69] Where in an earlier writ petition the licensee of a corporation filed a compromise which the corporation did not admit and filed its objection resisting the same as a result he abandoned the same and withdrew his writ petition, it was held to be no compromise and he was not bound by the statement in the compromise.[70]

80. CONTRACT AND AGREEMENT

Where the first contract of sale between the parties was held to be not a concluded contract and opportunity was given to the plaintiff by the High Court to amend the plaint and plead that there was a concluded contract at the second meeting between the parties which he refused to do, no relief could be given on the basis of such second agreement.[71] Where a contractor-petitioner realised fees and tolls on vehicles entering a Zila Parishad Territory but he did not remit the part of the amount to the Zila Parishad, it was held that the petitioner was under an obligation to pay it back to Zila Parishad, even if the contract was void. However, the Zila Parishad could not recover the amount due as arrears of land revenue.[72] The bidder, taking part as per procedure adopted, could not challenge the said procedure as being illegal and contrary to the principles of natural justice and fair play.[73] Where all the tenders for contract having been found defective, the tenderers were given opportunity to remove the defects after extending the last date and the petitioner also availed this opportunity, he could not challenge the said act of giving the opportunity.[74] Rate of payment accepted in the contract cannot be subsequently revised after the completion of the job.[75] The Government entered into an agreement to sell land to the respondents who constructed houses on the said land and resided there for a period of almost twenty four years, in the circumstances of case, the Govt. was estopped from serving them with notice that the transactions were in breach of the provisions of the Act, though there was no time bar.[76] Where the seller failed to raise the plea that the agreement to sell was only as a security for the repayment of a loan advanced by the purchaser in an earlier suit filed by the purchaser for permanent injunction restraining her from alienating the suit property, she would be estopped from raising that plea in a suit for specific performance of the agreement of sale.[77] Once a person gives a certificate of final settlement of his contractual claims, it will be rather unfair on his part to go back on his words so as to ask for settlement of some new claims allegedly remaining to settle under the same contract on the plea of being misled in giving such certificate or that he gave such certificate under duress or under some compulsion.[78] A

---

65. S.K. Tandon v. Registrar of Co-operative Societies, 1997 AIHC 378, at pp. 386 and 387 (Del).
66. Gokul Prasad v. Hari Saran Das Mahant, ILR (1947) 22 Luck 270.
67. Ahsan Dar v. Md. Dar, AIR 1963 J&K 15; Bhurey v. Pri Bux, ILR (1973) 1 All 486.
68. Bhima Rama v. Abdul Rahib, AIR 1968 Mys 184.
69. Shaikh Piru Box v. Kalandipati, AIR 1970 SC 1885; reversing Shaik Piru v. Kalandipati, AIR 1964 Ori 18.
70. M.S. Baliga v. Mangalore City Corpn., AIR 1998 Kant 76 (para 24).
71. Ganesh Shet v. C.S.G.K. Setty, AIR 1998 SC 2216 (para 10).
72. Surendra Kumar Rai v. Zila Parishad, Jhansi, AIR 1997 All 387.
73. H.S. Sethi v. Union of India, 1996 AIHC 3369 (para 11) (Del).
74. N.U. Calcutta Construction Co. v. National Aluminium Co. Ltd. AIR 2000 Ori 186 (para 13).
75. Badan Lahkar v. State of Assam, 1996 AIHC 4632 (paras 5 and 6) (Gau).
76. Abdul Hameed K. v. State of Karnataka, 1999 AIHC 693 (paras 5, 7 and 8) (Kant).
77. C.C. Karthiayani Amma v. T.V.G. Namboodiri, 1996 AIHC 5291 (para 5) (Ker).
78. Union of India v. Raj Brothers, AIR 2000 Gau 132 (paras 8 and 13).

person signing an agreement and taking benefit from it, cannot wriggle out of it and demand benefit[79] and where the respondent, alongwith other draftsmen agreed to pay enhanced licence fee and others started to pay also, he was estopped from challenging the rise in licence fee.[80] Also the party cannot invoke the principle of promissory estoppel in case he subsequently dishonours the terms and conditions of the agreement.[81]

Where the contract was not entered in the prescribed manner and form, it was not binding and could not be enforced.[82] In a contract entered into by the Electricity Board, the Board was not bound by the acts of its officer done on certain basis, not mentioned in the terms of the contract.[83]

The principle of promissory estoppel has no application in a case of concluded commercial contract.[84]

81. LANDLORD AND TENANT

Where a notice was sent by a tenant that he would vacate the premises and it was accepted by the landlord, the tenant was estopped from claiming that the notice was defective.[85] The tenant appeared before the tenancy authorities and made a voluntary statement that he was not interested in purchasing the suit property and handed over physical possession of it to the landlady and also alongwith his brother acted as a witness during the execution and registration of the sale-deed in favour of the third party, he could not subsequently challenge the validity of the proceedings.[86] Where the landlord states that he does not require the premises for a limited period and the tenant accepts it, the landlord is estopped from claiming possession within that period.[87] When the tenant did not raise the objection that no decree for eviction could be passed for want of permission of the rent controller for eviction, but raised that objection in execution proceedings, it was held that the tenant would be estopped from raising such objection when he failed to do so when the decree was passed.[88] Estoppel will prevent the landlord from raising objection to the competency of the legal representative of deceased tenant to appeal from the Tribunal's order, whom she herself impleaded as respondent in the pleadings before the Tribunal.[89] Where a landlord took proceedings under the Rent Control Act on the ground that respondent was a tenant it was held that he was estopped in a subsequent civil suit to assert that the respondent was a licensee.[90] The Madras Act 26 of 1948 authorising the Government to take over Estates does not authorise the Government to repudiate a lease created by them, and does not free them from estoppel to which they are subject as lessors.[91] Even if no formal tenancy is created estoppel would arise, if the position accepted is virtually that of a tenant.[92]

Where a lessor, being either ignorant of his rights or uncertain of their extent, by his own act or representation created or induced in the mind of his tenant a mistaken belief that he had a permanent interest in the land and might build thereon, and the tenant, relying upon the act or representation so made, treated his interest as permanent and incurred expense in building which he would not otherwise

---

79. Shitla Prasad Dubey v. State of U.P., AIR 1999 All 260 (para 28) : 1999 AIHC 4168 (All). see also Bhopal Singh v. Chatter Singh, AIR 2000 P&H 34 (para 10).
80. Municipal Council, Pali v. State, AIR 2000 Raj 157 (para 6). See also Kundan Mal v. District Collector, Pali, AIR 2000 Raj 152 (para 8); N.P. Ponnappa v. State of Karnataka, AIR 2000 Kant 384 (para 11); Haryana Co-op Transport S.W. Assocn. v. State of Haryana, AIR 2000 P&H 231 (para 13).
81. Meera Devi v. Varanasi Development Authority, 1999 AIHC 1401 (para 8) (All). See also Meera v. State, 2001 AIHC 2115 (paras 9 and 10) (Raj).
82. B.C. Raju v. Karnataka Housing Board, AIR 1995 Kant 356 (para 12).
83. T.N. Electricity Board v. N. Raju Reddiar, AIR 1996 SC 2025 (para 9). reversing OSA No. 112 of 1987, Dt. 6-9-1995 (Mad).
84. Trident Tubes Ltd. v. Govt. of Bihar, AIR 1995 Pat 50 (para 22).
85. Dipak Kumar Ghosh v. Mirasen, AIR 1987 SC 759.
86. Radhabai Balkrishna Deshpande v. Babu Dhondu Shewale, 2000 AIHC 4219 (Bom).
87. Inder Mohan Lal v. Ramesh Khanna, AIR 1987 SC 1986.
88. Kamlabai v. Mangilal, AIR 1988 SC 375.
89. Banaridas v. Smt. Mewa Devi, ILR 1980-2 Del 925.
90. Ramachandra Sahu v. Pramila Sahu, AIR 1992 Ori 183.
91. Govinda Reddy v. Pattabhi Rama, AIR 1954 Mad 161.
92. India Electric Works & Co. v. B.S. Mantosh, AIR 1956 Cal 148; following Krishna Prosad Lal Singh Deo v. Baraboni Coal Concern Ltd., AIR 1937 PC 251.

have done, it was held that the lessor was estopped from denying the truth of that which it represented.[1] In 1894 the appellant agreed in writing to give the respondent a lease of a plot of land "for the purpose of erecting buildings..... from year to year at an annual rental of Rs. 180", and the respondent took possession. In 1903 the respondent wished to build a pucca house upon the land, and in answer to inquiries the appellant wrote a letter stating that the lease was a permanent lease though the rent was liable to enhancement. Acting upon that letter the respondent built a house; the appellant knew of the building and received a bonus in respect of it. In 1916, the appellant sued to eject the respondent from the land. It was held that, whether or not the letting was a permanent one upon the construction of the agreement, the statement in the letter that it was so was a representation of fact, not an expression of opinion and that the appellant was estopped from denying that the letting was of that character though subject to enhancement of rent.[2] Where the tenant admitted before the Court that there was a lease for a specified period on a monthly rental of the specified sum and the lease was admitted to be a valid lease in his written statement, he could not resile from that position.[3] Where a landlord accepts rent from the successors of the lessee he is estopped from contending that the successor-in-interest of lessee has no interest in land.[4]

Withdrawal by the landlord of rent deposited by the tenant under the Rent Control Act, does not constitute waiver of notice to quit.[5] It is only when the landlord accepts rent with the intention to treat lease as subsisting, the acceptance of rent can be regarded as waiver.[6] Withdrawal by landlord of rent deposited by the tenant beyond due date, has no effect on the question of default by tenant in an eviction petition.[7] The acceptance of rent without objection or grievance by the landlord after the forfeiture of a lease or in the event of failure to perform a statutory obligation by a tenant would amount to waiver.[8]

However where rent is a accepted under protest there is no estoppel.[9]

The tenant is estopped from denying the title of person to whom he is paying rent[10] and once he has taken the plea that he was entitled to possession of the suit land in his own rights, he cannot subsequently take the plea that he was a tenant.[11] Where the tenant had accepted one of the two co-owners initiating proceeding for eviction against him, he was estopped from contending that since the other two co-owners had not joined the proceedings of eviction on the basis of bona fide requirement, it was not maintainable.[12]

Where a tenant surrendered his tenancy right in favour of a registered society without the consent of the landlord and handed over the possession of the premises, mere acceptance of rent tendered by the tenant in the name of the registered society could not constitute legal and valid sub-tenancy in favour of the registered society and the landlord was not estopped from seeking eviction on the ground of unauthorised sub-letting.[13] A tenant would be estopped from claiming anything contrary to what he had agreed to in writing.[14]

The principle of estoppel cannot come in aid of the sub-tenant who was an unauthorised occupant to defeat the claim of the landlord.[15] The mere fact that the landlord was aware of sub-tenancy, is no

---

1. Forbes v. Ralli, (1925) 27 Bom LR 860 : 52 IA 178 : ILR 4 Pat 707; Bansi Singh v. Chankradhar Prashad, ILR (1938) 17 Pat 358.
2. Forbes v. Ralli, ibid; Bahir Das Chakravarti v. Nobin Chunder Pal, ILR (1901) 29 Cal 306. For an example of estoppel by acceptance of rent see Narendra Bahadur Tandon v. Shanker Lal, AIR 1980 SC 575 at 579.
3. Rajendra Pratap Singh v. Rameshwar Prasad, (1998) 7 SCC 602.
4. Narendra Bahadur Tandon v. Shanker Lal, AIR 1980 SC 575; Devassia v. Micheal Joseph, AIR 1990 Ker 261 (acceptance of rent after notice-no waiver.)
5. Bhagat Ram v. Keshab Deo, AIR 1965 Assam 55.
6. Kamaksha Prasad v. Paruatibai, AIR 1960 MP 192; Abdul Karim Bhai v. Abdul Rehman, AIR 1960 MP 16.
7. Kali Kumar v. Makhan Lal, AIR 1969 Assam 66.
8. Sen & Co. v. Mani Mala Sadhu, AIR 1980 Cal 155.
9. Basant Lal v. State of U.P., AIR 1981 SC 170.
10. Rajendra Kumar v. District Judge, Jaunpur, AIR 1996 All 178 (para 11). See also Harivansh Lal Rabra v. Madan Lal Jolly, 1997 AIHC 2068 (para 17) (Del).
11. Voocha Pitchayya v. Gade Venkateswara Rao, 1997 AIHC 1261 (para 9) (AP).
12. Yashwant Prabhakar Kamble v. Prasad Narhari Karanjikar, 1998 AIHC 1388 (para 9) (Bom).
13. Ram Saran v. Pyare Lal, AIR 1996 SC 2361.
14. Gujarat State Road Transport Corporation v. Yusuf Ali Ahmad Ali, 1997 AIHC 2611 (para 12) (Guj).
15. Savitri Devi v. IInd Addl. Dist & Sessions Judge, Deoria, 1998 AIHC 1371 (para 49) (All).

ground to estop the landlord from saying that the sub-tenancy is illegal.[16] Where the tenant had indicated in Form 'C' at the time of allotment that his brother and his wife would be occupying the premises and the Form 'C' was accepted by the Development Board, his tenancy could not be terminated subsequently on the ground of sub-letting and be regularised in favour of the brother of the tenant.[17]

82. ESTOPPEL AND PRE-EMPTION

Where a pre-emptor assured the purchaser that he would not pre-empt, it does not amount to making any representation of any fact, except showing his intention at that time as a fact which cannot be revoked. There is no estoppel unless the relationship between the parties is such that the truth of the representation is a necessary step in the constitution of the action.[18]

Where the vendor informs the pre-emptor about his intention to sell, orally or otherwise, and the pre-emptor refuses to purchase the property, he is disqualified from subsequently maintaining a suit for pre-emption as he is estopped from seeking to enforce his right by virtue of the provisions of Section 115.[19]

There would be no waiver of the right of a person to pre-empt if his consent is not obtained prior to the sales.[20]

83. DECREE HOLDER AND JUDGEMENT-DEBTOR

Where conduct of plaintiff unequivocally showed that he was not willing to accept trial court's decree, the mere fact that he sought the execution of the decree cannot disentitle him to the relief he sought in the suit.[21]

Creditors under a decree who applied for reteable distribution of assets held in an executing court of another decree, cannot challenge that decree on the ground that the court had no territorial jurisdiction to pass that decree.[22] A judgment-debtor is estopped, after sale in which he took part, from contending that sale is liable to be set aside on the ground that the sale was not advertised[23], so also on the ground of non-mention of encumbrance on the property in question in the sale proclamation.[24] A decree holder who induces the judgment-debtor to pay the decretal amount, is estopped from questioning the decree.[25] The decree holder who objected to the sale of the property of judgment-debtor, allowed the sale to proceed and also shared the sale proceeds, is estopped later to contend that the sale was void.[26] Where a judgment-debtor mortgagor agreed, after the preliminary decree, to pay higher rate of interest for extending the time to pay the mortgage debt, he would be estopped from objecting to the agreement in execution.[27] Where the judgment-debtor did not raise the plea that all the claims in separate suits filed regarding the same property should have been consolidated in one suit on service of the sale notice, he was prevented to raise such a contention in appeal. He was estopped also because he had consented to the decrees being passed separately.[28] Where the legal representatives of a judgment-debtor, who expired during the pendency of an appeal, prosecuted the appeal without getting impleaded, they could not raise the point that the judgment in appeal passed after the death of the judgment-debtor was unenforceable in law.[29]

---

16. Babubhai Jugalkishore N. Bhatt v. Jaichand Jayantilal, 1998 AIHC 4271 (paras 15 and 16) (Guj).
17. Dattaram S. Vichare v. Thukaram S. Vichare, AIR 2000 SC 103 (para 9), reversing WP No. 123 of 1989 Dt. 3-12-1990 (Bom).
18. C & D Sugar Co. v. Canadian National Steamships, AIR 1947 PC 40; Govindsa Marotisa v. Ismail, AIR 1950 Nag 22, 29.
19. Gopi Nath v. Nand Kishore, AIR 1952 Ajmer 26; Narayan Das v. Jagan Nath, AIR 1950 MB 85; Bagga Singh v. Chuni Lal, AIR 1952 Punj 255; Abdul Kaseem v. Babulal, 1953 Bhopal 26.
20. Fakira v. Ganpat, AIR 1954 Nag 92.
21. Ramesh Chandra v. Chunilal, AIR 1971 SC 1238.
22. Abdul Jabbar v. Venkata Sastry, AIR 1969 SC 1147.
23. Karnataka Bank v. K. Shamanna, AIR 1972 Mys 321.
24. Tippamma v. Annarao, 1999 AIHC 847 (Kant).
25. Bhrigunath v. Annapurna, AIR 1934 1943 Pat 644.
26. Bonagiri v. Karumuri Venkatanarasimham, AIR 1938 Mad 1004.
27. Subramania v. Corera, 48 MLJ 121 : AIR 1925 Mad 457.
28. Annapurna Industries v. Syndicate Bank, AIR 1993 Kant 279 (para 9).
29. Mina Devi Kedia v. Sita Devi Kedia, 1996 AIHC 5313 (para 4) (Cal).

84. ESTOPPEL AS TO VALUATION OF SUIT OR APPEAL

In respect of a suit which is not required to be valued according to the real or market value, the parties are not precluded from showing, for the purposes of an appeal to the Supreme Court, under Art. 133(1)(a) of the Constitution of India; that the value of the subject-matter in a court of first instance was Rs. 20,000 or over, where the question of valuation had not been decided at an earlier stage and where the lower valuation put upon the plaint had not involved rescourse to a different forum.[30]

If the plaintiff does not correct the valuation of suit in trial court at the proper stage, he is precluded from pleading undervaluation for changing the forum of appeal.[31]

In the absence of any evidence that defence was prejudiced by undervaluation of the suit property by the plaintiff in the plaint, the plaintiff is not estopped from claiming compensation of suit property at market rate on the date of filing suit even if the market rate exceeded valuation given in plaint.[32]

85. ATTESTATION

Attestation proves no more than that the signature of an executing party has been attached to a document in the presence of a witness. It does not involve the witness in any knowledge of the contents of the deed. It can at the best, be used for the purpose of cross-examination, but by itself, it will neither create estoppel nor imply consent.[33] The Privy Council has held that attestation of a deed does not by itself estop the person attesting from denying that he knew of its contents or that he consented to the transaction which it effects and that knowledge of the contents of a deed is not to be inferred from the mere fact of attestation.[34] But an attesting witness can be shown by independent evidence to have fully understood the particular transaction so that his attestation may support the inference that he was a consenting party and might, therefore, be estopped from questioning the effectiveness of the transaction attested by him. It is, however, a question of fact and should be determined with reference to circumstances of the case.[35] If A, with the knowledge that the recital in a sale-deed that the land, thereby conveyed, belongs to B, and is in his (B's) enjoyment as owner, attests the sale-deed executed by B in favour of the plaintiff he is estopped from setting up thereafter his title to the land, even though he (A) might be the certified purchaser of the same in a previous court auction.[36] A person, who to his knowledge is entitled to one-half share in a shop and who allows his co-sharer to mortgage the whole shop, signing the mortgage deed as a witness and identifying the mortgagor and mortgagee at the time of registration, is estopped from bringing a subsequent suit against the mortgagee claimig a declaration of his right to one-half share in the mortgaged property.[37]

Where one brother attested the sale deed executed by another brother in respect of a joint property, without telling the purchaser that the vendor had no full saleable interest, he must be held to have consented to the transaction and is estopped from challenging the transaction.[38] Where the plaintiff attested a document with full knowledge of its contents, he is estopped from challenging the validity of 30. Annapoorna Cotton Mills v. S. Bhaduri, AIR 1958 Cal 187; Zaraton Nessa v. Faizur Rahman, AIR 1955 Assam 126; Kuppanna v. Peruma, AIR 1961 Mad 511; Venkatasubba Iythal v. T. Venkatarama Upadhyaya, ILR 1960 Mys 931; see contra:—Budhi Panigrahi v. Bhagirathi, AIR 1962 Ori 159.

---

31. Koshalya Wanti v. Jeet Singh, AIR 1963 Punj 400.
32. Srinivas v. Narayan, AIR 1971 Mys 174.
33. Nandalal v. Jagat, ILR 44 Cal 186 (PC); Lakhpati v. Rambodh Singh, AIR 1915 All 255; Harikishen v. Kashi, AIR 1914 PC 90; Annadurai v. Mayazaghu, 2001 AIHC 1677 (para 14) (Mad) : AIR 2001 NOC 44 (Mad).
34. Pandurang Krishnaji v. Markandeya Tukaram, ILR (1921) 49 Cal 334 : 24 Bom LR 557 : 49 IA 16 : AIR 1922 PC 20.
35. Pandurang v. Markendeya, AIR 1922 PC 20; Rajammal v. Saba Pathi, AIR 1945 PC 82; Sarkar Barnard & Co v. Alak Manjary, AIR 1925 PC 89; Imam Ali v. Baijnath, ILR 33 Cal 613; Rup Narain v. Gopal, ILR 36 Cal 780; Mahadeva v. Neelamoney, ILR (1896) 20 Mad 269; Lakhpati v. Rambodhu Singh, ILR 37 All 250 : AIR 1915 All 255; Bhagwat Rai v. Gorakh, AIR 1934 Pat 93; K. Govindan v. C. Chellamma, AIR 1959 Ker 237; Raibhan v. Namdeo, AIR 1952 Nag 96; M.C. Singh v. C.V.M. Devi, AIR 1957 Mani 32; Ramgopal v. L. Mohanlal, AIR 1960 Punj 226; Naveli v. Kailan, 1933 Lah 733; Gangadhara Rao v. G. Ganga Rao, AIR 1968 AP 291; Jegannatham v. Kunjitha Patham, AIR 1972 Mad 390; Damodaran v. D. Leelavathi, AIR 1975 Mad 278.
36. Kandasami Pillai v. Nagalinga Pillai, ILR (1912) 36 Mad 564.
37. Shori Lal v. Damodar Das, (1937) 18 Lah 783.
38. Dhannalal v. Bhaiyalal, AIR 1956 MB 16.

the gift made under the document and he cannot dispute the nature of possession of the defendant.[39] Where the mortgage of a house by the wife as its owner is attested by the husband, he is estopped from claiming a share in the house.[40] Where the deed of alienation by a Hindu widow is attested by the next reversioner with full knowledge of contents it is not open to the reversioner to challenge the alienation subsequently.[41]

Mere attestation will not create an estoppel. Unless it is proved that the contents were known to the attestor as well as the circumstances and he did not protest against the recitals.[42]

Where the father attests the sale-deed of the co-parcenary property, his son cannot be estopped from claiming the property as he gets it in his own right by birth and not by succession.[43] A executed a sale deed in favour of C and D; and C and D attested a subsequent sale deed made by A in favour of Y. It was held that mere attestation by C and D did not estop them from claiming title under the former sale deed.[44]

Attestation by reversioner is not proof of necessity where there is no recital about necessity.[45]

86. ADMISSION

Admission made by a party in a previous suit is binding on his successor in interest in the subsequent suit.[46] Where the President of a Municipal Council admitted to have resigned in a subsequent meeting of the Council and demanded a fresh election for the post, such conduct of his disentitled him to claim that he had not resigned as his letter of resignation was not properly addressed.[47] Admission in a writ petition before the Supreme Court that certain lands in possession of the petitioner were used for grazing his cattle, estops the petitioner in subsequent writ petition before the High Court from turning round and saying that admission was not correct.[48]

An avertment not amounting to 'admission' would not attract the principle of estoppel.[49]

87. CONCESSION BY COUNSEL

Where persuant to the instructions of the State Govt., the Advocate General made a statement that a Govt. order stood superseded by subsequent Rules, it was not a concession on pure question of law and it was binding on the Govt. The State Govt. could not contend that the order was still alive. More so when the order dismissing the proceedings on the basis of that concession had become final[50] but where the question to be decided was that of law to be decided in view of the statutory provisions and the earlier decision was made on the basis of the concession made by the counsel, the petitioners would not be estopped from re-agitating the same.[51]

88. CONCESSION BY PARTY

Where the plea of the promotees was conceded by the direct recruits and the matter was decided accordingly but the same was held to be not binding on the Govt. which was the affected party in the matter, more so when the plea was opposed to record.[52]

---

39. Ganghadhara Rao v. G. Ganga Rao, AIR 1968 AP 291.
40. Damodaran v. D. Leelavathi, AIR 1975 Mad 278.
41. Jagannath Singh v. Rupnarain, AIR 1960 Pat 564.
42. Rajhu Naicker v. Anantha Krishna Naicker, (1992) 1 MLJ 163; Entire case law discussed Ramaswamy Gounder v. Anantapadmanabha Iyer, (1971) 1 MLJ 392 distinguished).
43. Santhappan v. Guruswami Gounder, ILR 1965 Mad 287.
44. Gayadhar Mohanty v. Bidy Adhar Behera, ILR 1964 Cut 719.
45. Satyanarayana v. Venkanna, AIR 1933 Mad 637.
46. Modgi Krishna v. Modgi Krishna Bai, AIR 1994 AP 16 (para 11).
47. Prabharani Vishwakarma v. State of M.P., AIR 1999 MP 223 (paras 12 and 13).
48. Gulabbhai v. Collector, Daman, AIR 1970 Goa 59; L.N. Arjundas v. State Bank of India, AIR 1969 Pat 385.
49. Malik Ghulam Ahmed v. J.&K. State Forest Corporation, 1996 AIHC 4426 (para 10) (J&K).
50. Amali English Medium H. School v. Govt. of A.P. (FB), AIR 1993 AP 338 (paras 24-27).
51. Jagannatha Swamy Varu v. Vana Venugopalanaidu, 1996 AIHC 1397 (para 9) (AP), relying on Veeramma v. Appayya, AIR 1957 AP 965. See also The Daily Partap v. R.P.F. Commissioner, Chandigarh, AIR 1999 SC 2015 (paras 8 and 9).
52. Union of India v. G.K. Vaidyanathan, AIR 1996 SC 688 (para 12).

89. ELECTRIC SUPPLY

The policy decision of the government giving incentive/concession viz. exemption from payment of minimum consumption charges for a period of five years for new industries, is not binding on the Electricity Board and the Board was not estopped from imposing minimum consumption charges.[53]

90. ACCOUNTS

Accounts of firms, maintained in the ordinary course of business, can be accepted as correct and binding on the concerned parties who will be estopped from contending otherwise.[54]

91. CARRIER

Where the consignee obtained delivery after inspection and found no damage to goods, subsequent claim by him for short delivery against the carrier was barred.[55]

92. INSURANCE

Where the insurance company returned the premium for the renewal of policy by pay order with covering letter by certificate of posting sent two days prior to the accident without giving any reasons of its non-encashment and refused to pay compensation for want of cover of insurance policy, its act was held to be deliberate and company was held to be liable.[56] The mere delay of a couple of months in settlement of claims under policies will not authorise the National Commission to grant relief of interest under the Consumer Protection Act, particularly when the insurer had not complained of such a delay at the time of acceptance of the insurance amount under the policy.[57]

93. NATIONAL SAVINGS SCHEME

The Post Office made no objection in opening NSS Account by the father on behalf of his son under a General Power of Attorney and the same remained operative for a period of ten years after which the closure of account without interest was held to be arbitrary.[58]

94. INTERPRETATION OF DOCUMENT

There is no estoppel against the interpretation of a document.[59]

95. FRAUD OR MISREPRESENTATION

Where the petitioner had obtained a favourable order from the S.D.M. by fraud or misrepresentation of apparent facts, he could not invoke promissory estoppel. One who seeks equity must do equity.[60]

96. CONFIRMATION OF MINUTES

After the minutes of a meeting of the Corporators has been signed by its President under the Bombay Provincial Municipal Corporation Act, 1949 giving it rebuttable presumptive value, the 53. Hindustan Ferro Alloys Ltd. v. Executive Engineer, U.P.S.E. Board, AIR 1995 All 209 (para 5).

---

54. Vaiyapuri Mudaliar & Sons v. Sri Arunodhaya Textiles, Erode, AIR 1996 Mad 19 (para 30).
55. Scindia Steam Navigation Co. Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1998 Ker 250 (para 8).
56. T. Dinkar* v. P.J. Jagdish, 1998 AIHC 625 (Kant).
57. United India Insurance v. Ajmer Singh Cotton & General Mills, AIR 1999 SC 3027 (para 7).
58. Prashant K. Patel* v. Union of India, AIR 2001 Guj 58 (paras 3 and 4).
59. Hukan Chand* v. Om Chand, 1998 AIHC 1509 (para 8) (P&H).
60. Raj Kumar Soni v. State of U.P., AIR 2000 All 1 (para 29) : 2000 AIHC 856. See also Pravesh Kumar v. Vice-Chancellor, Banaras Hindu University, Varanasi, AIR 2000 All 369 (pp. 375 and 376); K.S. Vijayalakshmi v. Tahsildar, Palakkad*, AIR 2000 Ker 262 (para 18).

Corporators are not estopped from disputing the correctness of the minutes by adducing reliable evidence.[61]

97. PROOF, PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE

Where even though a clear plea of estoppel arises from the recital in an agreement, a party does not rely on this plea and enters into an issue on the facts so that the whole matter becomes open for the decision of the Court, that party cannot rely on the doctrine of estoppel to prevent the opponent from proving that fact.[62]

Plea of waiver cannot be raised for the first time in writ petition.[63]

Estoppel is a mixed question of law and fact. New plea thereon can be permitted in second appeal.[64] A question of estoppel is a mixed question of fact and law, and without definite allegations in the pleadings a party should not be permitted to resort to the plea of estoppel.[65] Estoppel is not a question of fact but an inference of law from proved facts. Hence, it is open to examination by High Court in second appeal.[66]

A person who puts forward the plea of estoppel must prove every legal requirement necessary to be established before he could avail of such a plea.[67] Where all the necessary facts have been pleaded, it is for the court to draw inference of estoppel and not for the party to plead it. The party cannot be penalised for not suggesting through its pleadings a rule of law to the court.[68]

To sustain in argument based on estoppel in second appeal which is a complex legal notion involving representation acting on it and change of position as a consequence, there should from the very nature of things, have been a proper trial on the distinct and specific pleading on the point. In order to support the plea of estoppel the representation must be of an existing fact.[69]

To found a plea of estoppel by conduct, there should be precise pleadings setting up the facts constituting the estoppel.[70]

If the plea of estoppel by acquiescence is not raised in the lower court, it cannot be raised in appeal.[71]

Where the plea of waiver was not raised before the trial court nor the issue to that effect was not framed by court it was held that the appellate court was wrong in entertaining the question of waiver for the first time in appeal before it.[72] In the absence of specific pleading and specific issue, plea of waiver cannot be allowed to be raised in appeal.[73]

Estoppel of tenant and of licensee of person in possession.

S. 116. No tenant of immovable property, or person claiming through such tenant, shall, during the continuance of the tenancy, be permitted to deny that the landlord of such tenant had, at the beginning of the tenancy, a title to such immovable property; and no person who came upon any immovable property by

---

61. Tarvindarsingh Mahendrasingh Dhillon v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 2000 Bom 223 (paras 72-74).
62. Rajendra Ram Doss v. Devendra Doss, AIR 1973 SC 268.
63. Motilal Padampat Sugar Mills v. State of U.P., AIR 1979 SC 621.
64. State of Gujarat v. Lodha Harpal Ghasiram, ILR 1970 Guj 784; See also Ujagar Singh v. Sham Singh, AIR 1979 Punj 12.
65. Associated Publishers v. K. Bashyam, AIR 1961 Mad 114.
66. Ujagar Singh v. Sham Singh, AIR 1979 Punj 12.
67. N.R. Revanna v. T.V. Malappa, AIR 1965 Mys 258.
68. Somanath Singh v. Ambika Prasad, AIR 1950 all 121.
69. Ram Gopal v. L. Mohan Lal, AIR 1960 Punj 226; Anant Lal Goel v. Dr. P.S. Agarwal, AIR 1973 All 89; Bansilal Singh v. Kanshi Ram, AIR 1975 HP 15; Inderjit Singh v. Randhir Singh, AIR 1978 Punj 260; By Ford Pvt. Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1972 Del 59.
70. G.G.. Nambooripad v. I. Kochupilla, AIR 1953 Tra/ Co. 447.
71. M.J.V. Mudaliar v. S.V. Finance Corp., AIR 1971 AP 63.
72. Munshi Lal v. Nazir, ILR (1967) 2 All 49 : 1967 ALJ 371.
73. S. Md. Naim v. Rouraffic & Far Eastern Ltd., AIR 1960 Cal 146.

the license of the person in possession thereof, shall be permitted to deny that such person had a title to such possession at the time when such license was given.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1134
2. Whether tenant should be in possession of property to estop him from denying his landlord's title ... 1135
3. Landlord ... 1136
4. Denial of Title ... 1136
5. Allotee under W.B.Co-operative Societies Act ... 1137
6. Tenant ... 1137
7. Co-sharers of landlord ... 1137
8. Lease—Fraud or mistake ... 1137
9. 'Inmovable property' ... 1138
10. Person claiming through a tenant ... 1138
11. During the continuance of tenancy ... 1138
12. Plea of eviction by paramount title ... 1140
13. Landlord includes representatives ... 1141
14. Binamidar ... 1142
15. Mortgagor and Mortgagee ... 1142
16. At the beginning of the tenancy ... 1143
17. Licensee ... 1144
18. Section 116 not Exhaustive ... 1145

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

The section deals with estoppel of (1) a tenant, and (2) a licensee of the person in possession.It postulates that there is a tenancy still continuing[74] and that it had its beginning at a given date from a given landlord, and provides that neither a tenant nor any one claiming through a tenant shall be heard to deny that the particular landlord had at that date a title to the property.

The estoppel of a tenant is founded upon contract between the tenant and his landlord. It is one of the most noticeable instances of estoppel by contract.

In HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND 4th Ed., Vol. 16, Para 1625, page 1095 it is stated: "the lessor is estopped from repudiating a lease under which possession has been given or a tenancy which he acknowledged and the assignee of the lessor's interest is estopped from denying anything which the lessor is estopped from denying."

The Supreme Court held that during the continuance of tenancy, a tenant will not be allowed to deny the title of the landlord at the beginning of the tenancy; so the tenant cannot acquire by prescription a permanent right of occupancy in derogation of the landlord's title by mere assertion of such a right to the knowledge of the landlord.[75]

A tenant who has been let into possession cannot deny his landlord's title however defective it may be so long as he continues to be a tenant and has not surrendered possession to the landlord.[76] A person

---

74. Sheikh Rashid v. Hussain Baksh, AIR 1943 Nag 265; Dangam Venkat Rajam v. Peddi Gundla Rajia, AIR 1953 Hyd 288.

75. Veerraju v. Venkanna, AIR 1966 SC 629. See also Ram Pasricha v. Jagannath, AIR 1976 SC 2335; Md. Israil v. Union of India, AIR 1976 Cal 189; Ganga Bishnu v. Calcutta Pinjraple Society, AIR 1968 SC 615; K.R. Venkataramana Rao v. B.S.K. Chari, 2000 AIHC 1288 (para 6) (Kant), relying on Ludha Swamy v. Smt. R. Shanthamma, (1993) 1 Kant LJ 331; distinguishing Adyanath Ghatak v. Krishna Prasad Singh, AIR 1949 PC 124.

76. Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, AIR 1915 PC 96; Chandrika v. B.B. & C.I.R. Co., AIR 1935 PC 59; John Agabog Vertannes v. James Golder Robinson, AIR 1927 PC 151; Adhar Mallit v. Kanhoo, AIR 1972 Ori 134; Currimbhoi & Co. Ltd. v. L.A. Creet, AIR 1933 PC 29; Hirabhai (Mst) v. Jiwanlal Palode, AIR 1955 Nag 234; Bhaiganti Bewa v. Himmat, AIR 1917 Cal 498; Muddada Chavanna v. Shri Kodanda Rama Swamyvaru, (1969) 1 SC WR 844; Rampearyalal v. Surajmal, AIR 1959 Pat 500 (adverse possession); Jaikaran Singh v. Sitaram Agarwalla, AIR 1974 Pat 364; Surajmal v. Rampearaylal, AIR 1966 Pat 8; Md. Azim v. Raja Saiyid Saadat Ali, AIR 1931 Oudh 177; Harbans Singh v. Tekamani Devi, AIR 1990 Pat 26; Bilas Kunwar v. Des Raj Ranjit Singh, ILR 37 All 557 : AIR 1915 PC 96; Munnalal v. Balchand, ILR 1961 MP 262; Charubala Basu v. German Gomez, AIR 1934 Cal 499; Gajadhar Lodha v. Khas Mahatadih Colliery Co., AIR 1959 Pat 562; Mujibar Rahaman v. Isub Surati, AIR 1928 Cal 546; Nazroo v. Lalman, AIR 1955 HP 44; Rambilas Mohanlal v. Krishna Bai Motilal, AIR 1973 Bom 168; Rameshwar Lal Sharma v. Sardar Amrik Singh, AIR 1974 Pat 195, (even after notice under Section 106 T.P Act); Balasubramania v. Saraboji Gounder, AIR 1973 Mad 305; Abdul Ghafoor v. Lala Kunj Behari Lal, AIR 1957 All 340; Vidyanath v. Somanath, ILR 1963 Cut 550; (defendant paying rent and accepting a person or landlord) Gangaram v. Municipal Council Nagar Palika, AIR 1992 MP 303; Joginder Singh v. Jogindero, AIR 1996 SC 1654

in an unauthorised possession of a property, converting his possession into that of a tenant by executing a rent note execution of which he subsequently admitted, would be estopped from challenging the title of the landlord and his right to recover rent or arrears of rent.[77] The tenant admitting the title of the landlady and paying her rent throughout cannot subsequently deny her title.[78] But mere payment of rent to a particular person does not create the relationship of landlord and tenant. In the instant case, the tenant was paying rent to a person as an agent of the landlord whose title he denied, principle of estoppel would not be attracted.[79] A lease deed creates landlord-tenant relationship between the parties estopping the tenant to deny the landlord's title.[80]

A tenant is estopped from taking the plea that a landlady's father who executed the lease in his favour was not a duly appointed attoreny of the landlady.[81]

The tenant is liable to be evicted on the ground of denial of the title of the landlord[82] even without consideration of other grounds of eviction.[83]

2. WHETHER TENANT SHOULD BE IN POSSESSION OF PROPERTY TO ESTOP HIM FROM DENYING HIS LANDLORD'S TITLE

The Privy Council has laid down that a tenant is estopped from denying his land lord's title whether he was or was not already in possession of the property at the time when he took his lease[84]. The Bombay[85], the Madras[86] High Courts have held similarly. The decisions of the Calcutta High Court are not unanimous on the point.[87] A tenant who wishes to dispute his landlord's title must not only see that the tenancy has come to an end, but that the possession which was in him as a tenant has been surrendered. A tenant who holds over and remains in possession cannot be allowed to use that possession as a lever to support a case in which he denies the landlord's title.[88] Where a tenant had deliberately and with ulterior motive raised the dispute of title of the landlord during the subsistence of tenancy, he was liable to be evicted.[89]

(para 6). following Veerraju v. Venkanna, (1966) 1 SCR 831 (839) : AIR 1966 SC 629, at p. 633; Charan Singh v. Municipal Committee, Rania, AIR 1996 P&H 207 (para 8); Jamila Khatoon v. Ajodhya Pathak, 1996 AIHC 2928 (para 10) (Gau); Ram Krishna Jaiswal v. District Judge, Allahabad, AIR 1999 All 198 (para 7) : 1999 AIHC 3530 (All); M.D. Lakhanpal National Ltd. v. K.M. Kondappa, 2001 AIHC 2558 (para 11) (Kant); Kelvinator of India Ltd. v. A.F. Bagai, AIR 1994 NOC 297 (Del).

77. Ziauddin v. Bansi Lal, 1996 AIHC 1425 (paras 4 and 5) (Del).
78. Virendra Sharma v. Ramkatoridevi Singhal, 1998 AIHC 3742 (paras 21 and 22) (MP). See also S. Thangappan v. P. Padmavathy, AIR 1999 SC 3584 (paras 12 and 16) : (1999) 7 SCC 474 : 1999 (6) JT 464, relied in S.M. Sultan Rowthar v. Kothandarama Naidu, 2000 AIHC 3063 (paras 25 and 31) (Mad); Narendra Kumar Vaish v. Shyma Agrawal, AIR 2000 MP 253 (para 11); A.H. Sheikh Allauddin v. Hameed Julaika Nachiar, 2000 AIHC 2927 (para 26) (Mad).
79. Rajendra Kumar Mahawar v. Shakuntala Kesarwani, 1999 AIHC 4700 (para 15) (MP).
80. N.A.S. Ansari v. M. Sarangan, 1996 AIHC 1534 (Mad). See also Kartar Singh v. Collector, Patiala, 1996 AIHC 1538 (para 6) (P&H); Sona Devi v. Puran Chand Packaging Industries Pvt. Ltd., 2000 AIHC 3913 (para 10) (Del); Mama Deen v. State of Haryana, 2001 AIHC 602 (paras 9 and 10) (P&H).
81. Rajesh Wadhawa v. Sushma Govil (Dr.), AIR 1989 Del 144.
82. Gillan F Irani v. Parijat Hotels Pvt. Ltd., 2000 AIHC 3415 (paras 13, 14 and 19) (Bom). See also A.H. Sheikh Allauddin v. Hameed Julaika Nachiar, 2000 AIHC 2927 (para 26) (Mad).
83. S.M. Sultan Rowthar v. Kothandavama Naidu, 2000 AIHC 3063 (paras 25 and 31) (Mad).
84. Krishna Prosad Lal Singha Deo v. Baraboni Coal Concern Ltd., (1937) 64 IA 311 : 39 Bom LR 1034 : ILR (1938) 1 Cal 1; Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, (1915) 17 Bom LR 1006 : 42 IA 202 : ILR 37 All 557; Vertannes v. Robinson, (1927) 29 Bom LR 1017 : 54 IA 276, 5 Ran 427; Pashupathinath v. Sankari Prasad Singh Deo, AIR 1957 Cal 128.
85. Vasudev Daji v. Babaji Ranu, (1871) 8 BHCR (ACJ) 175; Shankar v. Jagannath, (1928) 30 Bom LR 741.
86. Venkata Chetty v. Aiyanna Goundan, (1916) 40 Mad 561 (FB); Ganpat Rai v. Multan, ILR (1916) 38 All 226, 228 : AIR 1916 All 121.
87. Lal Mohomed v. Kallanus, ILR (1885) 11 Cal 519 dissented from in Nagindas Sankalchand v. Bapulal Purshottam, ILR (1930) 54 Bom 487 : 32 Bom LR 692 : AIR 1930 Bom 395; Ketu Dass v. Surendra Nath Sinha, (1903) 7 CWN 596.
88. Ekoba v. Dayaram, (1919) 22 Bom LR 82; Patel Kilabhai Lallubhai v. Hargovan Mansukh, ILR (1894) 19 Bom 133; Nadri Begum v. Nasrat Bibi, AIR 1980 All 210, the defendant continued in possession after expiry of licence in the right of his father, estopped from denying the plaintiffs title.
89. Janta Travels Pvt. Ltd. v. Raj Kumar Seth, AIR 1997 Raj 1. See also M. Narayanaswami v. Roya Poulle Amala, 1996 AIHC 2591 (para 14) (Mad).

In the above case[90] it was further held that Section 116 applies against the lessee, assignee of the term, sub-lessee, or licensee; the principle only applies to the title of the landlord who let the tenant in to possession, as distinct from a person claiming to be a reversioner; that Section 116 applies not only when it was shown that the landlord put the tenant into possession but also where a person already in possession as a tenant under some other person becomes a tenant to another; that a "tenant who has occupied but not entered" is a difficult notion to thrust into Section 116 and quite impossible to find therein. So, an equittable principle of estoppel is incorporated in Section 116.[91]

SIR GEORGE RANKIN in the above case (AIR 1937 PC 251) observed: "The section postulates that, there is a tenancy still continuing, that it had its begining at a given date from a given landlord. It provides that neither a tenant nor any one claiming through a tenant shall be heard to deny that a particular landlord had at that date, a title to the property. In the ordinary case of a lease intended as a present demise (which is the case before the Board, in this appeal) the section applies against the lessee, any assignee of the terms and any sub-lessee or licensee. What all such persons are precluded from denying is that the lessor had a title at the date of the lease and there is no exception even for the case where the lease itself discloses the defect of title. The principle does not apply to disentitle a tenant from disputing the derivative title of one who claims to have since become entitled to the reversion....."The tenancy", under the section, does not begin a fresh every time that the interest of the tenanat or of the landlord devolves upon a new individual by succession or assignment."

The expressions "during the continuance of tenancy" makes it clear that estoppel operates only during the continuance of the tenancy. Section 116 does not prevent a tenant from setting up an adverse title at some subsequent date.[92]

Denial (of title) in the suit will not work a forfeiture of which advantage can be taken in that suit, because the forfeiture must have accrued before the suit was instituted.[93]

The denial of title or disclaimer must be clear and not vague to have the effect of forfeiture of one's right as tenant. Where the tenant merely denies the title of the landlord bonafide with the object of seeking information of such title or with the object of having such title established before the court so as to protect himself, it would not attract the charge of disclaimer of title.[94]

3. LANDLORD

The person who is duly authorised to receive rent is landlord and can maintain a suit for eviction.[95]

4. DENIAL OF TITLE

Where the tenant demanded certain documents from the transferee to prove his title to the property, it was held to be not a denial of the title of the landlord/trans-feree.[96] Mere assertion of the tenant that the landlord was co-owner because of lack of knowledge of release deed in his favour, does not amount to denial of his title.[97] Where the pending litigation regarding the title of the lessor on the leased property was decided declaring the title of the lessor on it which became final, the lessee, denying the title of the lessor was estopped from doing so thereafter.[98] Denial of title of the donee is not a bona fide denial.[99]

---

90. Krishna Prasad v. Balaboni Coal Concern Ltd., AIR 1937 PC 251 : 64 IA 311
91. See also Bhagawati Devi v. Surendra Jit Singh, AIR 1969 Pat 257.
92. Banna v. Jetha AIR 1950 Ajmeer 53.
93. Maharaja of Jeypore v. Rukmani Pattamahdevi, AIR 1919 PC followed in Lena Pereira v. Mary Boracho, AIR 1992 Bom 93.
94. Nirvikar Gupta v. Ram Kumar, AIR 1992 MP 115.
95. Prafulla Kumar Saha v. Ranjit Kumar Saha, 1998 AIHC 349 (para 8) (Cal).
96. Gandabhai Ranchhodji Gandhi v. Noshir Ka Vasji Sabowala, AIR 1994 Guj 18.
97. C. Chandramohan v. Sengottaiyan, AIR 2000 SC 568 (paras 18 and 19). See also Fulaben v. Ganeshbhai Punabhai Channawala, 2001 AIHC 307 (paras 9 and 10) (Guj).
98. D.S. Krishna v. Digvijay Industries, Azamabad, 1997 AIHC 3558 (paras 15 and 16) (AP).
99. Jalal & Sons v. Sita Bai, 2001 AIHC 1860 (paras 17, 23 and 31) (AP) : AIR 2001 NOC 41 (AP).

5. ALLOTEE UNDER W.B. CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES ACT

The Calcutta High Court has held that the order of allotment of flat in co-operative society building under West Bengal Co-operative Societies Act, 1983, was sufficient to prove that the allottee in possession had acquired title or interest in relation to the flat.[1]

6. TENANT

Where the defendant contended that along with the lease document there was a sale transaction of contemporaneous date, and so he was not in the position of a tenant, it was held that Section 116 applies only to a person, if he is a tenant, otherwise Section 116 cannot come into play.[2] Where the suit for eviction was brought by the lessor and to whom the rent was being paid, the tenant was estopped from challenging the title of the landlord.[3]

In the ordinary case of a lease intended as a present demise the section applies against the lessee, any assignee of the term and a sub-lessee or licensee.[4]

An agent or a representative of the tenant cannot deny the title of the landlord[5] and also that of the co-owner-landlord.[6]

7. CO-SHARES OF LANDLORD

A tenant can purchase the share of a co-sharer of his landlord, and claim the title to a part of the property. It does not constitute a denial of the title of the landlord on the date of the tenancy.[7]

Where a lessee of a joint family property purchased the shares of two brothers of that family, it was held that the principle of estoppel does not apply.[8]

8. LEASE—FRAUD OR MISTAKE

The tenant may show that no valid tenancy has been created between the landlord and himself, because the lease was executed under a mistake or in consequence of a fraud, mis-representation or coercion practised on him by the landlord.[9]

The defendants entered into possession of plaintiff's property by executing a registered agreement, but no lease was executed. In a suit by the plaintiff to recover rent, the defendants pleaded that without a lease there was no contract of tenancy and that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the rent. It was held that in view of the fact that the defendants entered into and continued in occupation of the land with the plaintiff's consent, they could not be heard to say that they were not liable for rent for use and occupation.[10]

A tenant is not estopped from proving that the relationship of landlord and tenant never subsisted between him and the plaintiff.[11]

---

1. Dunlop India Ltd. v. T.K. Mukhopadhyay, AIR 1998 Cal 59, at pp. 61-64.
2. Rashid v. Hussain, AIR 1943 Nag 265; Chhuttu v. Kayam Khan, 1953 Bhopal 18; relying on Lalchand v. Ram Singh, 1942 Nag LJ 136.
3. P.S. Bedi v. Project & Equipment Corporation of India Ltd., AIR 1994 Del 255 (para 21).
4. Krishna Prosad Lal Singha Deo v. Baraboni Coal Concern Ltd., (1937) 64 IA 311 : 39 Bom LR 1034 : ILR (1938) 1 Cal 1; Ata Muhammad v. Shankar Das, ILR (1925) 6 Lah 319; Yusuf v. Jyotishchandra Banerji, (1932) 59 Cal 739; M Manphul Bai v. Ladhuram, (1952) Raj 58; U.G. Sakhare v. C.G. Gawande, AIR 1960 Bom 238 : 60 Bom LR 1150.
5. P.G. Venkataswamy v. M.Z. Hussain, AIR 1973 Mys. 145. See also Santosh Kumar Jain v. Shambhulal Krishna Kumar Suhane, AIR 1993 MP 46 (paras 3 and 5).
6. Kishan Gopal Agarwalla v. Ramdulari Sah, AIR 1996 Gau 39 (paras 1 and 2).
7. Raman Chandra Dey v. Gour, AIR 1962 Assam 137.
8. Ramaswamy Iyer v. Mangal, ILR (1981) 1 Mad 219.
9. Dangom Vanket Rajam v. Peddi Gundla Rajiah, AIR 1953 Hyd 241; relying on Krishnarao Raghunath v. Ghamon Ghama, AIR 1935 Bom 144; Ramjani v. Bansidhar, AIR 1935 Oudh 385.
10. Sheo Karan Singh v. Maharaja Parbhu Narain Singh, ILR (1909) 31 All 276 (FB).
11. Bhaboot Mal v. Sens Mal, 1973 Raj 56; following Immani Appa Rao v. G. Ramalinga Murthi, AIR 1962 SC 370.

9. 'IMMOVABLE PROPERTY'

A fishery is considered immoveable property for the purposes of this section.[12]

10. PERSON CLAIMING THROUGH A TENANT

It was held that a tenant including a tenant holding over is estopped from denying the landlord's title.[13]

The Supreme Court held that after the determination of tenancy by a notice under Section 106, T.P. Act, the defendant ceased to be a tenant and as such, the infirmity, even if any as contemplated under Section 116 of the Evidence Act, ceases to have any application.[14]

The principle of estoppel under Section 116, is applicable between a tenant and his sub-tenant. Where there is no legal tenancy or sub-tenancy this section has no application, e.g., where the agreement leading to the execution of a sub- lease is void and unenforceable being a contract against the law, it cannot make the sub-tenant a tenant of the tenant. Thus where there is no legal sub-tenancy, there can be no question of continuance of sub-tenancy, and the so called sub-tenant cannot be deemed to be estopped from challenging the status of the so called tenant, so long as the sub-tenant is in possession of the premises in question.[15]

Where a tenant filed a suit for ejectment against his sub-tenant on the ground of expiration of the sub-tenancy, the sub-tenant cannot be allowed to plead that he had obtained a fresh lease directly from the landlord a sub-tenant is estopped from denying the title of the tenant even after the term of the original lease has run out.[16]

The sub-lessee has to establish as a fact that his relationship with his immediate lessor stood disrupted not only de jure but also de facto.[17]

Where a plaitiff challenged the eviction decree against original tenant to which he was a party on the ground of illegality of original tenancy without making any averment that he was a sub-tenant or that he claimed it by adverse possession which he ought to have raised in the prior eviction suit, it was held the plaintiff cannot be permitted to deny title of the owner to the suit property and he was bound by the eviction decree. [18]

11. DURING THE CONTINUANCE OF TENANCY

A tenant is only precluded, during the continuance of the tenancy, from denying that the landlord had 'at the beginning of the tenancy' a title to the property, the subject of the tenancy.

If the term of lease has expired when a suit is brought, the tenant can dispute the title of the landlord. Though the tenancy may be continuing, it is quite open to the tenant to plead and show that his liability to pay the rent has wholly or partially or for a time ceased: such a plea is really one of confession and avoidance (not denial), and has been held available to the tenant.[19]

The principle applies even after the expiration or termination of tenancy and even though the defendant was sued as a trespasser. It is only when possession is surrendered to the landlord who puts him in possession, this principle would not apply.[20]

---

12. Lakshman v. Ramji, (1920) 23 Bom LR 339.
13. Md. Ali Akhtar v. Md. Abbas, AIR 1975 Pat 177; relying on Krishna Prosad v. Baraboni Coal Concern Ltd., AIR 1937 PC 251.
14. Chaterjee v. Sri Kishna Thandon, AIR 1972 SC 2526.
15. Shamsher Bahadur v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 All 395.
16. Vithalbhai Pvt. Ltd. v. Union Bank, AIR 1992 Cal 283 at 285; following AIR 1932 Mad 298 and AIR 1917 Cal 498.
17. In re : Ganesh Trading Co. Pvt. Ltd., AIR 1985 Cal 37.
18. ILR (1974) 2 Del 27 relying on Currimbhoy v. Creet, AIR 1933 PC 29; I&M Ltd v. Pheroze Framroze, AIR 1953 SC 73; Guru Siddaswami v. D.M.D. Jain Sabha, AIR 1953 SC 514.
19. Jogendra Lal Sarkar v. Mohesh Chandra Sadhu, ILR (1928) 55 Cal 1013; Shantabai v. Narayana Rao, ILR (1948) Nag 290 : AIR 1949 Nag 81.
20. Gajadhar v. K.M. Colliery & Co., AIR 1959 Pat 562; Charubala Basu v. German Gomez, AIR 1934 Cal 499; National Jewellery Works v. Diana Printing Works, (1959) 63 Cal WN 192; Rajaram v. Jadunandan, AIR 1925 All

If a tenant attorns to the purchaser of the property thereby recognising him as his landlord the doctrine of estoppel applies, and not otherwise.[21] In the absence of attornment by the tenant, the purchaser of landlord's interest will not have the benefit of Section 116.[22]

A tenant holding over is also a tenant under Section 108(g) of the Transfer of Property Act and is estopped from denying the title of the landlord when the tenancy is subsisting.[23]

The expression "duirng the continuance of tenancy" in Section 116 means "during the continuance of the possession" that was received by or under the tenancy in question. Where the tenancy had long ago ceased to exist and the tenant does not continue in possession on the strength of or in pursuance of the tenancy, he is not debarred from raising the question of competence and validity of the title of the lessor. The rule of estoppel contained in Section 116 will not apply in such a case.[24]

During the tenancy the tenant who was inducted by the landlord, cannot challenge the maintainability of a suit by the landlord by setting up a claim of ownership to demised property.[25]

A leased out the property to B who sublet it to C. A obtained an order of eviction of both B and C on 9-5-69. C was not dispossessed from the property. B sued C for arrears of rent from 1-1-64 to 1-2-71, it was held that the order of eviction obtained by A against B and C amounted to dispossession of the tenants. C was not liable to pay rent after 9-5-69 and he was not estopped from denying the title of his lessor B.[26] A tenant attorned the tenancy in favour of the purchaser G, and paid rent to G. G in his turn sold the property to C. Both C and G issued notices to the tenant to attorn the tenancy in favour of C, but the tenant declined to do so and attacked not only the derivative title of C to the property but also the validity of the sale in favour of G. It was held that the contention of the tenant amounted to a denial of title which he was precluded from doing so.[27]

The bar of estoppel would come into play during the continuance of a tenancy and not when the tenancy is determined.[28] In a case before the Privy Council there was a lease by A to C on a monthly rent. The true owner B obtained a decree for possession against A and obtained symbolic possession in execution of the decree, but C remained in possession with B's permission, but continued to pay rent to A. C later obtained a lease of same property from B. In a subsequent suit by A for possesion, it was held that C is not estopped from disputing A's title as tenancy between A and C had already determined and C was a licensee from B.[29] During the continuance of tenancy, the defendants (tenants) were assessed under the Madras Land Encroachment Act and they paid the rent and accepted a patta from the Government. When the lessor sued for ejectment, the defendants pleaded title in the Government. It was held that the payment of rent to the Government and acceptance of patta amounted to eviction and the original tenancy was determined and so Section 116 did not apply.[30]

A licensee can resist the claim of his licensor on the ground that subsequent to the license he was ousted from possession by a person having a paramount right and that his prior possession no longer subsists and his present possession was derived from the person who outsted him.[31]

Where a tenant did not deny his previous landlord's title, he cannot question the title of the purchaser of the same premises from the previous landlord.[32]

758; (case of a mortgagee in a redemption suit); Badri Dass v. Mahabir Prashad, ILR (1976) 2 Del 716; Kartar Singh v. Bachan Singh, AIR 1972 Punj 408; Sreeramulu v. K. Venkateshwar Rao, AIR 1959 AP 92.

21. Madanlal v. Manakchand, AIR 1971 Raj 55; Gajadhar v. K.M. Colliery & Co., AIR 1959 Pat 562; Kailash Kumar v. Banarasi Das, AIR 1961 J&K 34; Dah Chand v. Dadamchand, AIR 1963 Raj 209; Rameshwar Lal Sharma v. Sardar Armik Singh, AIR 1974 Pat 195; Tej Bhan Madan v. Second Addil., District Judge, AIR 1980 All 320; affirmed in AIR 1988 SC 1413; Jitendra Nath Roy v. Narendra Kumar, AIR 1988 Cal 392; Parameshwarlal v. Dalu Ram, AIR 1957 Ass. 188; Bhagwan Pancha v. Nayan Kunvarba, AIR 1953 Sau 53.
22. Kailash Kumar v. Banarsi Das, AIR 1961 J&K 34.
23. Suraj Mal Marwari v. Rampearaylal Khandelwal, AIR 1966 Pat 8; Hariharpal v. Sudhir Kumar, AIR 1988 Cal 68.
24. Uday Prathap Singh Deo v. Krushna Padhano, AIR 1952 Ori 95; Suraj Bali Ram v. Dhaniram, AIR 1979 Ori 101.
25. Md. Indris Mian v. Doman Sah, AIR 1978 Pat 82.
26. Dorairajan v. Swaminathan, (1978) 2 MLJ 185.
27. Tejbhan Madan v. Second Addil, District Judge, AIR 1988 SC 1413, affirming AIR 1980 All 320.
28. Nanavati Jayantilal v. Shah Ashabhai, (1974) 15 Guj LR 675.
29. Adyanath Ghatak v. Krishna Prasad Singh, AIR 1949 PC 124; reversing Krishna Prasad v. Adyanath Ghatak, AIR 1944 Pat 77.
30. Alaga Pillai v. Ramaswami Thevan, AIR 1926 Mad 187.
31. Bodhan v. Bhundal Singh, AIR 1965 All 309.

HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND (4th Ed., Vol. 16, Para 1626, Page 1097) observed: "A tenant is not estopped either before or after the expiration of the term from showing that his lessor's title has determined. If, however, the tenant came into possession under the lessor, the better opinion would seem to be that he must surrender possession before he disputes the lessor's title or has been evicted by a person having title paramount, but it has been held that unless he claims to be entitled to the premises in his own right, it is not necessary that he should actually go out of possession."

12. PLEA OF EVICTION BY PARAMOUNT TITLE

The rule that a tenant is not permitted to deny the title of the landlord does not extend after the discontinuance of tenancy either by reason of notice to quit served on him or forefeiture of tenancy by denying the title of the landlord or by act of law, or where a tenant is dispossessed by a person having or claiming to have a title paramount. It was held by the Supreme Court that the rule namely, that the tenant would not be permitted to deny the title of the landlord, does not apply when the tenant is under threat of eviction by a person claiming paramount title.[33]

In a suit for eviction by a person having or claiming to have paramount title, it is not necessary for the tenant to give open surrender to the intermediate landlord.[34]

A Dharmakarta leased some temple property to a tenant and during the tenancy another person was declared as a rightful Dharmakarta in a separate suit. When a suit was filed by the original lessor Dharmakarta for rent it was held that the tenancy had not terminated and the tenant was estopped from denying his immediate lessor's title.[35] The tenant must establish that the person who wanted to evict him had a better title than his lessor. If there is nothing to show that the evictor had any better title, nor is there anything to show that the tenant gave as required by Section 108(n), T.P. Act, any notice to the lessor about the claim put forward by the evictor so as to enable him to protect his own interest or that the tenant made any enquiry as to the title of the two rival calimants the applicability of the doctrine of estoppel cannot be challenged by the tenant on the ground of eviction by title paramount.[36] Where a tenant of land in an 'Estate' committed default in payment of rent and the 'Estate' was subsequently abolished and the property vested in the Government, it was held that in view of Section 64 of Madras Estates Abolition Act 26 of 1948, the landlord's ownership by fiction continued for certain limited purposes and hence tenants were estopped from questioning the title of the landlord.[37] When the question of title between the landlord and the municipality in whom the tenant asserted the title, was not decided the tenant is estopped from denying his landlord's title.[38]

It is well-settled that when the true owner evicts the tenant who was let in to possession by another, the tenant could attorn the lease to the true owner and set up title in the true owner in answer to a suit filed for possession by his immediate landlord.[39]

Where a man having no title obtains possession of land under a demise by a man in possession, who assures to give him a title as tenant, he cannot deny his landlord's title; as, for instance, if he takes for twenty one years and he finds the landlord has only five years' title, he cannot after the five years set up

---

32. Hiremath v. Krishnappa, AIR 1978 Kant. 13.
33. Satyanarayana v. P. Jagadish, AIR 1987 SC 2192; Jogendra Lal v. Mahesh, ILR 55 Cal 1013; Dinabandhu v. Makim Sardar, AIR 63 Cal 763; Krishna Prasad Singh v. Adyanath Ghatan, ILR 22 Pat 513 : AIR 1944 Pat 77; Gajadhar v. K.M. Colliery, ILR (1959) Pat 806 : AIR 1959 Pat 562; Guruswami Nadar v. Ranganathan, AIR 1954 Mad 403; Gowresu v. K. Subadramma, AIR 1957 AP 961; Chokkalingam Pillai v. Ganesa Shanmuga Sundaram Pillai, AIR 1951 Mad 284; Omkarmal v. Manak Chand, AIR 1957 Raj 357; Valia Md. v. Savakutti, AIR 1934 Mad 197; Ramrakha Mal v. Munna Lal, AIR 1931 Lah 243; Jagannatha Iyengar v. Mariappan Chettiar, AIR 1958 Mad 518; Lekhraj Diddi v. Sawan Singh, AIR 1971 MP 172.
34. Alaga Pillai v. Ramaswami Thewan, 91 IC 1024; confirming Ramaswamy v. Alaga, 79 IC 881; Subbarova v. Krishnappa, ILR (1888) 12 Mad 422; Bala Kushaba v. Abai, 11 Bom LR 1093; Jogendra Lal v. Mahesh, ILR 55 Cal 1013 : AIR 1929 Cal 22; Ganpat Rai v. Multan, ILR 38 All 226 : AIR 1916 All 121; Khalil Sufi v. Aziz. Bhat, 1960 J&K 132.
35. Devalraju v. Md. Jaffer Saheb, ILR (1913) Mad 53.
36. Gajadhar Lodha v. Khas Mahatadih Colliery, AIR 1959 Pat 562; relying on Indu Bhushan v. Moajam Ali, AIR 1929 Cal 272; and dissenting from: Nourjani Sardar v. Bimla Sundari, AIR 1914 Cal 730.
37. Gauara Panasayya v. Patnaikuni Sitarama Lakshmamma, ILR 1966 An P. 1305.
38. Chinniah Gounder v. Ponnuswami, AIR 1977 Mad 138.
39. Krishna Murthy v. Thambaram Panchaya, (1970) 1 Mad. LJ 444; Guruswami Nadar v. Ranganathan, AIR 1954 Mad 402.

against landlord the jus tertii, though, of course, the real owner can always recover against him. That is a perfectly intelligible doctrine. He took possession under a contract to pay the rent as long as he held possession under the landlord, and to give it up at the end of the term to the landlord, and having taken it in that way he is not allowed to say that the man whose title he admits, and under whose title he took possession, has not a title[40]. This is estoppel by contract. The estoppel arises, not by reason of some fact agreed or assumed to be true, but as the legal effect of carrying the contract into execution, of the tenant taking possession of the property from the hand of the lessor.[41]

The expression "a person in possession" within the meaning of the section need not be a full owner; he may be a mortgagee, lessee, or any other person having right to or is in actual possession; however defective the title of such a person or even the landlord may be at the time of the creation of the tenancy, the person inducted under the terms of the contract cannot be permitted to rely on that defect, to his advantage or to perpetuate his possession or to act in a way detrimental to the landlord's right. Even assuming that a third party has title to any extent in the suit property, where the contract is one entered into between the plaintiff and the defendant and actual possession was given by the plaintiff to the defendant in his own right, the plaintiff and not the third party must be regarded as the landlord of the defenant for the purpose of Section 116. The protection given to the landlord under this section does not come to an end by reason of his giving a registered notice to quit. The bar of estoppel under this section continues until the tenant actually goes out of occupation by handing over possession to his landlord.[42]

In a case the mortgagee leased the property to a third person. When the lessee was in possession the lease was attorned to a Zamindar; after redemption the mortgagor claimed the property, it was held that the lessee was estopped from denying the mortgagor's title even after the attornment because there was no change in the nature of his possession.[43]

The doctrine has no application to the same parties, even while the tenancy exists, when the question of title arises between them not in the relationship of landlord and tenant, but of vendor and purchaser.[44]

13. LANDLORD INCLUDES REPRESENTATIVES

It is not permissible for a tenant to plead defective title of his landlord from whom the plaintiff derived title. He is also estopped from pleading defective title of the plaintiff.[45]

A widow conveyed some land to R who leased it to V. one of the four sons of the widow. R filed a suit against the widow and all the four sons of the widow for ejectment. The Privy Council held that the widow could only convey her 1/3 interest in the property; that so far as V is concerned, he being tenant of R, is estopped from questioning the title of R; accordingly a decree for ejectment was passed against the widow and V.[46]

On the terms of Section 116 as well as on general principles of estoppel, the party is estopped from challenging the title of the transferee to whom he attorned by paying rent after he took the transfer from his lessor, unless there is fraud or mis- representation by the plaintiff as regards his own title so as to induce the party to attorn to him.[47]

---

40. Per JESSEL, M.R., In re : Stringer's Estate, Shaw v. Jones-Ford, (1877) 6 Ch D 1, 9; Vertannes v. Robinson, (1927) 29 Bom LR 1017 : 54 IA 276 : ILR 5 Ran 427; Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, (1915) 17 Bom LR 1006 : 42 IA 202 : ILR 37 All 557.
41. Bamandas Bhattacharjee v. Nilmadhab Sahu, (1916) 44 Cal 771, 777.
42. Bokka Sreeramulu v. K. Venkateshwar Rao, AIR 1959 AP 92; relying on Venkatanarasimha Charvulu v. Gangaraju, AIR 1941 Mad 607; District Board Tippera v. Sarafat Ali, AIR 1941 Cal 408; and distinguishing Muthuswamy Aiyer v. Solai Kanan, AIR 1915 Mad 48.
43. Gurunaidu v. Venkat Raju, AIR 1968 Mad 85; Motilal Bhatia v. Yusuf Ali, 1972 MPLJ 187; Duryodhan Nayak v. Keonjhar Municipality, ILR 1973 Cut 772.
44. Md. Hussain Sahib v. Abdul Gafoor, AIR 1945 Mad 321 : ILR (1946) Mad 44; Nesbitt v. Mable Thorpe UDC, AIR (1917) 2 KB 568; Guruswami v. Ranganathan, AIR 1954 Mad 402.
45. Subash Chandra v. Md. Sharif, AIR 1990 SC 636.
46. Vertannes v. Robinson, AIR 1930 PC 224.
47. Gajadhar Lodha v. Khas Mahatadih Colliery Company, AIR 1959 Pat 562; relying on John Nadjarain v. E.F. Trist, AIR 1945 Bom 399; and Krishna Prosad Lal v. Baraboni Coal Concern Ltd., AIR 1937 PC 251; Manphul Bai v. Ladhuram, AIR 1952 Raj 115; Sudhir Chandra Guha v. Jogesh Chandra Das, AIR 1970 Assam 102; Syed Anwar Ahmad v. Asst. Custodian General Evacuee Property U.P., ILR (1972) 2 All 641; (title devolved by virtue of a decree).

The defendant is estopped from challenging the title of the purchaser from his landlord.[48]

However, where the tenant paid rent to a person claiming to be landlord on the strength of the title derived from the original landlord, it was held that it is open to the tenant to show that such payment was made in ignorance of the correct position in law and in fact the person claiming title has not derived any title.[49]

By mere purchase of landlord's interest the purchaser does not ipso facto become a landlord entitled to the benefit under Section 116. The relationship of landlord and tenant will have to be established between the purchaser and the tenant before calling in aid Section 116. If the tenant attorns to the purchaser, then Section 116 would come into play.[50]

14. BENAMIDAR

The Madras High Court has held that where a lease is executed by a tenant in favour of a benamidar, the real owner and not the benamidar is regarded as the landlord whose title the tenant is estopped from denying under this section. In a suit by such benamidar for rent, the tenant can deny his right to sue on the ground that he is not the person entitled. A benamidar has no right to sue unless he can show a legal right to sue under the general law.[51]

The Madras High Court has held that there is a distinction between a case where the contract was entered into by the real owner but the lease was taken in the name of his benamidar and the case where a benamidar who was in possession grants a lease without disclosing his benami character. In the former case the tenant's estoppel may operate in favour of the real lessor and not the benamidar, but in the latter case it would operate against the benamidar and not the real owner; the benamidar must be regarded as landlord for the purpose of Section 116.[52] Where the lease was in favour of the benamidar but the rent was paid to the real owner. It was held that as it was found that the agreement entered into was at the instance of or on behalf of the real owner the tenant was discharged from liability to pay the rent to the benamidar.[53] The Calcutta High Court is of the opinion that a tenant is estopped from raising the question that his lessor is a benamidar of some one to whom he has paid rent.[54]

15. MORTGAGOR AND MORTGAGEE

As between a mortgagor and his mortgagee neither can deny the title of the other for the purposes of the mortgage. A mortgagor canot derogate from his grant so as to defeat his mortgagee's title, nor can the mortgagee deny the title of his mortgagor to mortgage the property.[55] The rule of estoppel between the mortgagor and the mortgagee cannot be invoked in a case where the suit is not based on the mortgage, but is one in repudiation of the mortgage[56]. Where the object of a mortgage is to defraud a third person and the mortgagee is cognisant of and indeed a party to that intended fraud, the mortgagor is not estopped from pleading and proving against his mortgagee seeking to enforce the mortgage that it was a sham transaction, a device to defeat a possible attachment of the property by a creditor[57]. A mortgagor of immoveable property is not estopped from pleading, or taking advantage of, the invalidity

---

48. Upendra Nath v. Sathya Charan, AIR 1961 Cal 151; relying on Md. Emartulla Sircar v. Md. Didar Bux, AIR 1920 Cal 48; N.B. Gurung v. Anil Krishna, AIR 1957 Mani 25.
49. Gobinda Bhusan Roy v. Jnan Chandra Mukherjee, ILR (1959) 1 Cal 533; Mirkhan v. Kutub Ali, 1979 MP LJ 155 (DB); Pritam Singh v. Parmeshwari Devi, 1974 Raj LR 257.
50. Kailash Kumar v. Banarasi Das, AIR 1961 J&K 34.
51. Kuppu Konan v. Thirugnana Sammandam Pillai, ILR (1908) 31 Mad 461; Bogar v. Karam Singh, (1906) PR No. 141 of 1906 (Civil).
52. Venkata Narasimha Charyulu v. Gangaraju, AIR 1941 Mad 607; distinguishing Kuppu Koman v. Thirugnan, ILR (1908) 31 Mad 461.
53. Muttuswamy Aiyar v. Solai Kanan, AIR 1915 Mad 48.
54. Dina Bandhu Gan v. Hakim Sardar, ILR (1935) 63 Cal 763; See also Prabhat Chandra v. Bijoychand, ILR 50 Cal 572; Haripada Bhowmick v. Kishna Chandra, (1960) 64 Cal WN 199; See also Hirabai v. Jiwanlal, AIR 1955 Nag 234; Raj Krishna v. Barabani Coal Concern, AIR 1935 Cal 368.
55. Hillava Sobhava v. Narayanappa Timmayya, (1911) 13 Bom LR 1200 : ILR 36 Bom 185; Appu Gounder v. Munusami Kone, AIR 1962 Mad 395; Shriram v. Thakur Dhan Bahadur Singh, AIR 1965 All 223; Setty C.K. v. Abdul Khadar, AIR 1956 Mys 14.
56. Rajana (Mst) v. Musahib Ali, ILR (1937) 13 Luck 178.
57. Arunachalam v. Rangaswami, ILR (1935) 59 Mad 289.

of his mortgage deed on the ground that, by the inclusion of a fictitious property in the document and getting it registered in an office where otherwise it could not have been registered, a fraud on the registration law was committed in which he participated.[58]

Principles of estoppel do not prevent a mortgagee from proving that subsequent to the mortgage the mortgagor lost his title to the property. But a mortgagee cannot, by repudiation of the mortgage, convert his possession under the mortgage into one adverse to the mortgagor. During the period available to the mortgagor for redemption, the possession of the mortgagee will always be attributed to the mortgage despite any assertion by him of a claim hostile to the mortgagor.[59]

Where the plaintiffs/co-mortgagees induced mortgagor to make payment to them without obtaining the consent of other co-mortgagees, the plaintiffs are not estopped from pleading that redemption was invalid.[60] If the title of the mortgagee in possession has determined (for instance, where there is an eviction by a title paramount), the rule of estoppel does not apply and the mortgagee can show that the title under which he entered into possession has determined in fact and in law.[61]

When a suit for redemption was pending, the land vested in the State under the M.P. Abolition of Proprietary Rights Act 1 of 1951. It was held that the mortgagee cannot be allowed to plead jus tertii and plead that the plaintiff had lost his proprietary rights in the suit land, and the right of the plaintiff to possession was not barred under that act. [62]

16. AT THE BEGINNING OF THE TENANCY

This section only provides that a tenant cannot be permitted to deny that the landlord at the beginning of the tenancy had a title to the property. The section does not disentitle a tenant to dispute the derivative title of one who claims, since the beginning of the tenancy, to have become entitled to the reversion. In that sense the principle only applies to the title of the landlord who "let the tenant in" as distinct from any other person claiming to be reversioner[63]. The tenancy under this section does not begin afresh every time the interest of the tenant or of the landlord devolves upon a new individual by succession or assignment.[64]

The section is no bar to a tenant showing that his landlord had not title at a date previous to the commencement of the tenancy. The words of the section leave it open to the tenant to show that his landlord's title has subsequently expired.[65]

The rule of estoppel contempalted by Section 116 is confined to the time when the tenancy commenced. This rule is subject to an important qualification, namely; a tenant is not estopped either before or after the expiration of the lease from contending that the landlord's title came to an end by reason of a transfer or was lost or defeated by title paramount or by operation of law.[66]

---

58. Ramnandan Prasad Narayan Singh v. Chandradip Narain Singh, ILR (1940) 19 Pat 578.
59. Bodhan v. Bhundal Singh, AIR 1965 All 309.
60. Ambe Lal v. Phina, AIR 1974 HP 11.
61. Nakchedi Bhagat v. Nakchedi Misr, ILR 18 All 329.
62. Bhudilal Deviprasad v. Jagannath Das, AIR 1963 MP 344; relying on Chhote Khan v. Md. Obedulla, AIR 1953 Nag 361; Gangayya v. V. Satyanarayana, AIR 1925 Mad 1021.
63. Krishna Prosad Lal Singha Deo v. Baraboni Coal Concern, (1937) 64 IA 311 : 39 Bom LR 1034 : (1938) 1 Cal 1; Pushpa Sharma v. Gopal Lal, 1986 Raj 187, the tenant led evidence and proved the title of a third person. See also Aras Khan v. Ali Mian, AIR 1985 Pat 126, where in a suit for ejectment the plaintiff was not able to establish relationship of landlord and tenant, but did establish his ownership. There was no reason to deny him the equitable relief of recovery of possession.
64. Krishna Prosad Lal Singha Deo v. Baraboni Coal Concern, (1937) 64 IA 311 : 39 Bom LR 1034 : (1938) 1 Cal 1.
65. Bala v. Abai, (1909) 11 Bom LR 1093; Devidas v. Shamal, (1919) 22 Bom LR 149; Ata Muhammad v. Shankar Das, ILR (1925) 6 Lah 319; Dina Bandhu Gan v. Hakim Sardar, ILR (1935) 63 Cal 763; Krishna Prosad Lal Singha Deo v. Baraboni Coal Concern, (1937) 64 IA 311 : 39 Bom LR 1034 : ILR (1938) 1 Cal 1; Khalil Sufi v Aziz Bhat, 1960 J&K 132; Munnalal v. Balchand, ILR 1961 MP 262; Guruswami Nadar v. Ranganathan, AIR 1954 Mad 402; Ibotam Singh v. Khumbongmyum Krishna Singh, AIR 1964 Manipur 33; Hanumanthaiya v. Thavakalsan, AIR 1950 Mys 9; Kartar Singh v. Prem Singh Jaggi, (1963) 65 Punj LR 595; Velayudhan Pillai v. Ouseph, AIR 1953 Tra/Co 574.
66. India Electric Works Ltd v. B S. Mantosh, AIR 1956 Cal 148; Jaikaran v. Sitharam Agarwalla, AIR 1974 Pat 364; Raghvendra v. Maruhu, AIR 1971 MP 142 (Vested in Government by an act); Sugga Bai v. (Smt.) Hiralal, AIR 1969 MP 32; Mahendra Nath v. M, AIR 1948 Cal 141; Ganpat Rai v. Multan, ILR 38 All 226 : AIR 1916 All 121; Subbaraya v. Krishnappa, ILR (1888) 12 Mad 422; Annamalai Chettiyar v. Molaiyan, AIR 1970 Mad 396; Hamid

Where a panchayat leased out land belonging to the Government under the specific authority given to it by the Government for a specified period, the panchayat have no right over the land or claim arrears of rent from the tenants after the expiry of the authority given to it by the Government. The Government as a true owner can evict the tenants. So in the suits filed by the panchayat for collection of arrears of rent, it was held that the tenants will not be estopped from contending that the title was with the Government.[67]

In asuit for eviction by the landlord who put the tenant in possession, though the tenant cannot plead that the landlord had no title to the property when he granted lease, and that he had acquired the property by purchasing a share from the other co-sharers of the landlord or to show that his interest is adverse to the landlord. He can show that the title of the landlord had ceased to exist subsequent to the demise.[68]

Principle of estoppel does not operate where there is an extinction of the title of the landlord subsequent to the creation of tenancy by him in favour of the tenant.[69]

17. LICENSEE

The principle applies to a case of a person coming into possession with permission as licensee.[70]

Where it is proved that the occupation by a person of immoveable property is by permission of another, the occupier is estopped from denying that other's title[71] "There is no distinction between the case of a tenant and that of a common lincensee. The licensee, by asking permission, admits that there is a title in the licensor. The law would imply a tenancy under such circumstances.[72] Where defendant No. 1 came into possession of certain coal mining lands as a licensee of the plaintiff, and subsequently defendant No. 2, as the assignee of, and claiming through, defendant No. 1, entered into possession thereof, it was held that the possession of the lands by both the defendants must be attributed to the possession given to defendant No. 1 by the plaintiff and they were both barred by this section from questioning the plaintiff's title to those lands until they had surrendered possession thereof again to him.[73]

A licensee can resist licensor's claim to possession on the plea of eviction by paramount title holder.[74]

In the case of evacuee property, a lessee allowed a licensee in the property. Later another person created a lease in favour of the licensee, after that person was restored to possession of the property. It was held that by the extension of the principle of estoppel to the licensee the former lessor is entitled to obtain possession from his licensee as the licensee cannot deny title of his immediate lessor.[75]

Ahed v. Gubamani Behera, ILR 1970 Cut 49; Dahchand v. Dadamchand, AIR 1963 Raj 209; Luckman Chaplain v. Peareylal, AIR 1939 All 670; Krishna Prosad v. Baraboni Coal Concern Ltd., AIR 1937 PC 251; Mohindra Nath v. Mohindra Nath, AIR 1943 Cal 305; Guruswami v. Ranganathan, AIR 1954 Mad 402; Abdulla v. Moidin Kutty, AIR 1937 Mad 865 was dissented in Madanlal v. Mnakchand, AIR 1971 Raj 55; Rajeswar Prasad v. Sith Ram Marwari, AIR 1977 Pat 247; Uday Pratap Singh Deo v. Krushna Padhano, AIR 1952 Ori 95; Pritam Singh v. Parmeshwari Devi, AIR 1974 Rajdhani LR 257; Municipal Board, Etawah v. Ramsri, AIR 1931 All 670; Krupasinghu Routra v. Purna Chandra Misra, AIR 1973 Ori 44.

67. Krishna Murthy v. Thambaram Municipality, (1970) 1 MLJ (Mad) 444.

68. Hirabal v. Jivanlal, AIR 1955 Nag 234; Krishnaswamy v. Jayalakshmi, AIR 1931 Mad 300; Krishna Prasad Singh v. Adyanath Ghatak, AIR 1944 Pat 77; Mujibar Rahaman v. Ius Suruti, AIR 1928 Cal 546; Ganpat Rai v. Multan, ILR 38 All 226 : AIR 1916 All 121. Note:—1944 Pat 77 was reversed in Adayanath Ghatak Krishnaprasad Singh, AIR 1949 PC 124.

69. Banarsidas v. Sitaram Bagaria, ILR 1976 Cut 159.

70. U G. Sakhara v. C G. Gawande, AIR 1960 Bom 238; B K. Ghosh v. R.K. Joysurendra Singh, AIR 1959 Manipur 27; Balram Chunnilal v. Durgalal Shiv Narayan, AIR 1968 MP 81; Dwijendra Mohan Lahiri v. Rajendranath, AIR 1971 Assam 143; Ram Prasad Pandey v. Jagmohan Lal Shukla, AIR 1977 All 458; Zila Parishad v. Ram Bharosey, 1977 All LJ 412; Nadri Begum v. Nasrat Bibi, 1980 All 210 (Licensee's son).

71. See Mah Hli v. Maung San Dun, (1892) PJLB 4.

72. Per COLERIDGE J., in Doe Dem Johnson v. Baytup, (1835) 3 Ad & El 188, 192.

73. Currimbhoy & Co. Ltd v. L.A. Creet, (1932) 35 Bom LR 223 : 60 IA 297 : ILR 60 Cal 980 : AIR 1933 PC 29.

74. Bodhan v. Bhundal Singh, AIR 1965 All 309.

75. Nihal Chand v. Natha Singh, (1962) 64 Punj LR 680; Sajed Mohd Raza Khan v. Naubat, 1952 All LJ (Rev) 329. Punnamma v. Venkata Subba Rao, AIR 1953 Mad 456; Dwijendra Mohan Lahiri (Dr.) v. Rajendra Nath, AIR 1971

18. SECTION 116 NOT EXHAUSTIVE

Even before the Act came into force, the Bombay High Court recognised an estoppel of this kind[76] After the Privy Council in Kumar Raj Krishna Prosad Lal Singha Deo v. Baraboni Coal Concern Ltd[77] declared that the section does not deal with all kinds of estoppel which might arise between the landlord and tenant. The estoppel under this section is wide enough to cover the case of a guarantee who occupies and enjoys under a grant disputing the guarantor's title. Even a mere attornment creates an estoppel against the tenant but that estoppel is not the same as is given statutory effect by this section. There are other kinds of estoppel between tenant and landlord which fall outside the scope of the section. Such an estoppel does not prevent the tenant from showing that he attorned in ignorance of the fact that the landlord has no title. There may be a situation where a lessee or a licensee is estopped from questioning the title of the lessor or licensor such as where a purchaser of a tenanted premises was attorned as landlord by the tenant and rent was paid without any demur whatsoever. The tenant cannot deny the relationship with such landlord.[78]

Estoppel of acceptor of bill of exchange, bailee or licensee.

S. 117. No acceptor of a bill of exchange shall be permitted to deny that the drawer had authority to draw such bill or to endorse it; nor shall any bailee or licensee be permitted to deny that his bailor or licensor had, at the time when the bailment or licence commenced, authority to make such bailment or grant such licence.

Explanation (1).*—The acceptor of a bill of exchange may deny that the bill was really drawn by the person by whom it purports to have been drawn.

Explanation (2).*—If a bailee delivers the goods bailed to a person other than the bailor, he may prove that such person had a right to them as against the bailor.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1145
2. Bill of Exchange ... 1146
3. Forged Endorsement ... 1146
4. Bailee or Licensee ... 1146

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section deals with further instances of estoppel by agreement. Sections 116 and 117 are however not exhaustive of the doctrine of estoppel by agreement[79]. Agents for instance are not ordinarily permitted to set up adverse title of a third person to defeat the rights of their principals.

This section deals with the estoppel of an acceptor of bill of exchange, bailee or licensee and states that they are not permitted to deny—that the drawer of the bill had no authority to draw or endorse it. Similarly the bailee is not permitted to deny the authority of a bailor or licensor. But this principle is subject to the two qualifications which are mentioned in explanation 1 and 2.

STEPHEN in his Digest (Art. 105) regarding the qualifications of the general rule states "provided that any such bailee, agent or licensee may show that he was compelled to deliver up any such goods to some person who had a right to them, as against his bailor, principal or licensor, or that his bailor, principal or licensor wrongfully and without notice to the bailee, agent or licensee obtained the goods from a third person who has claimed them from such bailee, agent or licensee."

Assam 143; Ramprasad Pandey v. Jagmohanlal Shukla, AIR 1977 All 458; Zila Parishad v. Ram Bharosey, 1977 All LJ 412; U.G. Sakhare v. C.G. Gawandi, AIR 1960 Bom 238.

76. Vasudev Daji v. Babaji Ranu, (1871) 8 Bom HCAC 175.
77. (1937) 64 IA 33 : AIR 1937 PC 251.
78. Kuldeep Harbans Singh v. Gojer Brothers (P.) Ltd., 1998 AIHC 144 (paras 50 and 51) (Cal).
79. Rup Chand Ghosh v. Sarveswar Chandra, ILR (1906) 33 Cal 1915.

This section has to be read along with Sections 41, 42 and 120, 121 of the Negotiable Instruments Act 26 of 1881 and also Chapter 9 (Section 148 to 181) of the Indian Contract Act 9 of 1872 and Section 26 of the Paper Currency Act.

2. BILL OF EXCHANGE

Under this section an acceptor of a bill of exchange cannot deny that the drawer had authority to draw such bill or to endorse it. But he may deny that the bill was really drawn by the person by whom it purports to have been drawn (expln. 1).

Section 41 of the Negotiable Instruments Act says that an acceptor is bound by a forged endorsement, even if he knew or had reason to believe the endorsement as forged. Section 42, N.I. Act says that an acceptor is liable though the bill is drawn in a fictitious name. Section 120 of that Act says that maker of a promissory note, a drawer of a bill of exchange, or cheque and acceptor of a bill of exchange for the honour of the drawer are, in a suit by a holder in due course, estopped from denying the validity of the instrument as originally made or drawn.

Under Section 121 of that Act a maker of a promissory note and an acceptor of a bill of exchange payable to, or to the order of, a specified person are, in a suit thereon by the holder in due course are estopped from denying the payee's capacity at the date of the note or bill to endorse the same. Section 122 of the Act says that an endorsee of a negotiable instrument is, in a suit thereon by a subsequent holder, estopped from denying the signature or capacity to contract of any prior party to the instrument. Section 120 of the Act is subject to the general rule contained in Section 26 of Paper Currency Act which states that a hundi made payable to bearer on demand is invalid and an endorser of such a hundi is not estopped as against the endorsee from setting up its invalidity. This provision in Section 26 of the Paper Currency Act is based on the principle that there is no estoppel against a statute.

See in Alagappa Chetty v. Alagappa Chetty[80] where it was held that the observation of SHESHAGIRI IYER J., in Arunachalam v. Narayana, 42 Madras 470, that an endorser of a Negotiable Instrument is estopped as against the endorsee from setting up its invalidity, is obiter. 44 Mad 187 following Chidambaram v. Avaswami, 40 Madras 585.

The Privy Council held that it is an established rule that in an action on a bill of exchange or a promissory note against a person whose name properly appears as a party to the instrument, it is not open either by way of claim or defence to say that the signatory was in reality acting for an undisclosed principal; that there is nothing in secs. 24, 25, 26 of the Negotiable Instruments Act to support the contention to the contrary.[81]

Before applying the provision of Section 120, Negotiable Instrument Act, there must be a properly stamped bill of exchange.[82]

It was held that in a suit by the endorsee of a pronote, the maker or the defendant debtor is not barred by Section 120 N.I. Act from raising a defence under Madras Agriculturists Debt Relief Act for the purpose of reducing the rate of interest as per the Act.[83]

3. FORGED ENDORSEMENT

No person can claim a title to a negotiable instrument through a forged endorsement. Such endorsement is a nullity and must be taken as if no such endorsement was on the instrument.[84]

4. BAILEE OR LICENSEE

The bailee and the licensee are placed in the same position as a tenant in the preceding section. The bailee is protected by the bailor's title so long as any better title is not advanced. A bailee entrusted with the care of goods is estopped from claiming that the bailor had no title at the time of bailment. He cannot

---

80. ILR 44 Mad 187 : AIR 1921 Mad 382.

81. Sadasukh Janakidas v. Sir Kishan Pershad, ILR 46 Cal 663 : AIR 1918 PC 146.

82. Chotey Lal v. Girray, AIR 1926 All 359.

83. Karuppa v. Narayana Swamy and Company, (1941) 2 MLJ 808; Anandam v. Muthukumaraswami, (1939) 2 MLJ 658.

84. Banku Behari Sikdar v. Secretary of State for India, ILR (1908) 36 Cal 239.

set up the title of a third person. But the bailee has no better title than the bailor and consequently if a person entitled as against the bailor claims the goods the bailee has no defence against him.

A bailee or licensee cannot deny that his bailor or licensor had, at the commencement of the bailment or license, authority to make the bailment or grant the license, But a bailee, if he delivers the goods bailed to a third person may prove that such person had a right to them as against the bailor (Expln. 2).

Section 167 of the Indian Contract Act states that if a person, other than the bailor, claims goods bailed, he may apply to the court to stop the delivery of the goods to the bailor and to decide the title to the goods.

Where an automobile garage received a car for reparis, the garage owner is estopped from challenging the title of the person from whom the car is received.[85] When the defendant executed a hire purchase agreement of a motor truck in favour of the plaintiff calling him as owner, the defendant becomes a bailee and cannot deny plaintiff's ownership.[86] A pujary of a temple is in the position of either a licensee or bailee and is estopped from questioning the title of the person from whom he got possession of certain articles.[87]

A licensee cannot be permitted to deny that his licensor had at the time when the license commenced authority to grant such license. The licensee of a trademark cannot put an end to the relation of licensor and licensee by repudiating the contract, inasmuch as the concurrence of the other party is essential. In a suit for royalty, brought by the licensors certain jute trade marks against the licensees. The defence taken was that the plaintiffs had no title to the marks in question, and that the license was void. It was held that by virtue of this section the licensees were estopped from questioning their licensor's title or the validity of the license.[88]

The fact that a licensee repudiates the contract would not put an end to the relationship between the parties as the concurrenee of the licensor is necessary to rescind the contract, and his own repudiation of contract would not give him the right to question the title of the licensor.[89]

See also commentary on Section 116 under 'Licensee'.

---

85. Calcutta Credit Corporation Ltd. v. Prince Peter of Greece, AIR 1964 Cal 374.
86. Gurdial Singh Bedi v. Sunda Hire Purchase Corporation, AIR 1970 Pat 7.
87. Balram Chunnilal v. Durgalal Shivanarain, AIR 1968 MP 81 : 1967 MPLJ 384.
88. Hannah v. Jagannath, ILR (1914) 42 Cal 262 : AIR 1915 Cal 520.
89. Jagarnath & Co. v. Cresswell, ILR (1915) 40 Cal 814; relying on Johnstone v. Milling, (1886) 16 QBD 460.

CHAPTER IX

OF WITNESSES

Who may testify.

S. 118. All persons shall be competent to testify unless the Court considers that they are prevented from understanding the questions put to them, or from giving rational answers to those questions, by tender years, extreme old age, disease, whether of body or mind, or any other cause of the same kind.

Explanation.*—A lunatic is not incompetent to testify, unless he is prevented by his lunacy from understanding the questions put to him and giving rational answers to them.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1149
2. Competent and incompetent witnesses ... 1150
3. Competent to testify ... 1152
4. Competence ... 1152
5. Competence—Omission to take oath ... 1152
6. Accused as a witness ... 1153
7. Evidence of Accomplice ... 1154
8. Approver's Evidence ... 1154
9. Witness for defence ... 1155
10. Child witness—Competence ... 1155
11. Child witness—preliminary inquiry ... 1156
12. Inquiry—English law ... 1157
13. Child witness—Corroboration ... 1159
14. Child witness—credibility ... 1161
15. Leper ... 1164
16. Rustic witness ... 1164
17. Power of Attorney Holder ... 1164
18. Scribe ... 1164
19. Person of Easy Virtue ... 1165
20. Advocate ... 1165
21. Police Officer—witness ... 1165
22. Medical Officer ... 1165
23. Interested person ... 1165
24. Adversary as Witness ... 1166
25. Eye-witness ... 1166
26. Falsus in Uno, falsus in omnibus ... 1166
27. Explanation—Lunatic ... 1166
28. Incompetency from defective intellect ... 1167
29. Testimonial compulsion ... 1167
30. Appreciation of evidence ... 1167

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Under this section all persons are competent to testify, unless they are, in the opinion of the Court (a) unable to understand the questions put to them, or (b) to give rational answers to those questions, owing to (i) tender years, (ii) extreme old age, (iii) disease of mind or body, or (iv) any other such cause. Even a lunatic, if he is capable of understanding the questions put to him and giving rational answers, is a competent witness.

This section does no more than enunciate the English rule with regard to the competency of parties as witnesses without in any way making admissible all the evidence, which might be given by them.

The evidence of a child witness is generally admissible in evidence but weight to be attached to it, is a matter of consideration for the Court.[1]

The competence of a witness to give evidence has to be distinguished from compellability to give evidence. For instance, Section 122 dealing with communications during marriage, Section 124 dealing with official communications, Section 125 dealing with information as to commission of offences from magistrates and police officers & Section 129 dealing with confidential communications with legal advisors, state that such persons cannot be compelled to disclose to the court by giving evidence.

---

1. Ghewar Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 4460 (para 16) (Raj).

Competency is to be distinguished from compellability. A person may be admitted to give evidence, though in certain cases he will not be competent and compellable. A person, however, though competent and compellable as a witness may not be competent or may not be compellable to give evidence as to particular matters.[2]

With certain exceptions as to criminal proceedings, all witnesses who are capable of understanding the nature of an oath and giving rational testimony are competent.[3]

2. COMPETENT AND INCOMPETENT WITNESSES

In civil proceedings, every person[4] is now[5] a competent witness[6] unless he is (I) a child of such tender years that he has neither sufficient intelligence to testify nor a proper appreciation of the duty of speaking the truth[7]; (II) a person who at the time of being tendered as a witness is mentally incapable of testifying[8]; (III) deaf and dumb, and unable by writing or signs or otherwise to understand questions put to him, or to communicate his answers to others[9]; (IV) a person who, from temporary causes, such as illness or drunkenness, is for the time being incapable of understanding questions and of giving a rational account of events; or (V) a person who does not appreciate the nature and obligation of an oath or affirmation.[10]

In criminal cases the rules as to the competence and incompetence of witnesses are the same as in civil matters, subject to special statutory rules governing the unsworn evidence of young children[11], the right of an accused person to make an unsworn statement instead of giving evidence on oath or affirmation[12], and the evidence of the accused's wife or husband[13]

---

2. PHIPSON-EVIDENCE 13th Edn., p. 690 (para 31.01).
3. PHIPSON-EVIDENCE 13th Edn., p. 693 (para 31.07).
4. A limited company is not a competent witness. Evidence which binds the company may be given by a proper officer: Penn-Texas Corpn v. Murat (Anstalt), (1964) 1 QB 40 : (1963) I All ER 258 (CA). It was doubtful whether a person under sentence of death could give evidence: R v. Webb, (1867) II Cox CC 133, per LUSH J; of R v. Fitzgerald, (1884) cited in 2 TAYLOR'S LAW OF EVIDENCE (12th Edn.) 849n, per HARRISON J.
5. At common law there were various classes of person who were incompetent as witnesses, e.g. parties to an action or their husbands or wives, persons and persons who had no religious belief (see STARKIE'S LAW OF EVIDENCE (4th Edn.) 116) or had conscientious objections to taking an oath.
6. Persons interested were made competent witnesses by the Evidence Act 1843; parties to an action by the Evidence Act 1851, S. 2, and the Evidence Further Amendment Act 1869 (repealed); the husbands and wives of parties by the Evidence Amendment Act 1853 and the Evidence Further Amendment Act 1869 (repealed); persons previously convicted of a crime or offence by the Evidence Act 1843; and persons who had no religious belief or had conscientious objections to taking an oath by provisions re-enacted in the Oaths Act 1888. A husband who has been convicted of an agrravated assault on his a rights to be heard as a witness on an application by her to justices for a separation order on the ground of that conviction; Jones v. Jones, (1895) p. 201, although the merits of that conviction cannot be reviewed, Bryant v. Bryant, (1914) p. 227 DC.
7. R v. Brasier, (1779) 1 Leach 199, where a general rule, applicable to both civil and criminal proceedings, was stated. It has been said that it is most undesirable in any circumstances to call a child as young as five years old: R v. Wallwork, (1958) 42 Cr App Rep 153, CCA.
8. A person suffering from mental disorder may give evidence if the judge atthe trial at which he is tendered as a witness is satisfied that he is then of sufficient understanding to give rational evidence; the mere fact that such a person is then suffering from delusions does not make him incompetent if they do not make him incapable of dealing rationally with the matters about which he is to be asked; R v. Hill, (1851) 2 Den 254, CCR; R v. Whitehead, (1866) LR 1 CCR 33; R v. Dunning, (1965) Cri LR 372, CCA. Before a person who is known to be in such a state of mind can be received as a witness there should be a preliminary inquiry as to his fitness to give evidence; Spittle v. Walton, (1987) CRII Eq 420.
9. Dickenson v. Blisset, (1754) 1 Dick 268; R v. Ruston, (1786) 1 Leach 408; Morrison v. Lennard, (1827) 3 C&P 127; Bartholomew v. George, (1851) cited in Best's Law of Evidence (12th Edn.) 134, per Lord CAMPBELL CJ; R v. Whitehead, (1868) LR 1 CCR 33; R v. Imrie, (1916) 12 Cr App Rep 282, CCA.
10. An adult may be incompetent from insufficient appreciation of the moral duty of speaking the truth; R v. Wade, (1825) 1 Moo. CC 86, CCR; However, no inquiry is normally conducted into a witness's appreciation of the duty to tell the truth.
11. Children and Young Persons Act 1933, S. 38.
12. See the Criminal Evidence Act 1898, S. 1 proviso (h).
13. Criminal Evidence Act 1898, Ss. 1, 4. At common law the spouse of a party was generally incompetent as a witness either for or against him. In civil cases this disability was removed by statute, see note 3, supra. In Monroe v. Twistleton, (1802) Peake Add Cas 219 it was held that the disability was not removed, so ar as transactions taking place during the marriage are concerned, by dissolution of the marriage by Act of Parliament. Although not

With a few exceptions, all persons are now competent[14] as distinct from compellable, to give evidence in judicial proceedings, including probably the Sovereign[15] judges[16]; and counsel[17]. As to these last, advocates may in strictness, although the practice is highly undesirable, testify either for or against the party whose case they are conducting[18]. The same rule applies to arbitrators[19]; jurymen[20]; and the parties in civil cases[21], and their wives or husbands[22]. Also included are persons interested in the result[23] bankrupts, the debtor being also competent to prove the petitioning creditor's debt,[24] believers of all creeds, as well as atheists[25]; deaf mutes, providing the court is satisfied that they understand the nature of an oath[26]; accomplies[27]; and convicts.[28] Even a person convicted of perjury is competent[29], as also is a person under sentence of death[30].

"In civil cases, the basic test of competence is whether the witness is capable of understanding the nature of an oath and of giving rational testimony. In order to test a witness's understanding of the nature of an oath, it is not appropriate to embark on a detailed examination of theological appreciation.[31] Rather, it should be ascertained whether the witness has a sufficient appreciation of the solemnity of the occasion, and the added responsibility to tell the truth which is involved in taking an oath, over and above the duty to tell the truth which is an ordinary duty of normal social conduct.[32] The basic test of competence applies to all adults, but is not the test used for children in all circumstances.

In criminal cases, the basic test of competence is whether the person is able to (1) understand questions put to him as a witness, and (2) give answers to them which can be understood.[33] A witness who satisfies this basic test of competence and who has attained the age of 14 may be sworn unless he or she is shown not to have sufficient appreciation of the solemnity of the occasion and of the particular responsibility to tell the truth which is involved in taking an oath.[34] A witness who has not attained the age of 14 may not be sworn."[35]

Any body can give evidence in the Court provided that he is acquainted with the facts of the case. It is not necessary that persons giving evidence on behalf of bank must have power of attorney or written authorisation.[36] specifically overruled or abrogated, this decision cannot be regarded as representing the modern law. (HALSBURYI LAWS OF ENGLAND, 4th Edn., Vol. 17, p. 162) (para 131).

---

14. For the former disqualifications, i.e. interest which included parties, consorts and other witnesses, atheism and crime, see PHIPSON (11th ed.), ff 30-13 to 30-15, but for husband and wife, see f 31-06, post.
15. Berkeley Peerage, The Times, June 27, 1891; R v. Mylius, The Times, February 2, 1911.
16. Ante, ff 2-08, 14-11.
17. Ante, f 14-13.
18. Cobbett v. Hudson, (1852) 1 E&B 11, not following Stones v. Byron, (1846) 4 D & L 393 and Deane v. Packwood, 4 Dowl & L. 395n; see also R. v. Secretary of State for India, (1941) 2 K.B. 169. See post, f 31-43 as to when this evidence may be given without oath.
19. Ante, f 14-12.
20. Ante, f 14-14; R v. Rosser, (1836) 7 C&P 648; Manley v. Shaw, (1840) Car. & M 361.
21. Evidence Act 1851, S. 2.
22. Evidence (Amendment) Act 1853, S. 1; Evidence Further Amendment Act 1869, S. 3; Matrimonial Causes Act 1973, S. 48.
23. Evidence Act 1843, S. 1.
24. Ex P., Haes (1902) 1 K.B. 98.
25. Providing they comply with the provisions of the Oaths Act 1978, post, ff 31-34 et seq.
26. R. v. Ruston, (1786) 1 Leach 408; R. v. O'Brien, (1845) 1 Cox 185, See post, f 33-03.
27. Post, f 32-06.
28. Evidence Act 1843, S. 1; R. v. Dytche, (1890) 17 Cox 39, ante, f 10-28.
29. See 65 JP 496; contra, OKE'S MAG. SYNOP. (14th ed.), p. 879.
30. R. v. Fitzgerald, (1884) Dublin, November 6, 1884, per HARRISON J., cited TAY., S. 1347n., not following R v. Webb, (1867) 11 Cox 133, contra, which case is doubted both in TAY., S. 1347n. and STEPH, art. 116n.
31. R. v. Bellamy, (1985) 82 Cr App R 222, 225.
32. R. v. Hayes, (1977) 64 Cr App R 194, 196. This case involved children but the test was said to apply a fortiori to adults in R. v. Bellamy, (1985) 82 Cr App R 222.
33. Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999, S. 53(3).
34. Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999, S. 55.
35. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), pages 150-151 (paras 8-08 and 8-09).
36. Central Bank of India v. Tarseema Compress Wood Mfg. Co., AIR 1997 Bom 225.

3. COMPETENT TO TESTIFY

The competency of a person to testify as a witness is a condition precedent to the administration to him of an oath or affirmation and is a question distinct from that of his credibility when he has been sworn or has been affirmed. In determining the question of competency the Court, under this section, has not to enter into inquiries as to the witness's religious belief or as to his knowledge of the consequences of falsehood in this world or the next. It has to ascertain, in the best way it can, whether, from the extent of his intellectual capacity and understanding, he is able to give a rational and intelligent account of what he has seen or heard or done on a particular occasion. If a person of tender years or of very advanced age can satisfy these requirements, his competency as a witness is established.[37]

Even the husband or wife of a party is a competent witness against the other spouse in view of Section 120. Under Section 119 even a deaf and dumb person may be a competent witness provided he gives evidence by writing or by signs in open court, making them intelligible, and is able to understand the questions put to him.

Section 118 deals with the competence of a person to testify before the Court. The incompetence of a person is recognised in the case of persons of tender years, extreme old age, and disease whether of body or mind, or any cause of the same kind. A child of tender years thus becomes incompetent only in case the Court considers it as incompetent. The test contemplated in this section is to find out whether the person is prevented from understanding the questions put to him or from giving rational answers to those questions. If the child understands the questions put to it and gives rational answers to those questions it can be taken that he/she is a competent witness to be examined.

Where the Court, without giving a finding as to the competency of the injured witness, relied on her evidence and acquitted the accused, the trial was held to be vitiated and re-trial was ordered.[38]

4. COMPETENCE

Section 4 of the Oaths Act says that all witnesses are to take oath or affirmation. But under the proviso, Sections 4 and 5 of that Act shall not apply to a child witness under the age of 12 years. Therefore, if once the Court is satisfied that a child below 12 years of age is a competent witness then such witness can be examined without oath or affirmation.

Where the court is satisfied that the child witness understands the duty of speaking the truth though he does not understand the nature of an oath or affirmation, the provisions of Sections 5 and 6 Oaths Act do not apply and court should proceed to record the evidence.[39]

The competency of a child witness is different from his understanding the effect of oath or affirmation. Unless the child understands the effect of oath, it is not necessary to administer the oath.[40]

Such evidence, if tendered for the prosecution, must be "corroborated by some other material evidence in support thereof implicating the accused.[41]

5. COMPETENCE—OMISSION TO TAKE OATH

Even Section 7 (old Section 13) of the Oaths Act states that even if there was omission to take any oath or make any affirmation, it would not invalidate any proceeding or render inadmissible any evidence. Section 7 is unqualified in its terms and applies to all omissions accidental or deliberate.

The Supreme Court in Rameshwar v. State[42] observed: "An omission to administer an oath, even to an adult, goes only to the credibility of the witness and not his competency. The question of competency is dealt with in Section 118 Evidence Act. The Oaths Act does not deal with competency and under Section 13 of that Act omission to take oath does not affect the admissibility of the evidence. It therefore 37. Queen-Empress v. Lal Sahai, ILR (1888) 11 All 183; Quasim Ali v. State, ILR (1952) Raj 435; Purna Chandra v. State, AIR 1959 Cal 306; Ghewar Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 4460 (para 16) (Raj).

---

38. State of Karnataka v. Shahabuddin, 1995 Cr LJ 3237 (paras 12 and 13) (Kant).
39. Shamba @ Muniswamy v. State, ILR 1960 Mys 311.
40. Sudhakaran v. State, 1983 Ker LT 5941.
41. Section 38(ii) (PHIPSON EVIDENCE, 13th Edn., p 695) (para 31.11).
42. AIR 1952 SC 54. See also Bhagwania v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 3719 (para 21) (Raj).

follows that the irregularity in question cannot affect the admissibility of the evidence of the girl." The court relied on Md Sugal Esa v. The King[43], wherein it was observed "Section 13 Oaths Act, is quite unqualified in its terms and there is nothing to suggest that it is to apply only where the omission to administer the oath occurs per incuriam. If that had been the intention of the Legislature, it would have been simple to insert the words in this section to that effect....It may be observed that this question can no longer arise in India because in 1939 the Legislature passed the Oudh (Amendment) Act 39 of 1939 which settles the law in accordance with the Bengal and Oath decisions referred to above." The decisions referred to by the Privy Council are R v. Sewa Bhogta,[44] and Ram Samujh v. Emperor, 10 OC 337.[45]

6. ACCUSED AS A WITNESS

Previously the accused was not a competent witness to testify on his own behalf. So he could not be administered an oath. Prior to the amendment of the Cr. P. Code it was held that the accused though competent to testify is an incompetent witness.[46]

By reason of the amendment of Section 342-A, Cr. P.C. in 1955 (Present Section 315(1), Cr. P.C. of 1973), the accused may wish to examine himself as a defence witness. In such a case he has to take the oath.

Under English Law, in criminal proceedings the accused[47] and the wife or husband of the accused (except in certain cases[48]) are incompetent as witnesses for the prosecution.

Taking an oath or making an affirmation is an indispensable pre-requisite for any person giving evidence in a court, excepting under special laws like under Section 7 of the Prevention of Corruption Act or in proceedings under Section 107, Cr. P.C. or maintenance proceedings under the Cr. P.C. The accused is not a competent witness.[49]

Accused who answers questions put to him u/Section 342, old Cr. P.C. (now Section 313, Cr. P.C.) can not be treated as a witness.[50]

An accused who is convicted on his own plea of guilty is a competent witness against his co-accused, the reason being that on his conviction he ceases to be an accused, and the bar under Section 5 of the Oaths Act (old) against administration of oath to him cannot apply. The fact that his conviction was wrong or was subsequently set aside in appeal, cannot affect his competency.[51]

Evidence adduced by accused in his defence is not inadmissible against co-accused, though, such evidence should be received with great scrutiny and care.[52] The mere fact that a person was convicted for the same offence does not in any way detract from his competence to give evidence against his co-accused.[53] Even when the pardon granted to an accused is withdrawn he is a competent witness against other accused, and there is no bar to his examination at the fresh trial necessitated by the retirement of the Sessions Judge.[54] If once an accused is either discharged or convicted or acquitted or his case is withdrawn he becomes a competent witness for prosecution.[55]

Art. 20(3) of the Indian Constitution states that no person accused of an offence shall be compelled to be a witness against himself. It is a protection given to an accused, but if he volunteers to give

---

43. AIR 1946 PC 3.
44. 14 Beng. LR 294 (FB).
45. Lalaram Hariram v. State of M.P., AIR 1960 MP 59; Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; Dhansai Sahu v. State, AIR 1969 Ori 105; Lalaram v. State, AIR 1969 MP 59; R. v. Sewa Bhogta, 14 Beng. LR 294 (FB); Hari Ramji v. Emperor, 20 Bom LR 365 : AIR 1918 Bom 212; R. v. Sashi, 24 CWN 767; In re : Chinna Venkadu, ILR 38 Mad 550; Emperor v. Viraperumal, ILR (1892) 16 Mad 105.
46. Re : Nga Po Min, 1932 Rang 198 FB; Nafar Sheikh v. Emperor, AIR 1914 Cal 276.
47. R. v. Rhodes, (1889) 1 Q.B. 77; Criminal Evidence Act 1898, S. 1(a) (see Appendix f 42-01).
48. Post, ff 31-20 et seq.
49. Re : B.N. Ramakrishna Naidu, AIR 1955 Mad 100.
50. Ranjit Singh v. State, AIR 1952 HP 81.
51. Ranjha v. State, AIR 1952 HP 5.
52. Sriramulu Naidu v. State, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 546 (AD); following Shapurji Sorabji v. Emperor, AIR 1936 Bom 154; Nandgopal v. State, AIR 1951 Nag 189.
53. Vaikuntham Jaganadham v. State, AIR 1952 Ori. 164.
54. State v. Bhoora, AIR 1961 Raj 274.
55. Tulshi Lal Sao v. Union of India, 1970 BLJR 915.

evidence there would not be any compulsion to give evidence and so Art. 20(3) would not be attracted. (see Section 73 of this Act)[56]

Where there are two accused a Magistrate cannot convert one of them into a witness against the other except when a pardon has been lawfully granted.[57]

7. EVIDENCE OF ACCOMPLICE

In Laxmipat Choraria v. State of M.P.[58] when one Ethyl Wong arrived at Bombay, two customs officers who were waiting for her, questioned her. She admitted her part in a smuggling racket set up by another man and gave a statement. The prosecution did not name her as one of the accused in the case. The other accused in the trial court raised a question that she should also be tried along with them so that her testimony might not be available against them.

Subsequently the accused did not raise that question. HIDAYATULLAH. J., observed: "Now there can be no doubt that Ethyl Wong was a competent witness. Under Section 118 of the Indian Evidence Act all persons are competent to testify unless the court considers that they are prevented from understanding the questions put to them for reasons indicated in that section.....If the customs authorities treated Ethyl Wong as a witness and produced her in court she was bound to answer all questions and could not be prosecuted for her answers.....In India the privilege of refusing to answer has been removed so that the temptation to tell a lie may be avoided, but it was necessary to give this protection. The protection is further fortified by Art. 20(3) which says that no person accused of any offence shall be compelled to be a witness against himself. This Article protects a person who is accused of an offence and not those questioned as witnesses. A person who voluntarily answers questions from the witness box waives the privilege which is against being compelled to be witness against himself, because he is then not a witness against himself but against others. Section 132 of the Evidence Act sufficiently protects him since his testimony does not go against himself. In this respect the witness is in no worse position than the accused, who volunteres to give evidence on his own behalf or on behalf of a co-accused. There too the accused waives the privilege conferred on him by the Article since he is subjected to cross-examination and may be asked questions incriminating him. The evidence of Ethyl Wong cannot, therefore, be ruled out as that of an incompetent witness. Since Ethyl Wong was a self-confessed criminal, in conspiracy with others who were being tried, her evidence was accomplice evidence.....Section 133 of the Evidence Act makes the accomplice a competent witness against an accused person."

Dealing with the question whether she could be administered an oath in view of the prohibition of Section 5 of the Oaths Act, after referring to Section 5 of Oaths Act and Section 342-A (old) Criminal Procedure Code and Section 337 Cr. P.C. (old) Section 338 Cr. P.C. (old) observed: "The consensus of opinion in India is that the competency of an accomplice is not destroyed because he could have been tried jointly with the accused but was not and was instead made to give evidence in the case. Section 5 of Indian Oaths Act and Section 342 Cr. P.C. do not stand in the way of such a procedure."

8. APPROVER'S EVIDENCE

An approver is a competent witness.[59] During the course of a police investigation into a case of house-breaking and theft, several persons were arrested, one of whom made certain disclosures to the police and pointed out several houses which had been broken into by his accomplices. Thereupon the police discharged him, and made him a witness. At the trial he gave evidence against his accomplices, who were all convicted. It was held that his evidence was admissible under this section though he had been illegally discharged by the police.[60]

---

56. In re : Central Calcutta Bank Ltd., AIR 1957 Cal 520.
57. Reg. v. Hanmanta, ILR (1877) 1 Bom 610. See Nabi Bakhsh v. Emperor of India, (1902) PR No. 12 of 1902 (Cr); Allahabad v. King Emperor of India, (1906) PR No. 9 of 1906 (Cr).
58. AIR 1968 SC 938.
59. State of Bihar v. Srilal Kejriwal, AIR 1960 Pat 459.
60. Queen-Empress v. Mona Puna, ILR (1892) 16 Bom 661.

9. WITNESS FOR DEFENCE

Though a witness was cited along with others as eye-witnesses in the charge-sheet, and that witness was examined as defence witness, it was held that as a defence witness, she is a competent to speak to the occurrence.[61]

There is no provision in Criminal Procedure Code warranting a practice of examining the same person as a witness for prosecution and also for the defence. Such practice is to be condemned.[62]

10. CHILD WITNESS—COMPETENCE

With respect to children, no precise age is fixed by law within which they are absolutely excluded from giving evidence on the presumption that they have not sufficient understanding. Neither can any precise rule be laid down respecting the degree of intelligence and knowledge which will render a child a competent witness. In all questions of this kind much must depend upon the good sense and discretion of the Judge. In practice, it is not unusual to receive the testimony of children of eight or nine years of age when they appear to possess sufficient understanding.[63]

"There is no fixed age below which children are incompetent to give evidence.[64]

In civil proceedings, a child is clearly competent if the Court is of the opinion that he or she understands the nature of an oath. However, even if a child does not understand this, his or her evidence may still be heard by the Court if it is of the opinion that (1) he understands that it is his duty to speak the truth, and (2) he has sufficient understanding to justify his evidence being heard. .....

.....

In criminal proceedings, a person of any age is competent to give evidence if he or she is able to (1) understand questions put to him or her as a witness, and (2) give answers to them which can be understood."[65]

Competency of the child witness can be ascertained by questioning him/her to find out intelligence to understand the occurrence witnessed and duty to speak the truth before the Court and thereby his/her statement inspiring confidence can be relied upon even without corroboration.[66]

Competency of a child witness cannot be questioned if his evidence is otherwise probable and true.[67] A child witness is not an incompetent witness whose evidence may have to be always discarded.[68]

Child of three and a half years is not a competent witness due to the tender age.[69]

A child of 8 years who does not understand questions or is unable to give rational answers, is not a competent witness.[70] If a boy in spite of his young age can both understand questions and give rational answers to them he should be examined.[71] The Supreme Court accepted the evidence of a child of five years who was the sole witness to murder by a domestic servant.[72]

A girl of five years appeared as a witness and stated that the accused, her step-mother, had thrown her and her younger sister aged about three years into the well. The question arose whether she was a competent witness because of her tender age. It was held that a child of tender years was a competent

---

61. Joseph v. State of Kerala, 1957 Ker LT 500.
62. Gopiram v. State, AIR 1954 MB 21.
63. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 1377, p. 869; Arulan Israel v. State, ILR (1954) TC 1200.
64. R v. Z., (1990) 2 QB 355, 359-361; DPP v. M. (1998) 2 WLR 604. Criminal cases. Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999, S. 53(1).
65. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), pages 152-153 (para 8-11).
66. Ram Bilas Singh v. State of Bihar, 1999 Cr LJ 2360 (paras 7 and 9) (Pat). See also Dhani v. State, 1999 Cr LJ 2712 (para 6) (Ori).
67. Niranjan Amratlal v. Uttamran Atmaram, ILR 1970 Guj 691: 1979 Raj Cr C 15.
68. Radhey Shyam v. State of U.P., 1993 Cr LJ 3709, (para 6) (All).
69. Padam Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1982 Raj LW 469.
70. State of Bihar v. Hanuman Koeri, 1971 Crl LJ 187 (Pat).
71. Queen-Empress v. Ram Sewak, ILR (1900) 23 All 90.
72. Suresh v. State of U.P., AIR 1981 SC 1122. Also see Ram Bilas Singh v. State of Bihar, 1999 Cr LJ 2360 (paras 9, 11 and 12) (Pat). Testimony of a child witness found unreliable, acquittal upheld. State of Delhi v. Vijay Pal, AIR 1980 SC 1621; CP Fernandes v. U.T. Goa, AIR 1977 SC 135.

witness. The question to be decided in each case is whether a particular child who has appeared in the witness-box is intelligent enough to be able to understand as to what evidence he or she is giving and to be able to understand the question and to be able to give a rational answer.[73] Even in the absence of oath the evidence of a child witness can be considered, provided that such a witness is able to understand the questions and is able to give rational answers thereof. The only precaution which the Court should bear in mind while assessing the evidence of a child witness is that the witness must be reliable one and his/her demeanour must be like any other competent witness and there is no likelihood of being tutored.[74] Where the questions asked during the preliminary examination were not recorded but the answers recorded indicated the questions asked, such an omission does not render the evidence of the child witness unworthy of acceptance.[75]

Children particularly of tender age have good memory and no conscience. They can easily be taught stories which they believe to be true, and are influenced by fear and punishment or hope of reward and by desire of notoriety. While considering the evidence of a child, these considerations should not be lost sight of.[76]

Where the children, who deposed against the accused were his daughters and possessed sufficient understanding, their testimony could be acted upon.[77]

11. CHILD WITNESS—PRELIMINARY INQUIRY

The Supreme Court has held that it is desirable that judges and magistrates should always record their opinion that the child understands the duty of speaking the truth, and state why they think so. Otherwise the credibility of the witness may be seriously affected, so much so that in some cases it may be necessary to reject the evidence altogether.[78]

In Md. Sugal Esa v. The King,[79] the Privy Council observed. "It is not to be supposed that any judge would accept as a witness a person who he considered was incapable not only of understanding the nature of an oath but also the necessity of speaking the truth when examined as a witness."[80]

The competency of a person to testify as a witness is a condition precedent. To administer oath or affirmation is a question distinct from his credibility. The court is at liberty to test the capacity of a witness to depose by putting proper questions and know whether there was proper understanding and the person was able to give a rational account of what he has seen. If a person of tender years can satisfy those requirements he can be treated as a competent witness. That the judge can form his own opinion[81] vests in the Court the discretion to decide whether an infant is or is not disqualified to be a witness by reason of understanding or lack of understanding. The proposition that the competency of the witness should be tested before his examination is commenced is not quite justified by the provisions of this section.[82] According to the Bombay and the Rangoon High Courts when a witness is of tender years the

---

73. Dato v. State, (1954) Pun 825. Also see Narayan Iranna Potkanthi v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 1752 (para 10) (Bom); Akbar Ashraf Khan v. State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 3575 (para 13) (Bom), relying on State of Maharashtra v. Prabhu Barku Gade, 1995 Cr LJ 1432 and Vadivelu Thevar v. The State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 614.

74. Dattu Ramrao Sakhare v. State of Maharashtra, (1997) 5 SCC 341 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 685.

75. State of Maharashtra v. Prabhu Barku Gade, 1995 Cr LJ 1432 (para 18) (Bom).

76. Kurrahwa v. State of U.P., 1985 All LJ 1036.

77. State of Maharashtra v. Vilas Pandurang Patil, 1999 Cr LJ 1062, at p. 1066 (Bom). Children of deceased, eye-witnesses, answering preliminary questions and satisfying that they were answering intelligently and fearlessly, giving details of occurrence, withstood test of cross-examination, their evidence acceptable. Baby Kandayanathil v. State of Kerala, 1993 Cr LJ 2605 (para 4) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 2275; Prakash v. State of M.P., AIR 1993 SC 65 (para 11); Badi Guravaiah v. State of A.P., 1993 Cr LJ 3496 (paras 9 and 10) (AP); sole testimony of minor son of deceased found credible, Dayanand v. State of Haryana, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 407 (P&H).

78. Rameshwar v. State, AIR 1952 SC 54. See also In re : Porapati Muthiah, ILR 1965 AP 650; State of Mysore v. Hanumantha, 1962 Mad LJ (Cri) 355 : 39 Mys. LJ 823; In re : Raju Shetty, AIR 1960 Mys 48; Dhanna v. State, AIR 1951 Raj 37.

79. 1946 PC 3.

80. In re : Raju Shetty, AIR 1960 Mys 48.

81. Purna Chandra v. State, AIR 1959 Cal 306 following Fakir v. Emperor, 11 CWN 51; Dhansai Sahu v. State, AIR 1969 Ori 105; Narasingha Karwa v. State, 1975 Cr LJ 1560 (Ori); Moti Mahal Theatres Ltd v. Babu Lal, AIR 1955 Punj 109; Abdul R. Patham v. State, (1983) 1 Bom LR 489; Bipin Bihari Sahu v. State, 1986 Cr LJ 406.

82. Krishna Kahar v. Emperor, ILR (1939) 2 Cal 569 : AIR 1940 Cal 182; Nafar Sheikh v. Emperor, ILR (1913) 41 Cal 406 : AIR 1914 Cal 276.

Court should satisfy itself that the witness is competent to testify.[83] The object of putting questions to a child witness is that the time of the Court should not be wasted if it is found, as the result of a preliminary inquiry, that the child is neither intelligent nor can he give evidence which amy be acceptable.[84] But there is no legal obligation to ask preliminary questions[85] and recording of questions is also not necessary where the answers recorded clearly suggest the questions asked.[86]

Merely because the trial judge did not put certain formal questions to the child witness or that he did not append a certificate that the child understood the duty of speaking the truth, the statement of the child does not become ineffective and its probative force will not suffer on that ground.[87] Omission of the trial judge to put questions to a child witness, unconnected with the case, to satisfy himself whether the witness is able to understand the questions and to return co-herent answers and to incorporate that in the record, does not render the evidence of child witness inadmissible and unreliable.[88] Keeping a record of preliminary examination is not a condition precedent to taking of evidence. It may be desirable but not an invariable requirement of law.[89]

When no oath is administered to a child the evidence is required to be taken in the form of questions and answers; as a child witness is apt to be swayed away by influences. If it is done, not only the trial court but the appellate court also is in a position to gather whether the answers are relevant and whether they are tutored replies. It is a safeguard given to the accused to check the veracity of the child witness. Though, failure to record is not fatal, it is bound to result in some prejudice to the accused.[90]

In examining a child witness, the procedure contemplated under this section must be followed.[91]

12. INQUIRY—ENGLISH LAW

The conduct of an inquiry by the judge as to whether a child should be sworn or not may well present problems today. The rules were criticised indeed by the Criminal Law Revision Committee in trenchant forms in their eleventh report.[92]; "The inquiry whether the child understands the nature of the oath, if carried out conscientiously, seems to us unrealistic; and the investigation sometimes made by the court as to whether the child believes in divine retribution for lying is really out of place when the question is whether he understands how important it is for the proceedings that he should tell the truth to the best of his ability about the events in question in particular that he should not say anything against the accused which he does not really believe to be true and that he should say if he did not see something or does not remember it. For similar reasons the test in S. 38 of the 1933 Act whether the child 'understands the duty of speaking the truth' seems inadequate; for even very young children understand this duty in a general way without necessarily understanding the particular importance of telling the truth in the proceedings. Some judges fee that the inquiry which they have to make sometimes verges on force."

The Committee therefore recommended that children over 14 should always give evidence on oath and children under that age should always give evidence unsworn. This recommendation has the merit of simplicity and should be implemented.

The Court of Appeal has recently given guidance as to the principles to be applied to such inquiries today. In R. v. Hayes, the appellant had been convicted of offences involving indecency with three boys. It was said on appeal that the judge had wrongly allowed two of the boys to be sworn. One of them in answer to the judge's inquiry had revealed that he was ignorant of the existence of God. The Court said:

---

83. Emperor v. Hari, (1918) 20 Bom LR 365; Ah Phut v. King, ILR (1940) Ran 104 : AIR 1939 Rang 402.

84. Karu Singh v. Emperor, ILR (1941) 20 Pat 893 : AIR 1942 Pat 159.

85. Lakhan Singh v. King-Emperor, ILR (1941) 20 Pat 898 : AIR 1942 Pat 183.

86. State of Maharashtra v. Prabhu Barku Gade, 1995 Cr LJ 1432 (para 19) (Bom).

87. In re : Parapati Muthiah, ILR 1965 AP 650 following Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; State of Orissa v. Machindra Majui, AIR 1964 Ori 100; Raghbir Singh v. Union of India, ILR 1955 Patiala 509; Marianthony Mariasoosa v. State, AIR 1955 T.C. 81; State of Rajasthan v. Vijairam, 1968 Cr LJ 270 (Raj); Kabiraj Tudu v. State of Assam, 1994 Cr LJ 432 (para 10) (Gau).

88. Jaisingh v. State, 1973 Cr LJ 1466 (All).

89. Santhosh Mandal v. State, 1983 Cr LJ 773 (Cal)(DB); Nandeshwar Kalita v. State of Assam, 1983 Cr LJ 1515 (Gau)(DB).

90. Prabhu v. State, ILR 1977 Bom 1505; Ram Hazoor Pandey v. State, AIR 1959 All 409 : 1959 Cr LJ 796; Varkey Joseph v. State of Kerala, AIR 1960 Ker 301; J.V. Wagh v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 803 (para 15) (Bom).

91. Talasila Sandhya v. A.P. State Road Transport Corporation, 1996 AIHC 1680 (para 6) (AP).

92. PHIPSON 13th End., p. 697 (para 31.11).

"the fact that....questions and answers on their face, reveal the boy declaring that he is wholly ignorant of the existence of God does lend some force to the submission that if the essence of the sanction of the oath is a divine sanction, and if it is an awareness of that divine sanction which the court is looking for in a child of tender years, then here was a case where, on the face of it, that awareness was absent. The court is not convinced that that is really the essence of the court's duty in the difficult situation where the court has to determine whether a young person can or cannot properly be permitted to take an oath before giving evidence. It is unrealistic not to recognise that, in the present state of society, amongst the adult population the divine sanction of an oath is probably not generally recognised. The important consideration, we think, when a judge has to decide whether a child should properly be sworn, is whether the child has a sufficient appreciation of the solemnity of the occasion and the added responsibility to tell the truth, which is involved in taking an oath, over and above the duty to tell the truth which is an ordinary duty of normal social conduct.

Against the background of those general considerations of principle, we think it right also to approach the matter on the footing that this is very much a matter within the discretion of the trial judge and we think that this court, although having jurisdiction to interfere if clearly satisfied that the trial judge's discretion was wrongly exercised, should hesitate long before doing so. The judge sees and hears the boy or girl, which means very much more than the bare written word, and it may easily be that the judge comes to the conclusion that the way in which he has initially been phrasing his questions has been such that the child to whom the questions are directed has not sufficiently understood them, and he may then attempt to phrase his questions in a different way."

In the case of village boys it is all the more necessary to put questions in order to find out whether they are intelligent enough to understand what they had seen.[1] Ordinarily, girls have full power of understanding and give rational answers after attaining age of 12 or 13 years, when they normally attain puberty.[2] As a rule of caution the court must decide whether the child witness is intelligent enough to understand the questions and give rational answers.[3] Though it may be desirable to make a record of the questions and answers the failure to record the same is not fatal, as the decision primarily rests with the trial judge.[4] The appellate court can examine the correctness of the trial court's decision regarding the competency of the child witness.[5]

When the Sessions Judge observed that the witness gave the evidence in a straight forward manner, it was held that in view of the observations made, such evidence should not be discarded on the ground of danger of the child being tutored.[6] The credibility of a child witness would be affected by the omission of the trial judge to record the reasons whether the child understood the duty of speaking the truth.[7] The opinion formed at the preliminary inquiry is not final and the judge may change that view if the examination and the cross-examination reveals the incompetency of the child.[8] Court should not discard the trial court's opinion about the credibility of witness on the sole ground that part of his testimony is not reliable. The appellate court must be very slow in discarding evidence of any witness, if he is found reliable by the trial court and if his testimony was accepted.[9]

When evidence of a child witness aged 8 years was recorded in a narrative form in a clear and cogent manner, it was held that merely because the evidence was not recorded in question and answer form its value would not be impaired. So also minor discrepencies would not affect the evidence.[10] Where the child immediately after the occurrence gave details of the incident and those facts were corroborated by the medical evidence, such evidence of the child could not be discarded.[11]

---

1. Ghasi Ram v. State, AIR 1952 Bhopal 25.
2. State v. Dukhidei, AIR 1963 Ori 144; Sadananda Bissoi v. State, ILR 1968 Cut 972.
3. Shiv Raj Singh v. State of V.P., AIR 1955 VP 36.
4. Arulan Isreal v. State, AIR 1955 Tr C 6; Sataji Nathaji v. State, (1976) 17 Guj LR 254; Santhosh Mandal v. State, 1983 Cr LJ 773 (Cal)(DB).
5. Shankarlal v. Vijay Shanker Shukla, AIR 1968 All 58; Jaisingh v. State, 1973 Cr LJ 1466; Santhosh Mandal v. State, 1983 Cr LJ 773 (Cal)(DB).
6. Shabir Rashid v. State, 1969 Cr LJ 1282 (Del).
7. State v. Lobsang Sharap, 1973 Cr LJ 85.
8. Govind Nath v. State, AIR 1961 Guj 11.
9. Madhusudan Das v. Narayani Bai, AIR 1983 SC 114.
10. Biri Singh Majhi v. State of Assam, 1977 Cr LJ 1349 (Gau).
11. Kana Majhi v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1876 (Ori).

13. CHILD WITNESS—CORROBORATION

The Supreme Court in Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan[12] relying on Baskerville's case[13] observed: "The rule, which according to the cases has hardened into one of law, is not that corroboration is essential before there can be a conviction, but that the necessity of corroboration, as a matter of prudence, except where the circumstances make it safe to dispense with it, must be present to the mind of the judge, and in jury cases, must find place in the charge, before a conviction without corroboration can be sustained. The tender years of the child which is the victim of a sexual offence, coupled with other circumstances appearing in the case such, for example, as its demeanour, unlikelihood of tutoring and so forth, may render corroboration unnecessary, but that is a question of fact in every case. The only rule of law is that this rule of prudence must be present to the mind of the judge or the jury as the case may be and be understood and appreciated by him or them. There is no rule of practice that there must, in every case, be corroboration before a conviction can be allowed to stand."[14]

In England[15] the unsworn evidence of a child requires to be corroborated by "some other material evidence in support thereof implicating the accused."[16] Other material evidence means evidence other than that admitted by this section.[17] Thus the un-sworn evidence of a child cannot corroborate the unsworn evidence of another child.[18]

In D.P.P. v. Hester[19] the House of Lords held that the evidence of an unsworn child could corroborate the sworn evidence of another child provided that the unsworn evidence is corroborated and that corroboration could be found in the evidence of the sworn child, subject to the jury being satisfied after suitably adequate guidance that each child is a truthful and satisfactory witness. It was stressed that a particularly careful warning should be given to the jury. However, the result is that the so-called rule against "mutual corroboration" is no more.[20] A fortiori a child's unsworn evidence may corroborate the sworn evidence of an adult and a child's sworn evidence may corroborate the unsworn evidence of another child.[21]

The general principle is that a person should only be convicted of a crime when the court is satisfied that the guilt has been established. When the conviction is to be based on the evidence of a child witness, what should be the nature of corroboration and to what extent there should be corroboration will depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. It would be prudent to seek corroboration to the evidence of a child witness.[22] Evidence of independent witness is required only to make it reasonably safe to believe the story put forth by the child witness but it need not extend to all circumstances necessary to identify the accused.[23] A rule of caution makes it necessary to see whether the testimony of child has been corroborated in essential particulars, unless the circumstances render it safe to accept the tetimony without corroboration.[24] It is not safe to act on the evidence of a child of about four years without

---

12. AIR 1952 SC 54.
13. (1916) 2 KB 658.
14. See also Vasu v. State of Kerala, ILR 1960 Ker 256; Ghasiram Behara v. State, ILR 1962 Cut 505; Ulla v. King, 1950 Ori 261; Jalwanti Lodhori v. State, 1953 Pat 246.
15. See generally Andrews., "The Evidence of Children" (1964) Crim LR 769 and R. v. Khan, (1981) Crim LR 330. The Court of Appeal said in that case that as a general rule there should be an inquiry as to the child's understanding of the oath.
16. Children and Young Persons Act 1933, S. 38.
17. D.P.P. v. Hester, (1973) AC 296 : (1972) 3 WLR 910 : (1972) 3 All ER 1056.
18. D.P.P. v. Hester, ante.
19. Ante, R v. E., (1964) 1 All ER 205 must now be regarded as wrongly decided on this point.
20. For further authority on this point see D.P.P. v. Kilbourne, (1973) AC 729, 747 per LORD HAILSHAM L.C.
21. See R. v. Gregg, (1932) 24 Cr. App. R. 13.
22. Bharvad Bhikha v. State, AIR 1971 SC 1064; Ulla Mahapatra v. King, AIR 1950 Ori 261; Arulan Israel v. State, AIR 1965 Tra-Co. 6; Ram Hazoor Pandey v. State, AIR 1959 All 409; Md. Sugal Esa v. King, AIR 1946 PC 3; Varkey Joseph v. State of Kerala, AIR 1960 Ker 301; State v. Dukhi Dei, AIR 1963 Ori 144; Ghasiram Behera v. State, ILR 1962 Cut 506.
23. Ghewar Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 4460 (para 15) (Raj).
24. In re : Porapati Muthiah, ILR 1965 AP 650; In re : Shaik Umar Saheb, 1957 AP 343; Abbas v. Emperor, 1933 Lah 667; Jalwanthi v. State, 1953 Pat 246; Munna v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1925 (All).

corroboration since there is a likelihood of his being tutored[25] but in case of unlikelihood of tutoring, no corroboration of his statement is required.[26]

When the version of the incident is found truthful the courts would be justified in believing the evidence of a child witness.[27]

When a girl below 12 years was kidnapped, and the court being satisfied that she realised the value of speaking the truth and the significance of the oath, appended the required certificate, her evidence, if believed, would, even without corroboration be sufficient to maintain the conviction. The rule that the statement of the prosecutrix must be corroborated in material particulars by some other evidence should be restricted to cases of rape only, and should not be extended to other cases of sexual nature.[28] Where there is no corroboration of the testimony of a prosecutrix in a rape case it is not safe to convict the accused.[29] Where a girl of 9 years, as a prosecutrix in a rape case gave evidence, it was held that as she was found to be intelligent and not tutored and that she gave a spontaneous and truthful version, there was no reason to disbelieve her even though there was no corroboration.[30] In a rape case, where the accused was a police officer, corroboration of the evidence of the prosecutrix is not necessary, as the standards of proof to be expected by the court must not be higher than is expected of an injured witness, unless circumstances warrant greater caution.[31]

In the case of corroboration of the evidence of one child by that of another the evidence of both the children is to be looked at with care and acted upon with caution.[32] Where the very statement of the child could form the basis for conviction, no corroboration is necessary.[33] If on close scrutiny of the evidence of a child witness it is found to bear the impress of truth there is no obstacle in the way of accepting the evidence whether corroborated or not.[34] Even if there be no infirmity in the evidence of a young boy it is desirable to seek corroboration of his evidence in view of his tender age.[35]

In a case of murder conviction on the evidence of sole testimony of child witness is not impermissible.[36] When the child witness of tender age gave evidence improving his statement before the sessions judge vis a vis his statement before the police, it is dangerous to convict a person for murder on the uncorroborated evidence of the child.[37]

Where the child witness cogently narrated the incident of murder immediately after the occurrence to his relations who narrated the incident in the Court as it was narrated to them by the child witness, their evidence had corroborative value to the testimony of the child witness and made his evidence credible.[38] Where the children of the deceased omitted to state injuries on the accused which they had failed to notice and there was evidence firmly establishing that the accused sustained injuries in the manner as told by one of the witnesses, the wife of the victim, child witnesses could not be guilty of suppression.[39]

---

25. Amar Singh Bhakthawar Singh v. State, AIR 1954 Punj 282.
26. Zafar v. State of U.P., 2000 Cr LJ 3786 (para 7) (All).
27. Dalip Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1173. A young lad of 13 years, not tutored, no infirmity, corroborated, cannot be discarded, Shyam Narayan Singh v. State of Bihar, 1993 Cr LJ 772 (para 41) (Pat).
28. Kan Kanwari v. State of Rajasthan, 1957 CrLJ 688 (Raj). Evidence of 4 year old girl, victim of rape, corroborated by circumstantial evidence, sufficient to prove guilt of accused, Nagam Gangadhar v. State, 1998 Cr LJ 2200 (para 10) (AP).
29. (1976) 3 Cr LT 431 (Punj). Also see Narayan Iranna Potkanthi v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 1752 (para 14) (Bom).
30. (1975) 2 Cr LT 317 (HP).
31. State v. Chandra Prakash Kewal Chand Jain, 1990 Cr LJ 889 (SC).
32. State v. Vijairam, 1968 Cr LJ 270; State v. Roop Singh, ILR (1966) 16 Raj 252.
33. Dharm Pal v. State, AIR 1971 HP 17. Minor son of deceased, deposition free from infirmities, credible, trustworthy, no corroboration, conviction, Beti Joga v. The State, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 109 (Ori).
34. Md. Sugal Esa v. King, AIR 1946 PC 3.
35. Bharved Bhikha Valu v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1971 SC 1064. See also Sitaram v. State, AIR 1975 SC (Cri) 464; Dhansai v. State, 1967 Ori 105; Lalu v. State, 1988 Cr LJ 1301; State of Maharashtra v. Prabhu Barku Gade, 1995 Cr LJ 1432 (para 16) (Bom).
36. Nandeshwar Kalita v. State of Assam, 1983 Cr LJ 1515 (Gau).
37. Ramsingh v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 667 (Raj).
38. Harka v. State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cr LJ 1103, at p. 1106 (Raj).
39. Valummel Thommachan v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 1738 (para 21) (Ker).

14. CHILD WITNESS—CREDIBILITY

The evidence of a child witness is to be taken with great caution. Normally evidence of a child witness should not be accepted as it is notoriously dangerous unless immediately available and unless narrated before every possibility of coaching is eliminated. There should be close scrutiny of the evidence of child witnesses before the same is accepted by a Court of Law.[40]

Every child witness cannot be discredited as untrustworthy, for each case depends upon its particular facts and circumstances. The real test for accepting or rejecting the testimony is how consistent is the story related by him, how it stands the test of cross-examination and how far it fits in with the rest of the evidence and circumstances of the case.[41] Evidence of a child witness cannot be rejected if it is found reliable.[42] Regarding appreciation of the evidence of a child witness, the Court has to see the surrounding circumstances and probabilities, to assess the credibility and trust- worthiness of the evidence.[43] Whether a child witness could be believed or not depends upon the circumstances of each case.[44]

A boy of thirteen years from rural area wih mature understanding cannot be treated as a child witness.[45] Where the version of a child witness regarding an incident was found truthful the Court is justified in believing his evidence.[46] Witness aged thirteen years knowing the difference between truth and falsehood is a competent witness.[47] When the evidence of a child does not give an impression of being tutored and that statement was corroborated by two other witnesses, the finding of the lower courts based on such evidence for conviction of the accused is not impeachable in revision.[48] When the witness is not only a teenager but also the only eye-witness, the evidence has to be scrutinised with care and caution. If he is able to stand the test of cross-examination successfully and there is no infirmity in his evidence, it cannot be discarded lightly.[49] Where the eye-witnesses were of tender age between 10 to 20 years but stood the test of searching cross-examination by defence counsel, minor contradiction in their statement that the accused delivered four blows by the sharp edge of the axe and then stating that three blows were given by the blunt side was held to be trivial and did not affect the substratum of the prosecution case.[50] However, where the child witness himself sustained injuries in the course of the very transaction at the very time and the place of occurrence, his deposition was truthful and unpolluted from any external influence, conviction could be based on such evidence.[51] In a case involving abduction and killing of children, the child witness himself had escaped from abduction attempt twice from the hands of the accused and his version was supported by the evidence of his father, brushing aside of his evidence was held to be not proper.[52] Where a girl aged about 11 years had seen last her neighbour and playmate a deceased, while they were playing together and later the dead body of the deceased was recovered, her

---

40. State v. Dukhi Dei, ILR (1962) Cut 726; Ganduchi v. State of Orissa, 1985 Cr LJ 645; Narayan Kanu Datavale v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 Cr LJ 1788 (Bom). Precautions to be taken while recording statement of child witness. Sudesh Jhaku v. K C.J., 1998 Cr LJ 2428 (para 38) (Del); State of Maharashtra v. Prabhu Barku Gade, 1995 Cr LJ 1432 (para 24) (Bom); Zafar v. State of U.P., 2000 Cr LJ 3786 (para 7) (All).
41. Bhoj Raj v. Sitaram, AIR 1936 PC 60; Ranjha v. State, AIR 1951 HP 75; Avansiappa Goundan v. State of Kerala, 1960 Ker L T 435; Chandan v. Crown, AIR 1951 Punj 399.
42. Panchhi v. State of U.P., AIR 1998 SC 2726 (para 11) : 1998 Cr LJ 4044.
43. Ramachandra v. Champabai, AIR 1965 SC 354.
44. (1966) 2 AWR 338.
45. Tehal Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1347 : 1979 Cr LJ 1031, relied in Sanjay Ramchandra Tarare v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 713 (para 15) (Bom); State of M.P. v. Deoki Nandan, 1987 Cr LJ 1016 (MP).
46. Dalip Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1173.
47. Daya Singh v. State, ILR (1969) 19 Raj 317. Evidence of victims younger brother aged 14 who gave a proper account of the incident witnessed by him was accepted; Prakash v. State of M.P., AIR 1993 SC 65.
48. 1971 Al Cr R 137. See also Raj Mangal v. State, 1999 Cr LJ 2418 (para 17) (All).
49. Shivaji Genu Mohite v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 55; Kabiraj Tudu v. State of Assam, 1994 Cr LJ 432 (para 10) (Gau
50. State of Karnataka v. Maruthi, (1997) 11 SCC 473. See also stood test of lengthy and searching cross-examination, State of Maharashtra v. Raju Dadaba Borge, 2001 Cr LJ 3638 (paras 10 and 12) (Bom) and Nandeshwar v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ 4351 (paras 7 and 8) (Bom). Contra : R. Kulandavelu v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 2574 (para 20) (Mad).
51. Jasu v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 1160 (paras 14 and 17) (Raj).
52. State of Maharashtra v. Damu Gopinath Shinde, 2000 Cr LJ 2301 (para 30) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 1691, reversing 1999 (2) Mah LR 42 (Bom).

testimony could not be rejected solely on the ground that it was not possible for a child of that age to remember what had happened three years ago.[53]

There is always danger in accepting the evidence of a child witness of about twelve years as the witness might have been coached by persons who may have influence on the child.[54] Where the child witness is aged only six years, his evidence is to be approached with great caution. When serious infirmities and contradictions are found in his evidence his testimony cannot be accepted.[55] Where a child witness by reason of his age is not able to make his answers in an intelligible and coherent manner, it is unsafe to rely on such evidence as a whole.[56] Children of the age of about seven years are apt to confuse between what they saw and heard; they could easily be persuaded to believe that they saw what is vividly narrated to them, though they are not untrustworthy in the sense that they speak deliberately falsehood as adults might. [An unsworn testimony of a child is not adequately corroborated by similar evidence of other children.][57] Where an eight year old child, in front of whom his mother was killed by his father, was examined after a lapse of two months, he was not shown to be uninfluenced and also failed to give full particulars of the incident, conviction on his evidence was set aside.[58] Where the child was said to have been the occurrence when he was 8 or 9 years old and six years later he gave evidence, it was held that it was difficult to place reliance on his recollections of the occurrence, and such evidence cannot be taken to corroborate other evidence.[59] When there are major discrepencies in the evidence and the conduct of the child is also extraordinary, in the absence of any independent corroboration, it is unsafe to base a conviction.[60]

The Supreme Court held that we cannot expect much consistency in the deposition of a child of seven years. But the Judge from the tenor of the deposition of the child has to find out whether the child has been tutored or not.[61]

The Court has to closely scrutinise the answers given to the questions put to the child witness before accepting the child as a witness.[62] No presumption of untrustworthiness lies in assessing the evidence of a child witness. It has to be scrutinised carefully and see that there is no possibiliy of tutoring.[63] While dealing with evidence of a child witness the court must be careful to examine the evidence to exclude the possibility of any tutoring.[64]

The competency of a child to give evidence is not regulated by the age but by the decree of understanding he appears to possess. The question depends upon a number of circumstances like possibility of tutoring, the consistency of evidence and how far the child stood the test of cross-examination.[65]

There is no legal impediment to the admissibiliy of evidence of child.[66]

When the statement of the child witness contained inconsistencies and patent improbabilities it is indicative of the witness being tutored[67] but where the medical evidence was not in entire conflict with the occular version of the child witness which differed only regarding the number of blows inflicted and

---

53. State of Maharashtra v. Damu Gopinath Shinde, 2000 Cr LJ 2301 (paras 31 and 32) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 1691.
54. State of Bihar v. Kapil Singh, AIR 1969 SC 53; Gunduchi Patnaik v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 645.
55. C.P. Fernandes v. Union Territory, Goa, AIR 1977 SC 135.
56. Suresh v. State, AIR 1981 SC 1122.
57. Following Jalwanti Lodhin v. State, AIR 1953 Pat 246.
58. Pochammala Yellappa v. State of A.P., 1995 Cr LJ 3187 (paras 7, 8 and 9) (AP), relying on Chhagandame v. State of Gujarat, 1955 SC 182 and In re : Dake Abbayi, ILR 1956 AP 203 (DB).
59. Ouseph Varkey v. State of Kerala, AIR 1957 Ker 153.
60. Dasarathi Mahanto v. State of Orissa, (1961) 27 Cut LT 169.
61. State of Assam v. Mafizuddin, AIR 1983 SC 274. See also Tarachand v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 3604 (paras 16-18) (Raj).
62. Jalwanti Lodhin v. State, AIR 1953 Pat 246. If it is found that he understands the question and given rational answers, he can be accepted as witness: State v. Vijairam,1958 Cr LJ 270; Nafar Sheikh v. R., AIR 1914 Cal 276; Lakshan Singh v. State, AIR 1942 Pat 183; Mahomed Bachhu Miah v. State of Tripura, 1994 Cr LJ 197 (Gau).
63. Vijay Kumar v. State, ILR (1981) 2 Del 449; Prem Shankar v. State, ILR (1981) 1 Del 746 (DB); Rajaram v. State, 1959 All LJ 736; State v. Shanker Prasad, AIR 1952 All 776.
64. In re : Kanya, AIR 1960 AP 490; Harumal v. State, AIR 1951 Ajmer 25.
65. Inder Singh v. State of Pepsu, AIR 1953 Pepsu 193.
66. Korangappa v. State of Kerala, ILR (1967) 1 Ker 30; A N T O Thefa v. State, 1967 Manipur 11.
67. Brahmdeo Yadav v. State of Bihar, ILR (1979) 58 Pat 637.

which side of the weapon was used in the first instance, his version cannot be taken to be tutored merely because he was taken by the police for producing him as a witness.[68]

Where the evidence of unsophisticated school boys, not shown to be inspired by a feeling of enemity towards the accused, contained minor discrepencies, it was held that such minor discrepencies are the badge of truth rather than of falsehood and so their evidence can be relied on.[69]

Where in a dying declaration of the deceased there was no mention of the presence of her children and no explanation was offered for not recording the statements of the children immediately, it was held that it constituted a serious infirmity in assessing the testimony of the child witness.[70] Where the child witness of 11 years of age gave evidence and it was found his statement was inconsistent about when he came to the place of occurrence, and in the FIR there was no mention about the presence of the child witness or from where he saw the incident, it was held that it is unsafe to rely on his evidence.[71] Where there are material and significant contradiction in the evidence of a child witness, it is difficult to rely on such testimony and the accused is entitled to the benefit of doubt.[72]

Age of the child witness by itself is no criterion to reject the testimony.[73] A girl of five years appeared as a witness and stated that the accused, her stepmother, had thrown her and her younger sister aged about three years into the well. The question arose whether she was a competent witness because of her tender age. It was held that a child of tender years was a competent witness. The question to be decided in each case is whether a particular child who has appeared in the witness- box is intelligent enough to be able to understand as to what evidence he or she is giving and to be able to understand the question and to be able to give a rational answer.[74] The only test of competency of a child witness is his capacity to understand the questions and to give rational answers. But the question of credibility still remains to be satisfied. Being a child witness he is subject to all those frailties which are amenable to any ordinary witness and besides all these frailties, being tender in age he is likely to be tutored and therefore a precaution is to be observed to bring his testimony to a stage of credibility so that he could be stated to have proved or disproved a question of fact. For this, a corroboration is required to his statement.[75]

When the trial court satisfied itself before recording the deposition of the child witness and when it is corroborated, such evidence of the child is admissible.[76]

When the witness was found to be tutored no reliance can be kept on such evidence[77] but where the testimony of a child witness was not challenged in the cross-examination and remained uncontroverted, the fact of her admission of being tutored by her father, would not ipso facto wash her evidence on record.[78] Where the child witness was the only eye witness for the prosecution and when there were two different versions one in the committing court and another before the Sessions Court it was held that the child was tutored and as there was no corroborating evidence to connect the accused with the murder, no reliance could be placed on the child witness's evidence[79] and also where the child's version is uncorroborated and the subsequent conduct unnatural[80] and where the child admitted to have been brought to the Court by another person and was also told what to depose.[81]

---

68. Mangoo v. State of M.P., AIR 1995 SC 959 (paras 5 and 6) : 1995 Cr LJ 1461.
69. Mohan Singh Balwant Singh v. State, AIR 1965 Punj 291; Dharmpal v. State, AIR 1971 HP 17; Birisingh Majhi v. Stae of Assam, 1977 Cr LJ 1349 (Gau).
70. ILR 1984 Bom 2169.
71. Balkari v. State of Rajasthan, 1976 Cr LJ 828 (Raj); Presence of child witness at place of occurence doubtful, her statement contradictory to dying declaration, her testimony not credit worthy, Vithal Mahadev Patil v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 1796 (para 7) (Kant).
72. 1976 Raj Cr C 308.
73. (1985) 2 WLN 98 (Raj).
74. Dato v. State, (1954) Punj 825.
75. Srinivas Murthy v. State of Karnataka, 1977 (2) Kant LJ 341; Sukhram v. State of M.P., 1995 Cr LJ 595 (para 18) (MP).
76. Ram Achal v. State of U.P., 1990 Cr LJ 111 (All).
77. Haria v. State of H.P., 1975 Cr LJ 78 (HP)(DB); Pankaj Naik v. State of Orissa, 1994 Cr LJ 829 (para 7) (Ori); Chhagan Dame v. State of Gujarat, 1994 Cr LJ 56 (para 3) : AIR 1994 SC 454.
78. Sanjay v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 3347 (para 18) (Del).
79. Jogi Sahu v. State, 1970 Cr LJ 637 (Ori).
80. Krishnappa v. State of Karnataka, 1996 AIHC 1030 (paras 6 and 7) (Kant).
81. State of Karnataka v. Ningappa Bhimappa Uppar, 2000 Cr LJ 1757 (paras 2 and 4) (Kant).

In a case where the child, the daughter of the accused, was said to be sleeping at the time of occurrence and that child was staying with the accused for seven months after the occurrence it was held that it was not improper for the prosecution in not examining that child witness.[82]

Rule of prudence requires the Court to examine the evidence of a child witness with caution. However where a child witness was herself a victim of rape and gave evidence in a natural manner and where there was no strained relationship or enemity with the family of the accused, it was held that there were no circumstances to doubt her evidence.[83] In a case the minor daughter of the deceased, the eye-witness of incident, connected her mother with her father's murder and described the role played by her. She also categorically stated that her deceased father named the accused as "offenders" in his dying declaration. It was held that her version was credible.[84] Where the child immediately after the occurrence gave the details of the incident and those facts were corroborated by the medical evidence, such evidence of the child could not be discarded.[85] Otherwise standing the test of cross-examination and her evidence being untutored and corroborated it could not be rejected solely on the ground that the words spoken by the sole child witness were not in the language which she knew.[86] Merely because there is no compelling reason for a person to be present at the time of occurrence that by itself need not necessarily mean that his evidence has to be rejected.[87]

Where the evidence of the child eye-witness was inconsistent with the medical evidence and that of the evidence of other witnesses, it was not relied upon.[88]

15. LEPER

It is not proper not to produce an attesting witness who is to prove the contents of a document on the ground that he is a leper, as he could be examined on commission.[89]

16. RUSTIC WITNESS

Where the witnesses are rustics, their behaviour pattern and perceptive habits have to be judged as such. The too sophisticated approaches familiar in courts based on unreal assumptions about human conduct cannot obviously be applied to those given to the lethargic ways of villages. When scanning the evidence of the various witnesses the Court has to inform itself that variances on the fringes, discrepancies in details, contradictions in narrations and embellishments in inessential parts cannot militate against the veracity of the core of the testimony provided there is the impress of truth and conformity to probability in the substantial fabric of testimony delivered. The sluggish chronometric sence of the country-side communiy in Inida is notorious since time is hardly of the essence of their slow life; and even urban folk make mistakes about time when no particular reason to observe and remember the hour of minor event like taking a morning meal existed. Too much play on such slippery facts goes against realism so essential in a testimonial appraisal.[90]

17. POWER OF ATTORNEY HOLDER

The power of attorney holder is not entitled to appear as witness for the party so appointing him.[91] He can appear as a witness in his personal capacity and in the capacity of the party appointing him.[92]

18. SCRIBE

In Musunuri Anjaneyulu v. Koona Lakshmi,[93] it was held that endorsement on a pronote is not one of the documents which is required by the law to be attested or scribed. Hence, scribe need not be examined.

---

82. A.N.T.O. Thaba v. State of Manipur, 1967 Cr LJ 1023 : AIR 1967 Manipur 11.
83. Suresh Chand v. State of Haryana, 1976 Cr LJ 452 (P&H).
84. Kamala Sethi v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 197 (para 10) (Ori).
85. Kana Majhi v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1876 (Ori).
86. Suryanarayana v. State of Karnataka, 2001 Cr LJ 705 (paras 9 and 10) (SC).
87. State of Kerala v. Narayanan Bhaskaran, 1992 Cr LJ 238 (Ker); Kuzhiyaramadujil Madhavan v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 450 (para 11) (Ker).
88. State of M P v. Surbhan, 1996 Cr LJ 3199 (para 8) (SC) : AIR 1996 SC 3345.
89. Ramkrishna Panda v. Arjuno Padhano, AIR 1963 Ori 29.
90. Shivaji Shahebrao v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 2622.
91. Ram Prasad v. Hari Narain, AIR 1998 Raj 185 (para 8).
92. Kanakapudi Bharthy v. Authority under A.P.S.E. Act-cum-Labour Officer, 2000 AIHC 87 (para 5) (AP).
93. Musunuri Anjaneyulu v. Koona Lakshmi, AIR 1998 AP 214 (para 4).

19. PERSON OF EASY VIRTUE

Evidence of a person of easy virtue is not to be thrown away.[1]

See under Section 3.

20. ADVOCATE

A counsel who has advised the institution of a criminal case which led to a suit for malicious prosecution is a competent witness to prove good faith.[2]

The Court shall be greatly circumspect while deciding to grant permission to summon the counsel of the opposite party as a witness.[3]

21. POLICE OFFICER—WITNESS

It is not right to discard the evidence of a police officer (a prosecution witness) in the absence of evidence of his hostility to the accused.[4]

See under Section 3.

22. MEDICAL OFFICER

A medical officer to whom the deceased told that her mother-in-law had burnt her, is a competent witness and reliable though the doctor has not recorded the same in the medical register.[5]

See under Section 3.

23. INTERESTED PERSON

The fact that a witness is related to one of the parties cannot by itself be considered sufficient to warrant discarding his evidence in toto. The evidence of such witness should however be scrutinised carefully.[6] The credibility of a witness does not get affected merely because he is related to the deceased, or does not state the incident in the same language or manner which in the opinion of the Court is natural.[7] The fact that witnesses are partisan witnesses and are interested is by itself no ground for rejecting their testimony.[8] Mechanical rejection of the evidence of a close relation on the ground he is interested, is not warranted.[9]

An eye-witness, closely related to the victim is not an incompetent witness. Though his evidence cannot be disregarded it must be closely scrutinised.[10]

An interested witness means a person who wants to see the accused convicted because of his own animus. A relative may not be so interested.[11]

Because a witness is an interested witness his evidence cannot be totally disregarded.[12]

---

1. Shyam Sunder v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 35 (Del).
2. Corea v. Pieris, 14 Cal WN 86 (PC).
3. N. Yovas v. Immanueal Jose, AIR 1996 Ker 1 (paras 8-11).
4. Nathu Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1973 SC 2783.
5. Lichhamadevi v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 1785.
6. Chottia v. State, ILR (1952) Raj 258.
7. Rokad Singh v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ 494 (para 6) (MP), relying on State of U.P. v. Krishna Gopal, AIR 1988 SC 2154 : 1989 Cr C 288.
8. S.H. Kemkar v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1974 SC 1153. Also see Sarat Chandra Panda v. State of Orissa, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 17 (Ori).
9. Brathi v. State of Punjab, AIR 1991 SC 318.
10. Arana Nagireddi v. State, (1968) 1 An WR 178. (Note : see other cases under Section 3).
11. Dalbir Kaur v. Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 472; Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 2304.
12. Bishwanath v. Sachhidanand, AIR 1971 SC 1949; Government of A.P. v. B. Jaggapuram Venkateswarlu, AIR 1980 SC 1876, a woman was the only witness to the murder of her husband and two sons; she had no previous hostility towards the accused, conviction upheld.

The evidence of partisan witnesses, who were out to entrap the accused but were not willing and guilty participators in the crime, would not be tainted evidence, but it would be interested evidence which would require independent corroboration before acceptance. To convict an accused upon the uncorroborated evidence of such a person at whose instance a trap is laid by the police is neither illegal nor imprudent, but inadvisable. The panchas whom the police take with themselves before going for a raid are not members of the raiding party and therefore, their evidence does not require corroboration before acceptance.[13] Evidence of interested persons is not necessarily to be corroborated. A witness is normally to be considered independent unless such a witness has cause, such as enmity against the accused, to wish to implicate him falsely.[14]

See under Section 3.

24. ADVERSARY AS WITNESS

A party cannot be debarred from examining its adversary. The plaintiff cannot be debarred from examining the defandant as witness on his behalf. Such an order suffered from jurisdictional error and was liable to be interfered with in revision.[15]

25. EYE-WITNESS

Where the eye-witnesses categorically stated that the accused was responsible for the fatal injury on the stomach of the deceased, there being no animosity between them and the accused and their presence at the place of occurrence being proved, rejection of their version was not proper.[16]

See under Section 3.

26. FALSUS IN UNO, FALSUS IN OMNIBUS

Where a witness speaks to an entire event and in respect of a part of that version he has been disbelieved, it is not safe to accept the other part and convict an accused on that evidence.[17] The Supreme Court, however, has held that the maxim falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus (false in one thing, false in everything) is neither a sound rule of law nor a rule of practice.[18] for the reason that hardly one comes across a witness whose evidence does not contain a grain of untruth or, at any rate, exaggeration, embroidery or embellishment.[19] It is the duty of the Court to scrutinise the evidence carefully and separate the grain from the chaff.[20]

See under Section 3.

27. EXPLANATION—LUNATIC

The explanation applies to the case of a monomaniac or person afflicted with partial insanity. Such a person will be an admissible witness if the Judge finds him upon investigation capable of understanding the subject in respect of which he is required to testify.[21] An insane or an idiot is not a competent witness if he is incapacitated to such an extent that he is unable to understand the subject in reference to which he is called as a witness.

---

13. State v. Ramchand Tolaram, (1956) 58 Bom LR 90.
14. Kedar Behera v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 378 (para 6) (Ori). Evidence of injured eye-witness convincing and corroborated, couldn't be discarded merely because of being interested witness. Aidan v. State of Rajasthan, 1993 Cr LJ 2413 (para 10) (Raj).
15. Awadh Kishore Singh v. Brij Bihari Singh, AIR 1993 Pat 122 (para 16), distinguishing CR No. 1525 of 1968, Dt. 3rd March, 1971.
16. State of Maharashtra v. Rajendra Garbad Patil, 1994 Cr LJ 145 : AIR 1994 SC 475.
17. Jamal Mohammed v. State, ILR 1954 TC 1086.
18. Ugar Ahir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1965 SC 277.
19. Sohrab v. State of M.P., AIR 1972 SC 2020.
20. Ugar Ahir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1965 SC 277.
21. Hill's case, (1851) 2 Den CC 254, Spittle v. Walton, (1851) LR 11 Eq 420.

28. INCOMPETENCY FROM DEFECTIVE INTELLECT

A witness may be incompetent because he or she is prevented by mental illness, drunkenness and the like, from understanding the nature of the oath (where that is the test) or from understanding the questions asked and giving answers which can be understood.[22] But the incapacity is only co-extensive with the defect; thus, a mentally ill person is competent during a lucid interval, a drunkard upon his return to sobriety.[23] Where incapacity is merely temporary, the judge may, in his discretion, provided the application is made before the jury is sworn, postpone the trial until it is removed.[24] A person may still be a competent witness if that person's mental illness affects only one aspect of his or her character and does not diminish his or her capacity to recall information on the subject which is relevant to the proceedings or to appreciate the nature of an oath.[25]

Where the main issue in a case is the sanity of a particular person it may be undesirable to make a separate attempt to assess that person's competence as a witness, and testimony has been received where the issue was the witness's own sanity.[26] (PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), page 151, para 8.10).

29. TESTIMONIAL COMPULSION

Testimonial compulsion is the very foundation of the Law of Evidence for without such compulsion every refusal to give evidence will render administration of justice impossible. It is not legal fetish. It is a necessary and also the general rule.[27]

30. APPRECIATION OF EVIDENCE

Where the mother of the child witness was done away with a heavy single blow of an axe (tikav), it was held that the incident must have been over even before the nine year old child eye-witness could have thought of running away.[28]

See under Section 3.

Dumb witnesses.

S. 119. A witness who is unable to speak may give his evidence in any other manner in which he can make it intelligible, as by writing or by signs; but such writing must be written and the signs made in open Court. Evidence so given shall be deemed to be oral evidence.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section deals with the evidence of dumb witnesses.

When a deaf-mute is a witness the Court will ascertain before he is examined that he possesses the requisite amount of intelligence, and that he understands the nature of an oath. A deaf-mute's evidence may be taken (a) by written questions to which he may reply in writing or (b) by means of signs.

A dumb witness either by writing or by signs can make intelligible of what he has to speak. If he is able to communicate his statement perfectly by writing, it is a more satisfactory method of taking evidence.[29] When the dumb witness is not able to write, then he can make sings showing what he wants to say. If it is by signs, those sings must be recorded and not the interpretation of those signs. Where the

---

22. R. v. Lee, (1988) Crim LR 525 CA. See also Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999, S. 53.
23. R. v. Hill, 2 Den 254; Spittle v. Walton, LR 11 Eq 420; R. v. Dunning, (1965) Crim LR 372.
24. R. v. Wade, 1 Moo CC 86; R. v. White, 1 Lea 430n.
25. R. v. Barratt, (1996) Crim LR 495 CA, where the witness's fixed belief paranoia caused her to have bizarre beliefs about her private life but did not render her incompetent to give evidence of finding fingerprints.
26. Hunter v. Edney, 10 PD 93.
27. Kanakapudi Bharthi v. Authority under A.P.S.E. Act-cum-Labour Officer, 2000 AIHC 87 (para 5).
28. State of Maharashtra v. Prabhu Barku Gade, 1995 Cr LJ 1432 (para 22) (Bom).
29. Morrison v. Lennard, (1827) 3 S&P 127.

victim of the assault lost the power of speech, and in evidence he made signs and the trial court recorded the signs in respect of some questions but not of all questions for which only interpretations were recorded, it was held that recording interpretations of the signs is not a proper compliance with Section 119.[30] When a witness was not examined on the ground that he was unable to speak, it was held that, that such a ground was improper and the witness could have given evidence by writing, or signs and it could be reckoned as oral evidence.[31] It was held that that when a person was observing a vow of silence and was not able to speak on that ground, his evidence may be taken in writing without forcing him to break his religious vow and it must be taken that he is "unable to speak" within the meaning of this section.[32]

Examination of a deaf and dumb witness without the assistance of an expert or person familiar with his mode of conveying ideas to others in day to day life, is wrong and cannot be relied on.[33] When the services of an interpreter are required by any criminal court for the interpretation of any evidence or statement of a dumb person, the interpretor shall be bound to state the true interpretation of such evidence or statement under Section 119.[34] Where the prosecutrix, the victim of rape was dumb, evidence of the Principal, Govt. Residential School for Deaf as her interpreter is an expert evidence and her testimony with the help of such interpreter can be relied upon.[35] Doubts have been expressed as to whether the aid of an interpreter can be sought as no mention is made in this section of an interpreter. It is however submitted that as the purpose of signs is to make out what the witness has to say, the court is entitled to seek the aid of an interpreter to understand the witness.

When it is impossible to make the deaf and dumb person understand the questions put to him in cross-examination he is not a competent witness under the section.[36] Deaf and dumb persons, unable by writing or signs to communicate their answers and to understand questions put to them are not competent witnesses.

Parties to civil suit, and their wives or husbands. Husband or wife of person under criminal trial.

S. 120. In all civil proceedings the parties to the suit, and the husband or wife of any party to the suit, shall be competent witnesses. In criminal proceedings against any person, the husband or wife of such person, respectively , shall be a competent witness.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Under this section, in civil proceedings the parties and the husband or wife of any party to the suit are regarded as competent witnesses. The section also deals with criminal proceedings, wherein the husband or wife of the accused shall be a competent witness.

Parties in civil proceedings are competent witnesses and therefore their testimony is to be scrutinised in the same manner as that of any other witness. There is no inflexible rule that if a party gives his testimony he must be disbelieved because he is a party to the suit.[37] In a suit for specific performance of an agreement of sale, the purchaser wife pleaded to have no knowledge of the previous agreement of sale but did not enter the witness-box. Her husband, being a competent witness, entered the witness-box and gave necessary evidence instead of his wife. It was held that non-examination of the wife would be of no consequence.[38]

---

30. Kumbhar Musa Alib v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1966 Guj 101; see also R. v. Abdulla, ILR (1885) 7 All 385 (FB) (signs made by a dying woman were admitted as statement)
31. Asit Nath Das v. Snehalata Devi, (1969) 73 Cal WN 820. Contra : no adverse inference can be drawn against prosecution by non-examination, Kishan Singh v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 2027 (para 17) (Raj).
32. Lakhan Singh v. R., ILR (1941) 20 Pat 898 : AIR 1942 Pat 183.
33. Kadungoth Alavi v. State of Kerala, 1982 Cr LJ 94 (Ker).
34. Abdul Rahman Kunju v. Misariya Beevi, 1979 Ker LT 123.
35. Public Prosecutor, A.P. High Court v. Lingisetty Sreenu, 1997 Cr LJ 4003 (AP).
36. Venkattan v. Emperor, 1912 MWN 100.
37. Bhanwar Lal Vaid v. Bhanwar Lal Agarwal, ILR (1951) Raj 1.
38. K. Saroja v. Valliammal Ammal, 1997 AIHC 1959 (para 29) (Mad).

Parties to the suit are not only competent witnesses but are witnesses whose duty is to assist the court. Where a party whose evidence is material does not give evidence the court should presume against him.

2. ACCUSED

In criminal cases an accused is not a competent witness. However he can be examined under Section 342(4) of old Cr.P.C. (now Section 313). In proceedings against a person under Section 107, under Chapter X to XII, Chapter XXVI or under Section 552 of old Cr.P.C., now Section 98 such person is a competent witness. In English Law an accused person of his/her, wife/husband is not a competent witness.

The section deviates from the rule of English Law namely that husband and wife are not competent to give evidence for or against each other. So far as the wife and husband are concerned there is a restriction contained in Section 122 of this Act which says that no person who is or has been married shall be compelled to disclose any communications made during the subsistence of marriage to each other. Even there an exception is made relating to suits between married persons or proceedings in which one married person is prosecuted for any crime committed against the other. This section is subject to Section 122. (See commentary on Section 122).

Even at English Common Law, however, an exception was always made, from necessity, in cases of personal violence or forcible marriage, and perhaps also from public policy, in cases of treason. By statute also this general incompetence has been gradually removed, in both civil and criminal cases[39] (PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), Para 8-05, page 150).

Section 118 makes all persons competent witnesses which includes wife and husband. They are competent to prove non-access.[40]

See for further discussion cases under Section 112.

In divorce proceedings the English Rule was that neither the husband nor the wife can be examined for purpose of proving non-access during the marriage.[41] It was followed in India in Sweeney v. Sweeney.[42] It may be noted that by Matrimonial Causes Act, 1949, it was made possible for the parents to give evidence about access or non-access during the subsistence of marriage. (PHIPSON 13th Edn., page 291, para 15.02) Now see Matrimonial Causes Act, 1965, S. 43.

The old privilege relating to the question of adultery in divorce cases has been abolished by the Civil Evidence Act, 1968, S. 16(5), and this section governs testimony, discovery and interrogatories.[43]

In application for divorce on the ground of impotency under the Hindu Marriage Act, the parties are allowed to give evidence.[44] In a petition for nullity of marriage by a wife on the ground of husband's incapacity, where the wife waited for seven years since her marriage before filing the petition and the husband did not contest the allegation, the wife's evidence was accepted without corroboration.[45] In a husband's petition for dissolution of marriage on the ground of wife's adultery and desertion, when both the respondents remained ex parte, it was held that petitioner's evidence without any corroboration was sufficient for granting relief.[46] Truthfulness of the statement of the wife, the eye-witness, could not be

---

39. For civil cases see, 21 Jac. 1, c. 19, S. 6; the Country Courts Act, 1846, S. 83; Evidence Amendment Act, 1853, S. 1; the Evidence Further Amendment Act, 1869, S. 3; and the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1949, S. 7; Matrimonial Cases Act, 1973, S. 48. For criminal cases see, Criminal Evidence Act, 1898; Sexual Offences Act, 1956, S. 39; Theft Act, 1968, S. 30; Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984, S. 80; Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act, 1999, S. 53 and Sched. 4, para 13.
40. Howe v. Howe, 38 Mad 466 (FB); Mayandi Asari v. Sami Asari, ILR 55 Mad 292 : AIR 1932 Mad 44; Vira Reddy v. Kistamma, AIR 1969 Mad 235; Shantabai v. Dalchand, AIR 1953 Nag 374; Venkateswarlu v. Venkatanarayana, AIR 1954 SC 176; Shyam Sing v. Sai Balini Ghose, AIR 1947 Cal 183; Bai Kamla v. Babubhai, AIR 1926 Bom 385; G.R. Sane v. D.S. Sanavane & Co., AIR 1946 Bom 110; Hanumantha Rao v. Ramachandrayya, AIR 1944 Mad 376.
41. Russel v. Russel, 1924 AC 687.
42. ILR 62 Cal 1080; Premchand Hira v. Bai Galal, AIR 1927 Bom 594.
43. Nast v. Nast and Walker, (1972) Fam 142 (CA).
44. T. Rangaswami v. T. Aravindammal, AIR 1957 Mad 243.
45. Suvarna bahen v. Rashmi Kant, AIR 1970 Guj 43.
46. Antoniswamy v. Anna Manickam, AIR 1970 Mad 91.

disbelieved simply because of her emotional reaction while witnessing the murder of her husband was different from what it should have been, in the opinion of the Court.[47]

Proceedings under old Section 488 Cr.P.C. old (Section 125 new) are in the nature of civil proceedings within the meaning of this section and the person who is sought to be charged for maintenance is a competent witness on his own behalf.[48]

Judges and Magistrates.

S. 121. No Judge or Magistrate shall, except upon the special order of some Court to which he is subordinate, be compelled to answer any questions as to his own conduct in Court as such Judge or Magistrate, or as to anything which came to his knowledge in Court as such Judge or Magistrate; but he may be examined as to other matters which occurred in his presence whilst he was so acting.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) A, on his trial before the Court of Session, says that a deposition was improperly taken by B, the Magistrate. B cannot be compelled to answer questions as to this, except upon the special order of a superior Court.

(b) A is accused before the Court of Session of having given false evidence before B, a Magistrate. B cannot be asked what A said, except upon the special order of the superior Court.

(c) A is accused before the Court of Session of attempting to murder a police-officer whilst on his trial before B, a Sessions Judge. B may be examined as to what occurred.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1170
2. Judges and Magistrates as witness ... 1171
3. Juror ... 1172
4. Arbitrator ... 1172
5. Powers of appellate court ... 1173

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Under this section a Judge or Magistrate shall not be compelled to answer questions as to (a) his conduct in Court as such Judge or Magistrate, or (b) anything which came to his knowledge in Court as such Judge or Magistrate, except upon the order of a Court to which he is subordinate. He may be examined as to other matters which occurred in his presence while he was so acting.

Sections 121-132 declare exceptions to the general rules that a witness is bound to tell the whole truth, and to produce any document in his possession or power relevant to the matter in issue.[49] They deal with the privilege of certain classes of witnesses.

The privilege given by this section is the privilege of the witness, that is, of the Judge or Magistrate of whom the question is asked. If he waives such privilege, or does not object to answer such question, it does not lie in the mouth of any other person to assert the privilege.[50] The privilege of the Judge or the Magistrate, extends only "to his own conduct in Court as such Judge or Magistrate, or as to anything which came to his knowledge in Court as such Judge or Magistrae".

A distinctiosn should be drawn between questions which a witness cannot be compelled to answer (Sections 121, 124 and 125) and those which he cannot be permitted to answer (Sections 123 and 126). The latter class of questions might properly be forbidden but questions of the former class are in no way barred; a witness has merely the right of refusing to answer such questions, without any hostile inference being drawn from his refusal. The most that a Court can do, in the case of a witness who is ignorant of 47. Aidan v. State of Rajasthan, 1993 Cr LJ 2413 (para 16) (Raj).

---

48. Tokebibee v. Abdool Khan, ILR 5 Cal 536; Nur Mohammed v. Bismulla Jan, ILR 16 Cal 781; Hiralal v. Saheb Jan, ILR 18 All 107; Rozario v. Ingles, ILR (1894) 18 Bom 468.
49. Queen v. Gopal Doss, ILR (1881) 3 Mad 271, 277 (FB).
50. Empress of India v. Chidda Khan, ILR (1881) 3 All 573 (FB).

his privilege, is to warn him that he need not answer. But if the witness elects to waive his privilege of refusing to answer, his answer is admissible in evidence.[51]

2. JUDGES AND MAGISTRATES AS WITNESS

Judges and Magistrate are competent witnesses R. v. Chidda Khan,[52] but they cannot be compelled to answer any question as to their conduct in court as such Judges or Magistrates (Best Art. 181). As a matter of public policy Judges enjoy these and other privileges. A judge is as competent and compellable a witness as any other person in regard to a matter which he comes to know otherwise than in his capacity as a judge.

"Although, however, judges and juries may, in arriving at decisions, use their general information and that knowledge of the common affairs of life which men of ordinary intelligence possess,[53] they may not, as might juries formerly, act on their own private knowledge or belief regarding the facts of the particular case.[54]

However there is another line of cases which shows that a judge may rely on his own local knowledge where he does so "properly and within reasonable limits".[55] This judicial function appears to be acceptable where "the type of knowledge is of a quite general character and is not liable to be varied by specific individual characteristics of the individual case".[56] This test appears to allow a judge to use what might be called "Special (or local) general knowledge," and its application presents inferior and appellate courts with a task of some nicety.[57] It has been held that justices acted properly in using their knowledge of local tidal conditions.[58]" (PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE 15th Edn. (2000), paras 2-08, 2-09, pages 33, 34).

A judge may waive his privilege and choose not to object to answer any question in which case it is not open to any other person to assert that privilege.[59]

"A Judge, before whom the cause is tried, must conceal any fact within his own knowledge, unless he be first sworn, and, consequently, if he be the sole Judge, it seems that he cannot depose as a witness, though if he be sitting with others, he may then be sworn and give evidence. In this last case, the proper course appears to be that the Judge, who has thus become a witness, should leave the bench, and take no further judicial part in the trial, because he can hardly be deemed capable of impartially deciding on the admissibility of his own testimony, or of weighing it against that of another."[60]

A person having to exercise judicial functions may give evidence in a case pending before him when such evidence can and must be submitted to the independent judgment of other persons exercising similar judicial functions sitting with him at the same time.[61]

Where a Judge is the sole Judge of law and fact, he cannot give evidence before himself or import matters into his judgment not stated on oath before the Court in the presence of the accused.[62] The accused is entitled to have nothing stated against him in the judgment which was not stated on oath in his

---

51. Mahomed Aly v. Emperor, (1909) 12 Cr LJ 277.
52. ILR (1881) 3 All 573 (FB).
53. Peart v. Blockow, Vaughan & Co., (1925) 1 KB 399; see also Byrne v. Londonderry Co., (1902) 2 IR 457; approved in Hennessy v. Keating, (1908) 1 IR 43, 83; R v. Jones, (1970) 54 Cr. App. R. 63, 68.
54. R v. Sutton, (1816) 4 M&S 532; Palmer v. Crone, (1927) 1 KB 804; R v. Antrim J.J., (1895) 2 IR 603, 649. But see R v. Blick, (1966) 50 Cr App R 280, where a juror passed a note to the judge informing him of the juror's knowledge of a particular locality which was at variance with the defendant's testimony, whereupon rebutting evidence was called by the prosecution.
55. Reynolds v. Llanelly Associated Tinplate Co., (1948) 1 All ER 140, (per LORD GREENE, M.R.).
56. Ibid.
57. See Keane v. Mount Vernson Colliery Co., (1933) AC 309, esp. at 317; Owens v. Llay Marri Collieries Ltd., (1932) 25 BWCC 573; Roberts & Ruthven Ltd. v. Hall, (1912) 106 LT 769; Mothersdale v. Cleveland Bridge & Engineering Co., (1930) 142 LT 541.
58. Ingram v. Percival, (1969) 1 QB 548. See also Borthwick v. Vickers, (1973) RTR 394 (DC).
59. R. v. Cludarshan, 3A 573 (FB).
60. TAYLOR, 12th Edn. 1379, p. 870.
61. Queen v. Mookta Singh, (1870) 13 WR (Cr) 60.
62. Queen-Empress v. Manikam, ILR (1896) 19 Mad 263; Empress v. Donnelly, ILR (1877) 2 Cal 405.

presence, and which he had no oportunity of testing by cross-examination and rebutting.[63] If the Judge knew any facts concerning the case, he is bound to state to the accused, so far as he could, what were the facts he himself observed, and to which he himself could bear testimony, and the accused in such situation has a right, if he thought it desirable, to cross- examine the Judge, whose evidence should be recorded, and form part of the record in the case.[64]

A Judge would not be justified to act on his own knowledge and belief or on public rumours.[65] A Magistrate should not decide a case relying on statement made to him out of court.[66] Without giving evidence as a witness a Judge or Magistrate cannot import his own knowledge into a case.[67] When a Judge has any interest in the subject-matter or takes any part in the prosecution case he is disqualified from trying that case.[68]

It was held that inaccuracy on the part of a Magistrate in making notes of injuries on the person of the complainant is not a ground to call for answers and not a ground for transfer of the case.[69]

3. JUROR

The Calcutta High Court held that jurors are not to be examined as to the grounds on which they have based their verdict.[70]

4. ARBITRATOR

The term Judge or Magistrate is not defined in this Act. Though, Section 3 defines court, it excludes arbitrators. Therefore, the arbitrators would not be within the rule of this section to claim privilege. Normally, the arbitrator would not be summoned to give evidence to show how he arrived at the conclusions in a matter.[71] But when mala fides are attributed and if it is found that there is some prima facie case, the court may summon the arbitrator.[72]

An arbitrator who is selected by the parties would come within the general obligation of being bound to give evidence.

The Privy Council observed,[73] "An arbitrator, selected by the parties, comes within the general obligation being bound to give evidence, and where a charge of dishonesty or partiality is made, any relevant evidence which he can give is without doubt properly admissible. It is, however, necessary to take care that evidence admitted as relevant on a charge of dishonesty or partiality is not used for a different purpose; namely, to scrutinize the decision of the arbitrator on matters within his jurisdiction, and on which his decision is final.

When a petition was filed to amend a decree passed on the basis of an award given by an arbitrator, on the ground of certain clerical mistakes in the proceedings of the arbitrator; it was held that it is open to the court to examine the arbitrator to find out whether any slip or omission had entered in the proceedings.[74]

---

63. Girish Chunder Ghose v. Queen-Empress, ILR (1893) 20 Cal 857, 866: Hari Kishore Mitra v. Abdul Baki Miah, ILR (1894) 21 Cal 920.
64. Hurro Chunder Paul, In re : (1873) 20 WR (Cr) 76.
65. Meethum Bibee v. Busheer Khan, (1867) 11 MIA 213: Satrughan v. R., 50 IC 357.
66. Sri Balusu v. Sri Balusu, (1898) 22 Mad 427; R. v. Sahadev, ILR (1890) 14 Bom 572.
67. Kishore Singh v. Ganesh Mookerjee, 9 WR 252; Haropd v. Sheo Dayal, 26 WR 55: Girish Chunder v. R., ILR 20 Cal 857.
68. R v. Pheroz Sha Pestonji, ILR 18 Bom 442: Aloo Nathu v. Gayusha Dipsangji, ILR (1894) 19 Bom 608: Loburi Domini v. Assam Railway Co., 10 Cal 915. (See also Section 479 Cr PC of 1973).
69. D.J. Vaghela v. Kantibai, 1985 Cr LJ 974 (Guj).
70. Emperor v. Derajtulla Sheikh, AIR 1930 Cal 443.
71. M.C. Verghese v. T.J. Poonan, AIR 1970 SC 1876.
72. Union of India v. Orient Engineering & Co., (1978) 1 SCR 632 : AIR 1977 SC 2445: approving Khublal v. Bishambhar Sahai, AIR 1925 All 103.
73. Amir Begum v. Badr-u-ddin, 36 All 336 : AIR 1919 PC 105.
74. Narayanan Nair v. Devaki Amma, AIR 1945 Mad 230.

5. POWER OF APPELLATE COURT

Section 121 of the Evidence Act empowers the appellate court to question the trial court on matters relating to the proceedings before him and the answers to such questions should certainly be taken into account while deciding the appeal.[75]

Communications during marriage.

S. 122. No person who is or has been married shall be compelled to disclose any communication made to him during marriage by any person to whom he is or has been married; nor shall he be permitted to disclose any such communication, unless the person who made it, or his representative in interest, consents, except in suits between married persons, or proceedings in which one married person is prosecuted for any crime committed against the other.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope ... 1173
2. 'Shall not be permitted' ... 1174
3. 'During marriage' ... 1174
4. 'Representative in interest' ... 1174
5. Communication ... 1174
6. Except in suits..... against the others ... 1176
7. Crime committed against another 1178

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Section 120 enables the wife or husband to be a competent witness in civil as well as in criminal proceedings. But this section deals with the privilege affecting compellability from disclosure of all communications between wife and husband during the subsistence of a marriage, except in some cases between them for example proving non-access.

This section "rests on the obvious ground that the admission of such testimony would have a powerful tendency to disturb the peace of families to promote domestic broils, and to weaken, if not to destroy, that feeling of mutual confidence which is the most endearing solace of married life. The protection is not confined to cases where the communication sought to be given in evidence is of a strictly confidential character, but the seal of the law is placed upon all communications of whatever nature which pass between husband and wife. It extends also to cases in which the interests of strangers are solely involved, as well as to those in which the husband or wife is party on the record. It is, however, limited of such matters as have been communicated 'during the marriage'.[76] This section limits the rule enunciated in S. 120.

Under this section a married person shall not be:

(1) compelled to disclose any communication made to him during marriage by any person to whom he is married; and

(2) permitted to disclose any such communication, except

(a) when the person who made it or his representative in interest consents or

(b) in suits between married persons, or

(c) in proceedings in which one married person is prosecuted for any crime committed against the other.

STEPHEN in his DIGEST (Art. 110) states "The protection afforded by this section is greater than that conferred by the English Law, because in India, the witness is not permitted to disclose communications, so that the person making it, as well as the witness to whom it is made, is protected. But in England only the witness is protected."

---

75. Banke Biharilal v. Mahadeo Prasad, AIR 1953 All 97.
76. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., 909 AP 572; Emperor v. Ram Chandra, (1932) 35 Bom LR 174; Fateh Singh v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 88 (paras 6 and 7) (All).

The prohibition under this section rests on no technicality that can be waived at will, but is founded on a principle of high import which no court is entitled to relax.[77]

The first part of the section deals with a case where the witness does not wish to disclose the communication. In such a case the witness shall not be compelled to disclose it. The second part deals with a case where the witness is willing to disclose the communication. Even then the witness shall not be permitted to do so without the consent of the husband or wife of the witness.

The provisions of this section do not apply to communications to a mistress.[78]

2. 'SHALL NOT BE PERMITTED'

Even if one of the spouses is willing to disclose a communication, he or she will not be permitted to disclose it unless the person who made it or his representative in interest consents, except in suits or prosecutions between married persons. The consent cannot be implied. It is incumbent upon the Court to ask the party against whom the evidence is to be given.

The Supreme Court in M.C. Verghese v. T.J. Ponnen[79] reversing the decision in T.J. Ponnen v. M.C. Verghese[80] held that the communication between the spouses during the marriage cannot be disclosed or deposed to by the spouse without the consent of the other who made the communication.

3. 'DURING MARRIAGE'

The protection conferred by the section is limited to such matters as have been communicated during marriage. A communication made to a woman before marriage would not be protected. But the privilege continues even after the marriage has been dissolved by death or divorce. The bar to the admissibility in evidence of communications made during marriage attaches at the time when the communication is made, and its admissibility will be adjudged in the light of the status at that date and not the status at the date when evidence is sought to be given in Court.[81]

When a communication was between the accused and his wife after the wife obtained a divorce decree, it was held that the marriage cannot be treated as subsisting after the divorce decree and hence the communication was not made during marriage so as to come within the protection under Section 122.[82]

4. 'REPRESENTATIVE IN INTEREST'

A communication may be disclosed with the consent of the husband or wife or his/her representative in interest.

Where there is no "representative in interest" who can consent, under this section, to the disclosure of communications made by a deceased husband to his wife during marriage, the wife should not be permitted, even if willing, to disclose such communications. The widow of a deceased husband is not his "representative in interest," for the purpose of giving such consent.[83]

5. COMMUNICATION

The ban of the section is confined to communications only. A wife can testify to the deeds of her husband of which she was the eye-witness.[84]

This is so because Section 120 declares her to be a competent witness against her husband. This approach obviates the difficulties experienced by English law in this respect. The accused was charged with two counts of assault occasioning actual bodily harm on his 8 months' old daughter. On both the

---

77. Nawab Howladar v. Emperor, ILR (1913) 40 Cal 891.
78. Shankar v. State of T.N., 1994 Cr LJ 3071 (paras 27 and 35) (SC).
79. (1970) 2 SCJ 353 : AIR 1970 SC 1876. See also Nagaraj v. State of Karnataka, 1996 Cr LJ 2901 (para 25) (Kant)
80. AIR 1967 Ker 228.
81. M.C. Verghese v. T.J. Ponnan, AIR 1970 SC 1876.
82. S.J. Choudhary v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 622 (Del).
83. Nawab Howladar v. Emperor, ILR (1913) 40 Cal 891.
84. Ram Bharose v. State of U.P., AIR 1954 SC 704.

occasions the baby suffered multiple injuries to her face and head. The wife implicated her husband. It was not disputed that the accused was left at home with the baby and that the baby suffered injuries. The accused tried to lay the blame upon the 22½ years old brother of the baby but that was found to be factually false. Even so the Court held that the wife was not a compellable witness. She could choose to save her marriage by refusing to testify.[85]

A wife was not allowed to tell what her husband told her about a murder with which he was charged.[86]

The Supreme Court observed "The statements of the accused to his wife that he would give her jewels and he had gone to the house of the deceased to get them are inadmissible under Section 122. But the wife's statement that the accused was seen in the early hours, while it was dark, coming down the roof of his house and that he went to the Bhusa Kothri and came out again and had a bath and put on the dhoti again is not inadmissible under Section 122 as it has reference to acts and conducts of the accused and not to any communication by him to his wife."[87]

A document, even though it contains a communication from a husband to a wife or vice versa, in the hands of third persons, is admissible in evidence; for, in producing it there is no compulsion on or permission to the wife or husband to disclose any communication. The section protects the individuals, and not the communications if it can be proved without putting into the box for that purpose the husband or the wife to whom the communication was made.[88] A communication can be proved in any other way without putting the husband and the wife into the witness box.[89] In a case before the House of Lords the appellant a member of the crew of a ship gave a sealed cover addressed to his wife to another member of the crew, asking him to post that cover outside an English port. The member to whom it was given, handed over the cover to the captain of the ship, who opened it at the request of the police. It appeared that the contents of the letter were tantamount to a confession of a murder by the appellant. It was held that the letter was admissible in evidence; that unless the spouse is a witness and claims privilege, it is admissible and a witness other than the spouse can give evidence in respect of that communication.[90]

VISCOUNT REDCLIFFE in a judgement dissenting from the majority view held that the legal policy of marriage in relation to the law of evidence was the general one to ensure conjugal confidence, that the courts concerned was that no marriage relation, while it subsisted should be infected by the fear or suspicion, that things said only by reason of the special confidence might later become the material of legal evidence affecting the speaker. That principle is wider than that of excluding witnesses on the ground of interest in the subject-matter of the suit.

In a later case in Duchess of Argyll v. Duke of Argyll[91] approving the dissenting judgment of VISCOUNT REDCLIFFE, it was held that the confidential communications between husband and wife during coverture were within the scope of the court's protection against the breach of confidence. Subsequent to the case of Duchess of Argyll v. Duke of A, Section 43(1) Matrimonial Causes Act of 1965, was repealed by Section 16(4), Civil Evidence Act of 1968, making it possible in England for a husband or wife to give evidence of marital intercourse. Even in civil cases as per Section 16(3) of the Civil Evidence Act of 1968 there is no privilege in England.

Letters written by husband to wife were held to be provable otherwise than through wife.[92] On a trial for the offence of breach of trust by a public servant, a letter was tendered in evidence for the prosecution which had been sent by the accused to his wife at Pondicherry and had been found on a search of her house made there by the police; it was held that the letter was admissible in evidence against the accused.[93] The communication between husband and wife is not protected if it can be proved

---

85. R v. Rut, (1982) 3 All ER 63, noted All ER Annual Rev 1982 at 138 a direct consequence of the rulings in Leach v. R., (1912) AC 305 and R. v. Hoskyn, (1978) 2 All ER 136 to the effect that even when she is competent she is not compellable.
86. Ram Chandra v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Bom 153 : 1985 Raj LR 1018.
87. Ram Bharose v. State of U.P., AIR 1954 SC 704.
88. Queen-Empress v. Donaghue, (1898) 22 Mad 1.
89. Verghese v. Ponnan, AIR 1970 SC 1876 : (1970) 2 SCJ 353.
90. Rumping v. D.P.P., (1962) 3 All ER 256 (HL).
91. (1965) 1 All ER 611.
92. A. Manibhushana Rao v. A. Surya Rantam, AIR 1981 AP 58.
93. Queen-Empress v. Donaghue, ILR (1898) 22 Mad 1, 4.

without their assistance and by letting evidence of overhearers for e.g., extra-judicial confession which was overheard by others.[94]

6. EXCEPT IN SUITS..... AGAINST THE OTHERS

Under this section a person is permitted to disclose the communication in suits between married persons or in proceedings in which one married person is prosecuted for any crime committed against the other.

Marital communications can be proved by evidence of the over-hearers.[95] Confession to wife in the presence of others were allowed to be proved by others.[96]

Regarding privilege in divorce proceedings see commentary under Section 120.

7. CRIME COMMITTED AGAINST ANOTHER

The words "proceeding in which one married person is prosecuted for crime committed against the other" in Section 122 refer to such crimes as assault or bodily injuries, wrongful confinement, etc., by one of the spouses against the other; there may be also other forms of crime but the gist of this exception is that it must be the crime committed by one married person against the other; the question whether an unlicensed pistol was in the possession of the husband or the wife cannot be said to involve any crime committed by one against the other; but the wife cannot be compelled to disclose what she was told by her husband (accused) in her conversation with him.[97]

An offence against a son is not an offence against the husband and a confession by a woman to her husband that she murdered the son is not admissible.[98]

A prosecution for bigamy/adultery would be a crime committed against the husband or wife as the case may be.

Evidence as to affairs of State.

S. 123. No one shall be permitted to give any evidence derived from unpublished official records relating to any affairs of State, except with the permission of the officer at the head of the department concerned, who shall give or withhold such permission as he thinks fit.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope ... 1176
2. Section 123 Evidence Act and Section 94(1) (Section 91 New) of Criminal Procedure Code 1179
3. No officer can be permitted to give any evidence ... 1179
4. Unpublished official records ... 1180
5. Relating to any affairs of the State ... 1180
6. Not affairs of State ... 1183
7. Officer at the head of the department concerned ... 1184
8. Head of the department—Certain cases ... 1184
9. Who shall give or withhold such permission as he thinks fit ... 1185
10. Constitution and Section 123 ... 1187
11. Manner in which privilege is to be claimed ... 1188
12. Except with the permission ... 1188

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section deals with the privilege of unpublished official records relating to any affairs of the State from being produced.

---

94. Appu v. State, AIR 1971 Mad 194.
95. Appu v. State, AIR 1971 Mad 194.
96. Ibid.
97. Norendra Nath v. State, AIR 1951 Cal 140.
98. Fatima v. Emperor, (1950) 15 Cr LJ 613.

This section is in the nature of an exception to the general rule of admissibility under the Evidence Act.[1]

This section involves two things: (1) That the document is an unpublished official record relating to any affairs of State, and (2) that the officer at the head of the department concerned may give or withhold the permission for giving the evidence derived therefrom. On the grounds of public policy, evidence derived from unpublished official records of State cannot be given, except with the permission of the head of the department concerned.

In HALSBURY 4th Edn. Vol. 17, para 238, Page 167 it is stated: "Secrets of State (For offences in respect of official secrets, see CRIMINAL LAW, Vol. II, Paras. 809 et. seq.). The Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and his offers may not disclose information coming to their knowledge in the course of their investigations, and they may not be compelled to give evidence of such matters except in certain specified proceedings: (Parliamentary Commissioner Act, 1967, Section II(2); see PARLIAMENT). State papers, confidential official documents and communications between the Government and its officers or between such officers are inadmissible in evidence if their disclosure would be contrary to the public interest.[2]

It was held that the protection is based on the broad principle of State policy and public convenience. The papers protected, as might have been expected, have usually been public official documents of a political or administrative character; yet, the rule is not limited to these documents; its foundation is that the information cannot be disclosed without injury to the public interest and not that the documents are confidential, which alone is no reason for their non-production.[3]

The Supreme Court held by the majority that the documents which embodied the minutes of the meetings of the Council of Ministers and indicate the advice which the Council of Ministers gave to the Raj Pramukh and the documents embodying the advice tendered by the Public Service Commission to the Council of Ministers are protected under Section 123 and if the head of the department does not give permission for their production, the court cannot compel the State to produce them. The advice given by the Cabinet to the Raj Pramukh or the Governor is expressly saved by Article 163(3) of the Constitution. The report received by the Council of Ministers from the Public Service Commission carries on its face the character of a document, the disclosure of which would lead to the injury to the public interest. It falls in that class of documents which on grounds of public interest must as a class be withheld from the production.[4]

The majority overruled.[5]

In a separate judgment while agreeing with the majority view SUBBARAO J., gave the scope of the section in clear terms at para 105 as follows : "The aforesaid discussion yields the following propositions: (1) under Section 162 of the Evidence Act the court has the overriding power to disallow a claim of privilege raised by the State in respect of an unpublished document pertaining to matters of State; but in its discretion, the court will exercise its power only in exceptional circumstances when public interest demands that is, when the public interest served by the disclosure clearly outweighs that served by the non-disclosure. One of such instances is where the public interest served by the administration of justice in a particular case overrides all other aspects of public interest. (2) The said claim shall be made by an affidavit filed by the Minister in charge of the department concerned describing the nature of the document in general and broadly the category of public interest its non-disclosure purports to serve. (3) Ordinarily the court shall accept the affidavit of a Minister, but in exceptional circumstances, when it has reason to believe that there is more than what meets the eye, it can examine the Minister and take other evidence to decide the question of privilege. (4) Under no

---

1. State of J&K v. Anwar Ahmed Aftab, AIR 1965 J&K 75.
2. Conway v. Rimmer, (1968) AC 910 : (1968) 1 All ER 874 (HL); Rogers v. Secretary of State for the Home Dept., (1973) AC 388 : (1972) 2 All ER 1957 (HL); Alfred Crompton Amusement Machines Ltd. v. Customs and Excise Commr. (No. 2), (1974) AC 405 : (1973) 2 All ER 1169 (HL). See further DISCOVERY, Vol. 13 (para 86) et. seq. If evidence is inadmissible under this rule, there is no privilege that can be waived; Rogers v. Secretary of State for the Home Dept. supra.
3. Asiatic Petroleum Co. Ltd. v. Anglo Persian Oil Co., (1916) 1 KB 822. See also Henry Greer Robinson v. State of South Australia, AIR 1931 PC 254.
4. State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493 reversing Sodhi Sukhdev Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1960 Pun 407.
5. W.S. Irwin v. D.J. Reid, AIR 1921 Cal 282; Nazir Ahmed v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Lah 434.

circumstances can a court inspect such a document or permit giving of secondary evidence of its contents. (5) Subject to the overriding power of the court to disallow the claim of privilege in exceptional cases, the following provide working rules of guidance for the courts in the matter of deciding the question of privilege in regard to unpublished documents pertaining to matters of State; (a) "records relating to affairs of the State" mean documents of State whose production would endanger the public interest; (b) documents pertaining to public security, defence and foreign relations are documents relating to affairs of State; (c) unpublished documents relating to trading, commercial or contractual activities of the State are not ordinarily, to be considered as documents relating to affairs of State; but in special circumstances they may partake of that character; (d) in cases of documents mentioned in (c) supra, it is a question of fact in each case whether they relate to affairs of State or not in the sense if they are disclosed public interest would suffer."

The Orissa High Court held "For the purpose of claiming the privilege under Section 123, the expression "Heads of departments" has two distinct meanings, it may be limited to heads of the various departments of the secretariat, namely, the secretaries of the departments, or else it may also include heads of departments of attached offices either under the Union Government or under the State Government. The privilege should be claimed by the Minister in charge who is the political head of the department concerned, if not, the secretary of the department who is the departmental head. The reason for this limiting the expression to the highest officials in the State is that privilege under Section 123 is only claimed in respect of "affairs of the State"..... The National Savings Commissioner is not the secretary of the Finance Department and his claim of privilege under Section 123 must fail. In the case of a Collector the claim is still weaker because he is not a head of the department even for the purpose of Orissa Service Code."[6]

The decision impliedly overruled the decisions in.[7]

In S.P. Gupta v. Union of India[8]; the Supreme Court overruled the decision in Sodhi Sukhdev Singh's Case[9].

VISCOUNT SIMON in Duncan v. Cammell Laird and Co. Ltd.,[10] observed: "The rule that the interest of the State, must not be put in jeopardy by producing documents which would injure it, is a principle to be observed in administering justice, unconnected with the interest of claims of the particular parties in litigation, and indeed, is a rule upon which the judge should, if necessary, insist even though no objection is taken at all. This has been pointed out in several cases, e.g., in Chatterton v. Secretary of State.[11] It was further held "It is not a sufficient ground that the documents are 'State Documents' or 'Official' or are marked 'confidential'. It would not be a good ground that, if they were produced, the consequences might involve the department or the Government in Parliamentary discussion or in public criticism, or might necessitate the attendance as witnesses or otherwise of officials who have pressing duties elsewhere. Neither would it be a good ground that production might tender to expose a want of efficiency in the administration or tend to lay the department open to claims for compensation. In a word, it is not enough that the Minister or the department does not want to have the documents produced. The Minister, in deciding whether it is his duty to object, should bear these considerations in mind, for he ought not to take the responsibility of withholding production except in cases where the public interest would otherwise be damnified, e.g., where disclosure would be injurious to national defence, or to good diplomatic relations, or where the practice of keeping a class of documents secret is necessary for the proper functioning of the public service."

The Supreme Court in State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh,[12] observed "As a result of Section 123 a document which is material and relevant is allowed to be withheld from the court and that undoubtedly constitutes a very serious departure from the ordinay rules of evidence. The principle on which this departure is justified is the principle of the overriding and paramount character of public

---

6. Union of India v. Sudhir Kumar, AIR 1963 Ori 111; following State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493; Duncan v. Cammell Laird & Co. Ltd., 1942 AC 624.
7. Chiragh Din v. Crown, 52 Cr LJ 161; G.G. in Council v. Peer Mohammad Khuda Bux, 1950 EP 228 (FB), Public Prosecutor v. D. Venkata Narasayya, AIR 1957 AP 486; Lakhuram Hariram v. Union of India, AIR 1960 Pat 192; Emperor v. Rasul Bux, AIR 1944 Sind 145; Devayjoti Burman v. D. Nalinakshya Ammal, AIR 1954 Cal 216.
8. AIR 1982 SC 149.
9. AIR 1961 SC 493.
10. 1942 AC 624 : (1942) 1 All ER 587, 595.
11. (1895) 2 QBD 189.
12. AIR 1961 SC 493, 501.

interest. A valid claim for privilege made under Section 123 proceeds on the basis of the theory that the production of the document in question would cause injury to public interest. Care has, however, to be taken to see that interests other than the interest of the public do not masquerade in the garb of public interest. Subject to this reservation the maxim salus populiest suprema lex, which means that regard for public welfare is the largest law, is the basis of the provisions contained in Section 123."[13]

CHAGLA C.J. observed: "The principle of the section is that it is not all records that are privileged, but only those the disclosure of which would result in an injury being caused to the public interest. The section gives effect to the principle that public interest must be paramount and private interest must give way when there is any conflict between the public and private interest."[14]

The Supreme Court held that the foundation of the Law behind Section 123 and 162 of the Evidence Act, is the same as in English Law. It is that injury to public interest is the reason for the exclusion from disclosure of documents whose contents, if disclosed, would injure public and national interest.[15]

The head of the department should never claim privilege on the ground that the disclosure of the document in question may defeat the defence raised by the State. The considerations which are relevant in claiming privilege on the ground that the affairs of the State may be prejudiced by disclosure, must always be distinguished from the considerations, of expediency which may persuade the head of the department to raise a plea of privilege.

The mere fact that a document is marked confidential will not afford sufficient justification for objecting to its production under this section nor will it be a good ground that the production may involve a department of the Government in a discussion in the legislative assembly or in public criticism. Neither will it be a good ground that production may tend to expose want of efficiency in administration or to lay the department open to claim for compensation[16] or it is apprehended that the document if produced would defeat the defence raised by the State. The impact of the document on the head of the department or the Minister incharge of the department or even the Government in power, has no relevance in making a claim for privilege under this section.[17]

The provision of Section 123 and 124 would apply to the trial of election petitions.[18]

A commission of inquiry, not being a Court, cannot direct to produce the documents.[19]

2. SECTION 123 EVIDENCE ACT AND SECTION 94(1) (SECTION 91 NEW) OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE

It was held that the discretion of the court under Section 94(1) Cr.P.C. is absolute, certain limitations are however placed on the exercise of the discretion of the court by sub-Section 3 of Section 94 by which the court cannot by making an order under sub-Section 1 of Section 94, Cr.P.C. set at naught the provisions of Section 123 and 124 of the Indian Evidence Act. The power of the Court to make an order under Section 94(1) is not limited by Section 123 Evidence Act but the discretion of the court is a judicial discretion and it should not ordinarily be exercised in such a way as to conflict with privilege against disclosure conferred by Section 123.[20]

3. NO OFFICER CAN BE PERMITTED TO GIVE ANY EVIDENCE

The term evidence refers to both oral and documentary evidence.[21]

---

13. State of U.P. v. Raj Narain, AIR 1975 SC 865; S.P. Gupta v. Union of India, AIR 1982 SC 149; State v. V.D. Kumar, 1975 Cr LJ 1411.
14. Dinbai v. Dominion of India, AIR 1951 Bom 72.
15. State of U.P. v. Raj Narain, AIR 1975 SC 865.
16. Tukaram v. King Emperor, ILR 1946 Nag 385 : AIR 1946 Nag 256; Jagannath Dwarakanath Raje v. State, (1971) 74 Bom LR 320.
17. State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493; Amar Chand Butail v. Union of India, AIR 1964 SC 1658 : (1965) ISCJ 243; following State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493.
18. Subba Rao v. Brahmananda Reddy, AIR 1967 AP 155.
19. Central Bureau of Investigation v. Kumher Inquiry Commission, 1996 AIHC 1971 (paras 13, 23 and 24) (Raj).
20. Chandubhai v. State, AIR 1962 Guj 290 following Emperor v. Bilal Mahomad, AIR 1940 Bom 361
21. STOKES Vol. II. p. 919 f.n. 2.

4. UNPUBLISHED OFFICIAL RECORDS

If the contents of a document have already been published there is no question of claiming privilege in respect of that document.[22]

The word 'Published' in Section 123 does not mean only those documents or papers which are printed for general publication. Even if a secret document or a part of it is revealed, the document will lose the sanctity as an unpublished record because there cannot be any guarantee as to whom and in what contingency the other parts may also be made known. The blue-book which was marked as secret document and parts of which had already been disclosed in the Lok Sabha debates and in writ proceedings before the High Court could not be held to be an unpublished record within the meaning of Section 123.[23] The word 'unpublished' in Section 123 and the disclosure contemplated in Section 124 relate primarily to the person against whom privilege is claimed under those sections. And if he has been permitted by lawfully to see those papers and also to take copies of the same. It will be futile for the authorities to claim privilege under either of those sections.[24] Documents placed on record in an earlier suit filed by a different person, cannot be called as unpublished or undisclosed documents.[25] The claim of privilege cannot be rejected on the ground that a copy of the document was produced by the opposite party. The court in such cases has to examine the document for itself and then decide whether or not claim of privilege is just, proper and bona fide.[26] Letters, and demi-officials addressed to a contractor if duly received by him would not be unpublished documents within the meaning of Section 123.[27] When an open enquiry is made and statements recorded they cannot be deemed to be confidential, much less relating to the affairs of the State. Similarly, any application or complaint made by a person cannot be held to relate to the affairs of State.[28]

The privilege under Section 123 extends only to unpublished or undisclosed official records or documents relating to the affairs of the State.[29] Notings, instructions and correspondence which are part of office file are unpublished official record, provided they are not made use of in the orders passed by the concerned officials. In respect of documents forming part of the order no privilege can be claimed.[30]

5. RELATING TO ANY AFFAIRS OF STATE

The Supreme Court observed: "At the time when the Evidence Act was enacted, 'affairs of State' may have had a comparatively narrow content. Having regard to the notice about governmental function and duties which then obtained, "Affairs of State" would have meant matters of political or administrative character relating, for instance, to national defence, public peace, and security and good neighbourly relation. But, the inevitable consequence of the change in the concept of the functions of the State is that the State in pursuit of its welfare activities undertakes to an increasing extent activities which were formerly treated as purely commercial, and documents in relation to such commercial activities undertaken by the State, in the pursuit of public policies of social welfare are also apt to claim the privilege of documents relating to the affairs of State. As the Legislature has advisedly refrained from defining the expression "affairs of State" it would be inexpedient for judicial decisions to attempt to put the said expression into a straight jacket of a definition judicially evolved. The question as to whether any particular document or a class of documents answer the description must be determined in each case on the relevant facts and circumstances adduced before the court."[31]

---

22. Conway v. Rimmer, (1968) 1 All ER 874; Robinson v. State of South Australia, AIR 1931 PC 254.
23. State of U.P. v. Raj Narain, AIR 1975 SC 865.
24. Union v. Sudhir Kumar, AIR 1963 Ori 111; relying on Robinson v. State of South Australia, AIR 1931 PC 254; Mehtab Singh v. Secretary of State, AIR 1933 Lah 157; Bhalchandra Dattarya v. Chanabasappa, AIR 1939 Bom 237; Chandradhar Tewari v. Deputy Commissioner, AIR 1939 Oudh 65; Dinbai v. Dominion of India, AIR 1951 Bom 72.
25. Khairathi Lal v. Delhi Development Authority, ILR (1974) 2 Del 51.
26. Union of India v. Lalli, AIR 1971 Pat 264.
27. Mehtab Singh v. Secretary of State, AIR 1933 Lah 157.
28. Mahabirji & Co. v. Prem Narain, AIR 1965 All 494.
29. Khairathi Lal v. Delhi Development Authority, ILR (1974) 2 Del 51.
30. Amarchand v. Sukh Ram, ILR 1973 HP 459.
31. State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493, following Duncan v. Cammell Laird and Co. Ltd., 1942 AC 624.

JUSTICE VENKATARAMAYYA while concurring with BHAGAWATHI in S P. Gupta v. Union of India[32] observed "The expression" "affairs of State" in Section 123 should receive a very narrow meaning. Any claim for interpreting it with a wider connotation may expose Section 123 to be challenged as being unconstitutional". "Affairs of State" is a very wide expression. Every communication which proceeds from one officer of State to another officer of the State is not necessarily relating to the affairs of State. What are the "affairs of State" has got to be determined by a reference to the grounds on which privilege can be claimed in respect of a particular document. It is only such documents which relate to the affairs of the State the disclosure of which would be detrimental to the public interest that come within the category of unpublished official records relating to affairs of State entitled to protection under this section.[33]

"Affairs of State" will include any matter of a public nature with which the Government is concerned, i.e., all secrets of State, such as State papers and all communications between Government and its officers, the privilege in such cases not being that of the person who is in possession of the secret, but that of the public as a trustee for whom the secret has been entrusted to him.[34]

Classes of documents to which the immunity may be accorded are not closed and in the life of a fast changing society rapidly growing and developing under the impact of vast scientific and technological advances, new class or class of documents may come into existence to which the immunity may have to be granted in public interest.[35] "Affairs of the State" means administrative instructions and guidance notes secretly given to various departments of Governments. They can claim status of being documents relating to affairs of State.[36] It may cover the case of documents in respect of which the practice of keeping them secret is necessary for the proper functioning of the public service.[37]

Departmental notes contained in official files involving public interest are privileged, as they would relate to affairs of State.[38] Observations or notings made by officers by way of comment or opinion from the reports of the speeches made at public election meetings are only privileged and rest of the reports containing factual data would not be covered by Section 123.[39] Decisions of the Cabinet of the Government for the execution of public policies would be affairs of State.[40] A document which embodies the minutes of the discussion between private party and State Minister which indicate the advice given by the Minister is which relates to affairs of State.[41]

The unpublished records of the affairs of State may include:—

1. Documents that pass between two States.
2. Documents between the State and its own subjects.
3. Documents between the State and subjects of another State.
4. Documents between subjects of more than one State.
5. Documents that pass between Head of Departments or between Ministers of State.[42]

All the documents relating to deployment of armed forces are unpublished official records. And in the very nature of things they are confidential and secret papers.[43] Whenever it is found necessary by the State to maintain law and order in a particular locality, the armed force can be deployed at the discretion of the authorities responsible for maintenance of law and order. All such papers relating to that matter would be documents relating to affairs of State.[44] In a case a letter by an under-secretary to the

---

32. AIR 1982 SC 149.
33. Chamarbhag Walla v. Palpia, (1948) 52 Bom LR 231.
34. BEST, 12th Edn., S. 578, p. 495.
35. S.P. Gupta v. Union of India, AIR 1982 SC 149 per BHAGHAVAT'S.
36. Sujit Kantha v. Union of India, AIR 1970 Assam 131.
37. S.B. Choudhury v. I.P. Changkakati, AIR 1960 Assam 210.
38. State of Orissa v. Jagannath, AIR 1977 SC 2201.
39. Kanwarlal v. Amarnath, AIR 1975 SC 308.
40. Orient Paper Mills v. Union of India, AIR 1979 Cal 114.
41. Kotah Match Factory v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1970 Raj 118.
42. Iqbal Ahmed v. State of Bhopal, AIR 1954 Bhopal 9.
43. Subhasini Jena v. Commandant of 6th Battalian, 1988 Cr LJ 1570 (Ori).
44. Subhashini Jena v. Commandant 6th Battalion, Cuttack, 1988 Cr LJ 1570.

Government of India and another to the Secretary to the Government of Bombay, P.W.D. Department and another letter by the Secretary to the Bombay Government to the officers of the Railway were held as unpublished official records and relate to affairs of the State.[45] Punjab Police Rules 23, 31, 27, 24(2) treat the contents of surveillance register as strictly confidential and pertaining to public security or public peace.[46] Reports by police officers to the Government about the investigation of allegations of the commission of an offence are privileged under this section and Section 124 as they are unpublished records and are submitted in official confidence. The privilege which the Government can claim in respect of documents relating to matters of State is a narrow one and must be sparingly used.[47] The verbatim reports of the meetings held in elections and recorded by the special branch of police were held to be form part of the records pertaining to maintenance of peace and security and thus they relate to the affairs of State.[48] A report regarding the activities of an individual with a view to enable the State to take action against him under the Preventive Detention Act, as it does not only relate to the affairs of the individual, but it also relates to the affairs of the state so far as they effect the affairs of the State.[49] A complainant filed a complaint against a public officer for illegally permitting Kuwait foreign nationals to enter Kerala State through airport without a vaild visa and allow them to stay for certain period. In the enquiry under 202, Cr.P.C. before the Criminal Court, the complainant filed an application requiring the officers to produce certain documents in their possession before the Court. It was held that the production of the documents would cause greater injury to the public interest than their non-production, and the magistrate was justified in rejecting that application on the ground of privilege.[50] The character roles and confidential reports of Government employees relate to affairs of State.[51] The confidential record of the Controller of Stationery relating to the watermark of cartridge papers cannot be compelled to be produced in Court.[52] Secretariat files containing notes, minutes and correspondence between Government and Public Service Commission were held privileged documents within the meaning of Section 123 and 124 of the Evidence Act, though that privilege is not absolute.[53] When a report was sent by the High Court to the Government regarding the promotion or reversion of a subordinate Judge, it is in the nature of consultations under 233 of the Constitution and therefore, a privileged document exempted from being produced.[54] It was held by the M.P. High Court that the State was justified in claiming a privilege against production of the relevant file concerning the grant of mining lease as it contained letters written by the Head of the Department to the subordinate officers of the Department and vice versa and between that Department and other Departments which were unpublished and contained State secrets.[55]

In a suit for injunction restraining the Government from diverting the water flow into the plaintiff's tank by construction of a dam, it was held that the correspondence between the Madras and Travancore Government, regarding the construction of a dam was privileged while the reports by sub-ordinate officers and the Statements recorded by them are not privileged.[56] Documents concerning administration relating to defence foreign affairs, cabinet minutes and advice or notes exchanged between Ministers and other heads of departments of the Government which may cover fields of trade, commerce, etc., which are to be kept in secret, But, simply because as matter relates to affairs of State it would not be protected under 123 unless evidence is derived from the unpublished record.[57]

---

45. Mutsaddilal v. Union of India, AIR 1955 Hyd 61.
46. State v. Hariram, ILR (1969) 2 Punj 338.
47. Rajal Raojee v. Provincial Government, Central Provinces, ILR 1950 Nag 690.
48. Kanwarlal Gupta v. Amarnath Chawla, ILR (1972) 2 Del 291: see CONTRA Ramasrinivasan v. Shanmugham, AIR 1969 Mad 781: (Speeches at public meetings recorded by police officers under departmental instructions).
49. S.B. Choudhury v. I.P. Changkakati, AIR 1960 Assam 210 following Emperor v. Nanda Singh, AIR 1925 Oudh 540: In re : Manthubhai Mehta, AIR 1945 Bom 122.
50. Sundaresan Thampi v. Ramachandrani, 1987 Cr LJ 108 (Ker) following S.P. Gupta v. Union of India, AIR 1982 SC 149.
51. State of Punjab v. Surjit Singh, AIR 1975 Punj 11; H.L. Rodhey v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1969 Del 246.
52. Jaffarul Hossain v. Emperor, ILR (1931) 59 Cal 1046 : AIR 1932 Cal 468.
53. State of Bihar v. Kripalu Shankar, AIR 1987 SC 1554. See also ILR (1977) 2 Cut 125, 140
54. Barada Kanta Misra v. State, ILR 1966 Cut 503 (In view of AIR 1982 SC 149 this may not be good law).
55. Durga Prasad v. Parveen, AIR 1975 MP 196.
56. M. Yusuff v. State of Madras, AIR 1971 Mad 468.
57. Raj Narain v. Smt. Indira Nehru Gandhi, AIR 1974 All 324 (this proposition was not touched while reversing the decision in State of U.P. v. Raj Narain, AIR 1975 SC 865.

Statements made and documents produced by assessees before Income-tax Officers for the purpose of showing the income of such assessees do not refer to matters of State, and are not privileged under this action.[58] Also the Govt. cannot claim this privilege regarding the admission of foreign students.[59]

6. NOT AFFAIRS OF STATE

The Diary of a foot constable who was shadowing the movements of a suspect is not an unpublished document relating to the affairs of a State.[60] Statements made and recorded by a forest range officer in the course of an investigation are not unpublished documents, relating to any affairs of the State.[61] Departmental enquiry papers are not unpublished documents relating to affairs of the State. Consequently where the probity or conduct of a public servant is a matter in issue the State cannot screen his conduct from the purview of the Court.[62] Documents showing the steps for selection to the appointment of the Chief Secretary which has to be done on merit with due regard to seniority under Rule 3(2-A) of the Indian Administration Service Rules of 1954 cannot be held to be a document relating to the affairs of the State.[63] In a suit for payment of dues under a contract, the document concerning the fixation of price relates to a commercial transaction and it does not relate to the affairs of the State, and so no privilege can be claimed.[64] Statements of witnesses recorded by C.I.D. Inspector during enquiry neither constitutes documents relating to affairs of State nor are they communications made to a public officer in official confidence.[65]

Where a Government employee challenged the steps taken by a departmental promotion committee and asked for (1) proceedings of the committee dealing with scrutiny of candidates (2) confidential reports of the person concerned and (3) file and minutes of the committee, it was held that except the confidential reports there is no privilege in respect of other documents.[66] The privilege claimed regarding production of character roll of an employee on the ground that its disclosure would cause injury to the freedom and candour of expression of opinion by the concerned authorities cannot be sustained as the notes and minute in such documents do not relate to determination and execution of public policies.[67]

A Government supplier of chrome ore wanted to recover the price fixed by the Department in their files. The Court held that the document concerning fixation related to a commercial transaction in respect of which no privilege could be claimed.[68] Statements made by witness in the course of a departmental enquiry into the conduct of police officers who were subsequently put upon their trial on charges of taking illegal gratification are not privileged under this section or S. 124 or 125.[69] The particulars contained in a record of assessment under Section 32(1) of U.P. Sales Tax Act are not confidential record and Section 123 would not apply.[70] Public Services Commission which is a body independent of the State under the Constitution cannot claim privilege in respect of a document which is the basis of the selection of candidates made by it.[71] It was held that conciliator's report in an industrial dispute is not a privileged document, or a confidential document. The party to the dispute is entitled to a copy of the report.[72] It was held that the accounts of different officers of Government and other bodies are audited

---

58. Venkata Chella Chettiar v. Sampathu Chettiar, (1908) 32 Mad 62.
59. Sajitha G v. Secretary to Govt. of India, Ministry of External Affairs, AIR 1994 Mad 204 (para 11).
60. Mohan Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1940 Lah 217; Ibrahim Sheriff Yazdani v. Secretary of State, AIR 1936 Nag 25.
61. Kaliappa Udayan v. Emperor, AIR 1937 Mad 492.
62. Niranjan Dass Sehgal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1968 Punj 255.
63. N.P. Mathur v. State of Bihar, AIR 1972 Pat 93 (FB) following State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493; Amarchand Butail v. Union of India, AIR 1964 SC 1658.
64. F.A. Corporation Ltd. v. Industrial Development Corporation Ltd., Orissa, AIR 1986 Ori 199; following S.P. Gupta v. Union of India, AIR 1982 SC 149; Durga Prasad v. Praveen, AIR 1975 MP 196; Dinbai v. Dominion of India, AIR 1951 Bom 72.
65. B. Kondaswamy Reddy v. State of A.P., 1982 Cr LJ 393.
66. Commissioner of I.T. v. Good will picture Ltd., Delhi, ILR (1972) 1 Del 146.
67. Maini v. Commissioner of I.T., ILR (1970) 1 Del 879.
68. Ferroy Alloys Corporation Ltd. v. Industrial Development Corporation of Orissa, AIR 1986 Ori 199. The Court rlied upon State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493 (partly overruled by the Supreme Court in S.P. Gupta v. U.P., AIR 1982 SC 149 and Section 162 which requires documents to be produced.
69. Harbans Sahai v. Emperor, (1912) 16 CWN 431.
70. Allah Bux v. Ratanlal Jain, ILR 1958 All 829.
71. Referring to Amarchand v. Union of India, AIR 1964 SC 1658; Gourahari Mishra v. State, ILR (1978) 2 Cut 477.
72. H. S. Bande v. State Industrial Court, Nagpur, AIR 1967 Bom 174.

by auditors from the Accountant General's Office; in prosecutions for criminal misappropriations and criminal breach of trust arising out of different reports prepared by them, the Accountant General or his office ought to adopt a helpful attitude and should not claim privilege, otherwise the guilty persons are likely to escape punishment.[73] Where the documents had no bearing on the security of nation as well as on friendly relations with various foreign countries, privilege could not be claimed in respect of those documents.[74] Certain documents, referred to in the show cause for the removal of a President of a Municipal Council, cannot be said to be privileged documents as they do not involve any question relating to the affairs of the State disclosure of which would be against the interest of the State or public interest.[75]

If the court found on inspection that any part of the document was innocuous in the sense that it did not relate to affairs of State, the court could order disclosure of the innocuous part, provided that would not give a distorted or misleading impression. Where the court orders disclosure of an innocuous part, the court should seal up the other parts because their disclosure would be undesirable.[76]

7. OFFICER AT THE HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT CONCERNED

The privilege should be claimed generally by the Minister in-charge who is the political head of the department concerned, if not; the Secretary of the department should claim the privilege.[77] The expression "Head of the Department" occuring in Section 123 is confined to the Minister concerned and in special circumstances to the Secretary of the Department concerned. The Inspector General of Police cannot be an officer at the Head of the Department for the purpose of Section 123.[78]

8. HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT—CERTAIN CASES

Where the question of loyalty of a pilot of Air-India was involved the affidavit given by an officer of high status in Air-India was accepted and the High Court which held that the privilege claimed was based on proper grounds and refused to peruse... the documents.[79] Under the Prevention of Corruption Act the affidavit by the Head of Anti-corruption Department claiming privilege is sufficient.[80] It was held under the Co-operative Societies Act the Registrar of the Co-operative department is the highest executive authority in the State for the department; for the purpose of Section 123.[81]

The Chief Personal Officer N.E. Railway is not a Head of the Department for claiming privilege under Section 123.[82] Director of Industries is not the head of the department for purpose of the sector though he may be called as the head for other purposes.[83] Though, the Governor of Reserve Bank of India, is also head of the various departments of the Bank, it is the officer at the head of the department concerned that has to claim privilege under Section 123 and not the Governor of the R.B.I.[84] Secretary to Board of Education is not the head of the Department to claim privilege in respect of reviewers report submitted to the Board.[85] National Savings Commissioner is not the secretary of the Finance Department and so cannot be treated as the Head of the Department to claim privilege under Section 123.[86]

Where the Government claimed want of knowledge of proceedings under Section 46 of U.P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act the party denied such a claim and applied for discovery and inspection of certain documents. The Government claimed privilege. The Supreme Court held that the 73. Krishna Nandan Prasad v. State, AIR 1958 Pat 166 (DB).

---

74. Niyamvedi v. Ramon Srivastava, 1995 Cr LJ 1976 (para 10) (Ker).
75. Baburao Vishwanath Mathpati v. State, AIR 1996 Bom 227 (para 60).
76. State of U.P. v. Raj Narain, AIR 1975 SC 865.
77. State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493; State of A.P. v. Ramu Naido, (1964) 2 An LT 25; Public Prosecutor v. D Venkata Narasayya, AIR 1957 AP 486; State of Madras v. S.A. Baffakki, AIR 1954 Mad 926.
78. State v. Jagannath Jena, ILR 1973 Cut 427.
79. V.P.S. Gill v. Air India, AIR 1988 Bom 416.
80. State v. V.D. Kumar, 1975 Cr LJ 1411.
81. Public Prosecutor v. D. Venkata Narasayya, AIR 1957 AP 486 relying on State of Madras v. S.A. Baffakki, AIR 1954 Mad 926.
82. Union of India v. Indradeo Kumar, AIR 1963 Pat 129.
83. Construction Private Ltd. v. State of Punjab, 1963 Cur LJ 130 (Punj).
84. Reserve Bank of India v. Sudershan Kumar Khanna, ILR 1969 Del 460.
85. Debajyothi v. Dr. Nalimakshya, AIR 1954 Cal 216.
86. Union of India v. Sudhir Kumar, AIR 1963 Ori 111.

compensation officer will be required to decide whether the claim of privilege raised by the Government should be sustained or not.[87]

9. WHO SHALL GIVE OR WITHHOLD SUCH PERMISSION AS HE THINKS FIT

In State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukdev Singh,[88] Supreme Court observed" Thus our conclusion is that reading Sections 123 and 162 together the court cannot hold an enquiry into the possible injury to public interest which may result from the disclosure of the document in question. That is a matter for the authority concerned to decide but the Court is competent, and indeed is bound, to hold a preliminary enquiry and determine the validity of the objections to its production and that necessarily involves an enquiry into the question as to whether the evidence relates to an affairs of State under Section 123 or not.

In this country the court has to determine the character or class of the document. If it comes to the conclusion that the document does not relate to affairs of State, then it should reject the claim for privilege and direct its production. If it comes to the conclusion that the document relates to the affairs of State, it should leave it to the head of the department to decide whether he should permit its production or not". This decision was however overruled in S.P. Gupta v. Union of India,[89]. JUSTICE BHAGAVATHI, J. observed "Now if the court has no power to inspect the document, it is difficult to understand how the court can find, without conducting an enquiry as regards the possible effect of the disclosure of the document upon public interest, that the document is one relating to affairs of State, as ex-hypothesi a document can be said to relate to affairs of State only if its disclosure will cause injury to public interest. It might be that there are certain classes of documents which are of such a character that even without inspecting them or conducting an enquiry, it might be possible to say that by virtue of their character, their disclosure would be injurious to public interest and therefore they are documents relating to affairs of State. But there might be other documents which do not fall within this description and yet whose disclosure might be injurious to public interest and in case of such documents it would not be possible for the court without inspecting them or at any rate without holding an enquiry to determine whether their disclosure would be injurious to public interest and they should therefore be classified as documents relating to affairs of State. Even so, according to GAJENDRAGADKAR, J. and the other learned Judges, the court can and must determine whether such documents relate to affairs of State without inspecting them and without even holding an enquiry into the possible injury to public interest which might result from their disclosure. The view taken by GAJENDRAGADKAR, J. and the other learned Judges in Sodhi Sukhdev Singhs' case[90] (supra) thus runs into an inconsistency and creates an illogical situation. He further observed: "The court has to balance the detriment to the public interest on the administrative or executive side which would result from the disclosure of the document against the detriment to the public interest on the judicial side which would result from non-disclosure of the document though relevant to the proceeding. Vide the observations of LORD PEARSON in Reg. v. Lewes, JJ, Exparte, Hoke Secretary,[91] (supra) at page 406 of the report. The court has to decide which aspect of the public interest predominates or in other words whether the public interest which requires that the documents should not be produced outweighs the public interest that a court of justice in performing its function should not be denied access to relevant evidence.

The court has thus to perform a balancing exercise and after weighing the one competing aspect of public interest against the other decide where the balance lies. If the court comes to the conclusion that on the balance, the disclosure of the document would cause greater injury to public interest than its non-disclosure, the court would uphold the objection and not allow the document to be disclosed but if on the other hand, the court finds that the balance between competing public interest lies the other way, the court would order the disclosure of the document. This balance between two competing aspects of public interest has to be performed by the court even where an objection to the disclosure of the document is taken on the ground that it belongs to a class of documents which are protected irrespective of their contents, because there is no absolute immunity for documents belonging to such class. Even in Conway v. Rimmer[92], at p. 952 LORD REID recognised an exception that cabinet minutes and the like can be

---

87. Sub-divisional Officer, Mirzapur v. Raja Srinivasa, AIR 1966 SC 1164.
88. AIR 1961 SC 493.
89. AIR 1982 SC 149.
90. AIR 1961 SC 493.
91. 1973 AC 388.
92. (1968) AC 910.

disclosed when they have become only of historical interest and in Lanyon Pvt. Ltd. v. Commonwealth,[93] (Supra). MENZIES J. agreed that there might be "special circumstances" in which such documents might be examined LORD SCARMAN also pointed out in the course of his speech in Burmah Oil Co. v. Bank of England[94] (Supra) that he did not accept "that there are any classes of documents which however harmless their content and however strong the requirement of justice, may never be disclosed until they are only of historical interest". The learned Lawlord said and we are quoting here his exact words since they admirably express our own approach to the subject:

"But is the secrecy of the inner workings of the Government machine so vital a public interest that it must prevail over even the most imperative demands of justice? If the contents of a document concern the national safety, affect diplomatic relations or relate to same State secret of this importance, I can understand an affirmative answer. But if they do not (and it is not claimed in this case that they do), what is so important about secret of Government that it must be protected even at the price of injustice in our court?".

The reasons given for protection the secrecy of Government at the level of policy making are two. The first is the need for candour in the advice offered to Minister, the second is that disclosure 'would create or fan ill-informed or captious public or political criticism'. LORD REID in Conway v. Rimmer, thought the second "the most important reason". Indeed he was inclined to discount the candour argument.

I think both the reasons are factors legitimately to be put into the balance which has to be struck between the public interest in the proper functioning of the public service. (i.e., the executive arm of the Government) and the public interest in the administration of justice. Sometimes the public service reasons will be decisive of the issue; but they should never prevent the court from weighing them against the injury which would be suffered in the administration of justice if the document was not to be disclosed.

The same view was expressed by GIBBS A.C.J. in Sankey v. Whitlam[95] (Supra), where the learned acting Chief Justice said:—

"I consider that although there is a class of documents whose members are entitled to protection from disclosure irrespective of their contents, the protection is not absolute, and it does not endure for ever. The fundamental and governing principle is that documents in the class may be withheld from production only when this is necessary in the public interest. In a particular case the court must balance the general desirability that documents of that kind should not be disclosed against the need to produce them in the interests of justice. The court will of course examine the question with special care, giving full weight to the reasons for preserving the secrecy of documents of this class but it will not treat all such documents as entitled to the same measure of protection—the extent of protection required will depend to some extent on the general, subject-matter with which the documents are concerned."

There is nothing sacrosanct about the immunity which is granted to documents because they belong to a certain class. Class immunity is not absolute or inviolable in all circumstances. It is not a rule of law to be applied mechanically in all cases. The principle upon which class immunity is founded is that it would be contrary to public interest to disclose documents belonging to that class, because such disclosure would impair the proper functioning of the public service and this aspect of public interest which requires that justice shall not be denied to any one by withholding relevant evidence. This is a balancing task which has to be performed by the Court in all cases.

JUSTICE DESAI observed: Undoubtedly there must be such affairs of the State involving security of the nation and foreign affairs where public interest requires that the disclosure should not be ordered. It is however, equally well recognised that fair administration of justice is itself a matter of vital public interest. Therefore if the two public interests conflict, the Court will have to decide whether the public interest which formed the foundation for claiming privilege would be jeopardised if disclosure is ordered and on the other hand whether fair administration of justice would suffer by non-disclosure and decide which way the balance tilts. In the ultimate analysis the approach of the Court while deciding the question of privilege would be that it has to balance public interest in just justice and just administration

---

93. 129 Commonwealth LJ 650.
94. (1979) 3 All ER 700.
95. (1978) 21 ALR 505.

of justice and State affairs at high level to respect of appointment to high constitutional offices and then decide which way the balance tilts."

JUSTICE VENKATRAMAIAH observed:

> "There is residual power in Court to decide whether the disclosure of a document is in the interest of public and for that purpose, if necessary to inspect the document and that the statement of head of the department that the disclosure would injure public interest is not final, State of U.P. v. Raj Narain, AIR 1975 SC 365, Rel. on".

In the above case a further question arose as to the scope of judicial scrutiny regarding the advice tendered by the Council of Ministers to the President. Justice BHAGAVATHI speaking for the majority observed: "There can be no doubt that the advice tendered by the Council of Ministers to the President is protected against Judicial Scrutiny. But the material on which the advice tendered by the Council of Ministers is based cannot be said to be part of the advice and the correspondence exchanged between the Law Minister, the Chief Justice of Delhi and the Chief Justice of India which constituted the material forming the basis of the decision of the Central Government must accordingly be held to be outside the exclusionary rule enacted in Cl. (2) of Article 74."

However the Supreme Court observed: "Where the documents like official notes etc., which are sought to be produced in court, are part of the preparation of documents leading to the formation of the advice tendered to the President of India they are privileged under Art. 74(2) of the Constitution, which provides that the question whether any, if so what advice was tendered by Ministers to the President, shall not be enquired into in any court. The court is precluded from asking for production of such document. It is true that there is no sacrosanct rule about the immunity from production of documents and that the privilege should not be allowed in respect of each and every document. The claim of immunity and privilege has to be based on public interest. It is also well-settled that the privilege cannot be waived. It is the duty of the Supreme Court to prevent disclosure where Art. 74(2) is applicable.".[1] The oath of office of secrecy adumbrated in Art. 75(4) and Schedule III of the Constitution does not absolve the Minister either to state the reasons in support of the public interest immunity to produce the state documents or as to how the matter was dealt with or for their production when the discovery order nisi or rule nisi was issued. The Minister has to act in aid of the Court.[2]

In view of the fact that Sukhdev Singh's case at present stands overruled by the decision in S.P. Gupta's case, the decisions which followed Sukhdev Singh's case cannot be considered to be good law. As there is a conflict between the decision of the Supreme Court in Sukhdev Singh's case and S.P. Gupta's case and also later case in Dypuck Systems Pvt. Ltd., the matter has been referred to a larger Bench of Nine Judges.

10. CONSTITUTION AND SECTION 123

The High Court in exercise of its powers under Art. 226 of the Consitution of India can call for scrutiny and perusal by it, unpublished official records. In so doing the Court is not permitting anybody to give any evidence from these records relating to any affairs of State within the meaning of this section.[3] In a petition for the issue of a Writ of Cerciorari for quashing the proceeding, the Government has to submit its file to the Court.[4] Claim for privilege can hardly prevail over the Constitutional mandate of disclosure under Art. 22(5) of the Constitution in cases of preventive detention. The privilege claim by virtue of Cl. (6), Art. 22 must be properly placed before the Court.[5]

Any communication between the Chief Minister and the Governor of the State under Art. 163(3) of the Constitution concerning the land acquisition proceedings is a privileged communication and is not

---

1. Doypack Systems Pvt. Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1988 SC 782. See also S.R. Bommai v. Union of India, AIR 1994 SC 1918 (para 32), dissenting from State of Rajasthan v. Union of India, AIR 1977 SC 1361 : (1978) 1 SCR 1.
2. R.K. Jain v. Union of India, AIR 1993 SC 1769 (para 39).
3. R. Ramanna v. State, AIR 1971 AP 196.
4. Joseph John v. State, AIR 1953 Tra-Co 363 (FB).
5. Mohd. Abubukar Marwari v. Union of India, 1982 Cr LJ 53 (Bom) relying on Lawrence D' Souza v. State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 531.

open to question before the High Court[6] but not the records relating to action taken by the Govt. in regard to formation of the Human Rights Commission.[7]

The Union Govt. representing the Cabinet can claim no privilege or protection against the disclosure of "otherwise information" in its possession and which was made the basis of proclamation under Art. 356.[8]

11. MANNER IN WHICH PRIVILEGE IS TO BE CLAIMED

The proper course to claim privilege in respect of certain documents would be to file a reply to the affidavit claiming the privilege and the question be then considered after hearing both the parties on the point.[9] The claim should always be made in the form of an affidavit. The affidavit should show that each document in question has been carefully read and considered, and the person making the affidavit is satisfied that its disclosure would lead to public injury; if there are a series of documents included in a file, it should appear from the affidavit that each one of the documents whose disclosure is objected to, has been duly considered by the authority concerned, the affidavit should also indicate briefly within permissible limits, the reason why it is apprehended that their disclosure would lead to injury to public interest. In a proper case the person making the affidavit whether he is Minister or the Secretary should be summoned to face cross-examination on the relevant points.[10]

The fact that on an earlier occasion when the document was asked to be produced, no claim of privilege was made, by itself will not make the claim mala fide, when made, after the final order to produce the documents was passed.[11]

An affidavit through the personal assistant, of a Collector who was in direct charge of the record was accepted.[12]

Averments in an affidavit that files contained several letters written by the held of the department who is subordinate and vice versa or that they were secrets of State do not constitute material to infer that documents refer to affairs of State.[13]

Mere claim that disclosure of the documents would be prejudicial to public interest is not enough. The claimant must give the reasons therefor within permissible limits for claiming privilege.[14]

Where an order is passed by a court permitting the inspection of documents, for which privilege has been claimed it was held that the objection must be deemed to have been overruled.[15]

When it has been expressly averred that the officer concerned has very carefully considered the document in issue and also given detailed reason in his affidavit claiming privilege, the mere absence of the word "read" or words "Bona fide" would in no way detract from the validity of such an affidavit.[16]

12. EXCEPT WITH THE PERMISSION

It was held that even the documents forming part of unpublished official record and relating to any affairs of the State can be given in evidence if the head of the department concerned grants permission for it.[17]

---

6. Shree Swami v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1995 Raj 69 (para 9). See also People's Union for Civil Liberties, Allahabad v. State of U.P., AIR 2000 All 103 (para 28) : 2000 AIHC 2803.
7. People's Union for Civil Liberties, Allahabad v. State of U.P., AIR 2000 All 103 (para 28) : 2000 AIHC 2803.
8. Sunderlal Patwa v. Union of India, AIR 1993 MP 214 (para 30).
9. George Mathew (Dr.) v. Union of India, (1997) 10 SCC 537.
10. Ijjat Ali Talukdar v. Emperor, AIR 1943 Cal 539 approved; see also Amarchand Butail v. Union of India, AIR 1964 SC 1658 reversing; Amarchand v. Union of India, AIR 1962 HP 43; See also Ramachandran v. Alagiriswamy, AIR 1961 Mad 450; Public Prosecutor v. D. Venkata Narasayya, AIR 1957 AP 486; Union of India v. Indradeo Kumar, AIR 1963 Pat 129; Narayana Swamy v. State, AIR 1953 Mad 228; Lakuram Hariram v. Union, AIR 1960 Pat 192. Brijinath Kedarnath v. State, 1957 Cr LJ 134 (M.B.).
11. Union of India v. Lalli, AIR 1971 Pat 264.
12. In re : Killi Suryanarayana Naidu, AIR 1954 Mad 278.
13. Joti Prasad Sharma v. Addl. Civil Judge, Dehradun, AIR 1968 All 42.
14. State v. Kailashwati, AIR 1979 Raj 221.
15. B.S. Sindhu v. Union of India, (1971) 1 SLR 600 (HP).
16. State v. Hariram, ILR (1969) 2 Punj 338.
17. Pulin Behari v. State, AIR 1965 Tri 33.

Official communications

S. 124. No public officer shall be compelled to disclose communications made to him in official confidence, when he considers that the public interests would suffer by the disclosure.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope ... 1189
2. No public officer shall be compelled to disclose ... 1189
3. Sections 123 & 124 ... 1190
4. Communications made in official confidence ... 1192
5. Official confidence ... 1192
6. Communications had in official confidence—some instances ... 1193
7. Communications not in official confidence—instances ... 1193
8. Public interest should suffer by the disclosure ... 1194
9. When he considers that the public interests would suffer by the disclosure ... 1194
10. Who is to decide? ... 1195

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Under this section a public officer cannot be compelled to disclose communications made to him in confidence if he considers that public interests would suffer by the disclosure.

This section is based on the same principle as Section 123, the object being the same for the two sections, and they are based on public policy.

This section is designed to prevent the knowledge of official papers that is to say papers in official custody, beyond that circle which would obtain knowledge of them in confidence whether the confidence was express or implied. It would normally include all officers including clerks of superior officers and might also apply to non- officials to whom such papers were disclosed on the understanding express or implied that the knowledge should go no further.[18] Public interests are paramount as compared with the individual interests of a party in a Court of Justice. It is obsolutely essential to the welfare of the State that the names of parties who interpose in situations of this kind should not be divulged, for otherwise, be it from fear or shame, or the dislike of being publicly mixed up in inquiries of this nature, few men would choose to assume the disagreeable part of giving or receiving information respecting offences, and the consequence would be that many great crimes would pass unpunished.[19]

The right to claim privilege is available only to public servants.[20]

When communication is made in official confidence its non-disclosure is necessary for proper functioning of public service.[21]

A commission of inquiry, not being a Court, cannot compel to disclose the official communication.[22]

2. NO PUBLIC OFFICER SHALL BE COMPELLED TO DISCLOSE

The term 'Public Officer' means an officer with public as opposed to private duties who receives communications made to him in official confidence of such a nature that disclosure in certain cases would injure the public interests. The word 'disclose' means the first disclosure of communications made in official confidence and does not apply to a disclosure in a court of law of what has already been disclosed outside it. The object of the section is to prevent the disclosure of things not known outside that circle which is in confidence and the section has no application when once there has been disclosure to a member of the public to whom the contents of such papers have not been made known in confidence. [23] Though "Public officer" is not defined under the Act all officers who in discharge of their regular duties

---

18. Chandra Dhar Tewari v. Deputy Commissioner, Lucknow, ILR (1938) 14 Luck 351 : AIR 1939 Oudh 65.
19. TAYLOR, 12th Edn. S. 941, p. 597.
20. Ramaswami Chettiar v. Mahadevan K.J., (1968) 2 Mad LJ 393.
21. H.L. Rodhey v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1969 Del 246.
22. Central Bureau of Investigation v. Kumher Inquiry Commission, 1996 AIHC 1971 (para 34) (Raj).
23. Chandra Dhar Tewari v. Deputy Commissioner, Lucknow, ILR (1938) 14 Luck 351 : AIR 1939 Oudh 65.

receive communications made to them in official confidence and are expected not to disclose confidential information to others must be held to be public officers within the meaning of Section 124.[24]

If the officer who received the communication, in his turn forwards it to another officer for further action the latter officer can claim the privilege under Section 124 by filing an affidavit to the effect that the public interest would suffer by the disclosure of the communication, and it would be sufficient to support the claim.[25]

The Vice Chancellor of the Punjab University is a 'Public Officer' within the meaning of this section.[26] The privilege can only be claimed by the head of the department or by the Secretary of that department on an affidavit. Filing of a certificate only is not enough.[27] Where it is an unpublished official record relating to an affair of the State, the question whether the disclosure of its contents would be against public interest and whether privilege could be claimed rested with the head of the department and if the head of the department refused to disclose it, the court would not compel him to produce the document or disclose its contents.[28] Compensation Officer under the U.P. Zamindari Abolition and Land Reforms Act was held to be a public officer.[29]

3. SECTIONS 123 AND 124

There is clear distinction between Sections 123 and 124:

Section 123	Section 124
1. No one shall be permitted to give evidence.	No public officer shall be compelled to disclose.
2. Derived from unpublished official records.	Communications made to him (Public Officer) in official confidence.
3. They must relate to affairs of State.	When he considers that public interest would suffer by the disclosure.
4. Except with the permission of the head of department concerned who shall give or withhold such permission as he thinks fit.

Section 123 covers all persons who receive evidence derived from unpublished official records whereas Section 124 covers only public officer to whom communications are made in official confidence. Under Section 123 the unpublished record must relate to affairs of the State where as under Section 124 the communications need not necessarily relate to affairs of State but must have been made in official confidence. But both the sections are based on public policy, i.e., there should be possible injury to public interest from the disclosure of either unpublished official record relating to the affairs of the State or any communications made in official confidence. Under Section 123 it must be a document which is in the form of a record. But under Section 124 the communication may be oral or documentary. Under Section 123 it is only the head of the department concerned who can permit or withhold the permission to disclose the unpublished official record. Under Section 124 the official who receives the communication is the person concerned and not necessarily the head of department, who is competent to permit or withhold the disclosure of the communications.

Sometimes 'Communications' which expression is used in Section 124 may relate to affairs of the State in which case Section 123 would apply. In such cases Section 124 is more or less supplementary to Section 123. In this connection Section 162 of this Act becomes relevant as it states that a witness once summoned to produce shall, if it is in his possession or power, bring it to court not withstanding any objection which there may be to its production or admissibility and the validity of any such objection shall be decided by the court. On its production, if the court thinks fit, it may inspect the document, unless it refers to matters of State, or take other evidence to enable it to determine its admissibility.

---

24. P.P. v. Pocku Syed Ismail, 1973 Cr LJ 931 (AP).
25. Union of India v. Sudhir Kumar, AIR 1963 Ori 111.
26. University of the Punjab, Lahore v. Jaswant Rai, ILR (1946) 27 Lah 561.
27. S. Ajit Singh v. Ashwani Kumar, ILR (1954) Pun 359.
28. Mutsaddilal v. Union of India, ILR (1955) Hyd 256 : AIR 1955 Hyd 81; Public Prosecutor v. D. Venkata Narasayya, ILR (1957) AP 174 : AIR 1957 AP 486.
29. Sub-divisional Officer v. Raja Sri Niwas Prasad Singh, AIR 1966 SC 1164.

The provisions contained in Section 123 and 124 of the Evidence Act are supplementary to each other and are based on broad principles of public policy. The courts are to see that the officials of the State Government do not use the provisions as a mere cloak for withholding necessary and relevant evidence only to defeat a just claim of any party. Though an arbitrator does not constitute a regular court, he has to use sound judicial discretion and he may, in certain cases compel the production of documents, which he thinks, do not contain any evidence derived from unofficial records relating to the affairs of the State or are communications in official confidence.[30]

A communication which is made to a public officer and which may relate to the affairs of the State would be covered by the Section 123 but if the official communication is made in official confidence and where the affairs of the State are not involved and if public interest would otherwise suffer by disclosure Section 124 shall apply. If a case falls under Section 124, the court can inspect the document in question and determine the claim of privilege. The returns submitted to an Income-tax Officer and a statement made to him cannot be said to be made in official confidence within the meaning of Section 124.[31]

Reports made by one public officer to another in the discharge of his official duties would come both within the ambit of Section 123 and within the scope of Section 124. When the public officer to whom they are sent in official confidence considers that the public interest would suffer by their disclosure if they relate to matters relating to public policy, they come within the meaning of Section 123. In both Section 123 and 124 the court is the judge as to whether the documents in respect of which privilege is claimed is a State document or whether the communications was made in official confidence. Under Section 124 the court can inspect the document to determine the claim of privilege. If the document comes within the Section 123, the court cannot inspect it though it can take other evidence to determine the character attributed to the document. As regards the questions whether a disclosure will or will not be prejudicial to the public interest the head of the department concerned under Section 123 or the officer concerned under Section 124 is the judge and it would be final.[32]

It was held by the Supreme Court that the privilege claimed by the State in regard to the departmental notings contained in official files should not be rejected except when the affidavit filed on behalf of the Government did not adequately bring out the involvement of public interest, consequent upon the disclosure of the notings. The High Court is to be confined to the particular facts of the case for rejecting the calling upon the Government to produce confidential notings in the official files, if the disclosure thereof is calculated to impair public interest.[33]

Under Section 124 the public officer may waive a privilege in his own discretion without any reference to the Head of the Department. Whereas under Section 123, even if privilege is not claimed, the document cannot be admitted if public interest suffers. Mere marking as confidential does not by itself be the basis of claiming privilege under Section 124. But it must be further shown that the public interest would suffer by the disclosure of that document.[34]

In cases of departmental enquiry the statements of witnesses during investigation by the C.I.D. do not come within Section 162, Cr.P.C. and the parties are not entitled to be given copies of those statements, the C.I.D. can claim privilege under Section 123 or 124.[35]

Income-tax Officer in certain cases can be treated as a public officer and can claim privilege under Section 124.[36]

The contention that this section applies only to an officer who received the document and it does not prevent producing that document, by the sender of the document, cannot be accepted as it would completely put at naught the provisions of Section 124.[37]

---

30. Kapoor Nilokheri Co-op. Dairy Farm v. Union of India, ILR (1971) 1 Punj 391.
31. Jethanand v. State of Rajasthan, 1972 Cr LJ 1496 (Raj); B.R. Srinivasan v. B. Parakala Swamy Mutt, AIR 1960 Mys 186; Bhalachandra v. Chanbasappa, AIR 1939 Bom 237; Chiragh Din Md. Bakhsh v. Crown, 52 Cr LJ 161 (Lah).
32. State of A.P. v. Appanna, (1962) 2 CrLJ 649, relying on State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukh Dev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493; Nagarrja Pillai v. Secretary of State, AIR 1915 Mad 1113; Local Government Board v. Arlidge, 1915 AC 120; Gangaram v. Union of India, AIR 1964 Pat 444. The decision in State of Punjab v. S.S. Singh, 1961 SC 493 supra was overruled in S.P. Gupta v. Union of India, 1982 SC 149 see commentary at the end of this section.
33. State of Orissa v. Jaganath Jona, AIR 1977 SC 2201.
34. Firm G. Mohi-ud-Din v. State of J&K, AIR 1961 J&K 20.
35. James Bushi v. Collector of Ganjam, AIR 1959 Ori 122.
36. Kader Kutty v. Agricultural Income-tax Officer, Tellicherry, AIR 1961 Ker 32.
37. 1967 Cur LJ 488.

4. COMMUNICATIONS MADE IN OFFICIAL CONFIDENCE

The first question that arises under this section is whether the communications in question was made to the public officer in official confidence. This is a condition precedent to the claim, and the question is to be primarily decided by the Court before whom the privilege is claimed. There is no clear cut rule of procedure as to when and how the privilege should be claimed. It would be claimed at the earliest opportunity by the public officer concerned when in reply to the summons he produces the document in his control or charge.[38] Communications in official confidence import no special decree of secrecy and no pledge or direction for its maintenance, but include generally all matters communicated by one officer to another in the performance of their duties. The question whether such communication was made in the course of such performance is for the court to decide.[39] A demi-official letter addressed by one officer by name to another officer by name, in view of the reasons for which demi-official letters are usually written, is written in official confidence within the meaning of this section.[40] If communications are not made in official confidence they cannot be regarded as privileged, e.g., statements made to a station master of a railway in the course of an inquiry of a theft by some railway employees.[41]

A Government resolution containing opinions of Government officers, including a legal adviser, is a privileged document within the meaning of this section.[42] A statement made to the Collector by the proprietors applying for taking over their estate by the court of Wards, showing the details of their property and liabilities, is a communication made to a public officer in official confidence within the meaning of this section and cannot be used as acknowledgement of any liability mentioned therein.[43]

5. OFFICIAL CONFIDENCE

It was held that the words "Official Confidence" in Section 124 indicate that the section applies to communications from one public officer to another public officer in discharge of their official duties and not to communications to such officer by outsiders.[44] For the protection under Section 124 the communication in official confidence must be such as to involve a wilful confiding of secrets to avoid publicity by reason of the official position of the person in whom trust is reposed.[45]

Where an eqnuiry is one under Section 176, Cr.P.C. the copies of depositions of witnesses taken in such an enquiry, should be furnished to the accused. The enquiry under police standing order 145 is not a statutory enquiry. As the enquiry is held in open and witnesses are examined in the presence of others, the question of privilege under Section 124 would not arise, and the communications made by any witness to the officer conducting the enquiry cannot be held to be in official confidence.[46]

Accused has no right to the free or certified copies of statements of the witnesses made during the investigation of a different offence in an earlier investigation, as they are communications made in official confidence, to the investigating officer.[47] But the case diary maintained by the police is privileged, as it does not form part of the case record.[48] It was held in a defamation case, that the statements made before the police officer during the course of investigation is not absolutely privileged.[49] However in a defamation case it was held that the complaint made to a police officer is absolutely privileged.[50] In Chandradhar v. Deputy Commissioner, Lucknow,[51] it was held that the term

---

38. Bhalchandra v. Chanbasappa, (1938) 41 Bom LR 391 : AIR 1939 Bom 237.
39. Nagaraja Pillai v. Secretary of State, ILR (1914) 39 Mad 304, 311 : AIR 1919 Mad 1113.
40. Chandra Dhar Tewari v. Deputy Commissioner, Lucknow, ILR (1938) 14 Luck 351 : AIR 1939 Oudh 65.
41. King-Emperor v. Bhagwati Prasad, ILR (1929) 5 Luck 297.
42. Sursingji Dajiraj v. Secretary of State, (1926) 29 Bom LR 1213 : AIR 1926 Bom 590.
43. Collector of Jaunpur v. Jamna Prasad, ILR (1922) 44 All 360 : AIR 1922 All 37.
44. State of A P v. Appanna, (1962) 2 Cr LJ 649, relied on Nagaraja Pillai v. Secretary of State, AIR 1915 Mad 1113.
45. Ramanna v. Govt. of A.P., AIR 1971 AP 196.
46. In re : Subramanian Chettiar, 1967 Cr LJ 1232.
47. Suryamani Tarai v. State, 1967 AIR Ori 189; See also Jhumarlal v. State, AIR 1957 Raj 185; Purushotham v. State of Kutch, AIR 1954 SC 700; Gurbachan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 623.
48. Mahabirji v. Prem Narain, AIR 1965 Lah 494 relying on Emperor v. Dharam Vir, AIR 1933 Lah 498.
49. Maroti Sadashiv v. Narayan Rao, AIR 1959 Bom 443, see CONTRA, Sanjivi v. Koneri, AIR 1926 Mad 521, Madhab Chandra v. Nirod Chandra, AIR 1939 Cal 477.
50. K. Ramadas v. P. Samu Pillai, (1969) 1 Mad LJ 338.
51. AIR 1939 Oudh 65.

'public officer' in Section 124 must be construed to be an officer with public, as opposed to private, duties, who receives communications made to him in official confidence of such as nature that disclosure in certain cases would injure the public interest. The court of wards for the purpose of Section 124 should be taken as coming within the term public officer.[52] Opinions given by a Law Secretary who functions as a legal Remembrancer to the State, regarding the plaintiff's claim against the State and which are in the nature of advice given by the legal adviser to his client are privileged communications.[53]

6. COMMUNICATIONS MADE IN OFFICIAL CONFIDENCE—SOME INSTANCES

A statement made in a confidential departmental enquiry for gathering information by the department to guide them in future action, would be a case of communication made in official confidence.[54] A communication made by one Secretary to another Secretary of the Government is a communication in official confidence and privilege can be claimed.[55] Observations made by the High Court on a report of an enquiry officer against the conduct of a Judicial Officer, forwarded to the Governor are communications made in official confidence and are privileged.[56] The correspondence between superior authorities with regard to the confirmation or non-confirmation of a Government servant in a particular post are communications made in official confidence and they are privileged.[57] Statement made to a Collector by the proprietors applying for taking over their estates by the Court of wards, showing their financial position and their liabilities were held as communications made in official confidence.[58] A report from a Deputy Tahsildhar to the Collector is a communication in official confidence.[59]

7. COMMUNICATIONS NOT IN OFFICIAL CONFIDENCE—INSTANCES

Communications made by one officer to another in matters which arise out of commercial relations which subsist between the State on one side and a private citizen on the other, cannot be treated as communications made in official confidence.[60] The mere fact that the production of the document might adversely tell upon the fortunes of the litigants would not be sufficient to hold that the documents were made in official confidence, and that their disclosure would affect adversely the interest of the State.[61] Cables sent are not communications to public officer in official confidence.[62] Communications between officers empowerd to impose penalty and the higher authorities with regard to assessment or penalty proceedings under the Income- tax Act cannot be said to be communications made in official confidence, and the authorities are not entitled to privilege under Section 124 because in law these authorities are not entitled to exchange opinions or give advice in regard to Judicial Proceedings.[63] A party to an action who had made a communication to the Government or to a head of the department is entitled to ask for its production. The Government or the head of the department has no right to claim any privilege in respect of such a document as it was not made in official confidence.[64] A valuation statement given by a Revenue Inspector on the basis of which the award was passed could not be said to be a communication made in official confidence.[65] Statements recorded during investigation by a police officer are not

---

52. Vishnomal v. Court of Wards, AIR 1928 Sindh 76; Queen-Empress v. Mathura Prasad (Manager of Court of Wards), 21 All 127, see CONTRA, Nanda Lal Bose v. Ashutosh Ghose, AIR 1920 Cal 167 (case of Manager of Court of words).
53. Tirath Ram v. Govt. of J&K, AIR 1954 J&K 11.
54. In re : Suryanarayana Naidu, AIR 1954 Mad 278; B.R. Srinivasan v. B. Parakalaswamy Mutt, AIR 1960 Mys 180.
55. K.S. Venkatesam Naidu v. State of Madras, AIR 1959 Mad 335; State of A.P. v. Appanna, (1962) 1 An WR 256.
56. Md. Ilyas Alvi v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 Bom 156.
57. Har Prasad Gupta v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 All 415.
58. Collector of Jaunpur v. Jamna Prasad, ILR 44 All 360 : AIR 1922 All 37.
59. In re : Makky Moithu, AIR 1943 Mad 278.
60. Tirath Ram v. Govt. of J&K, AIR 1954 J&K 11.
61. Tirath Ram v. Govt. of J&K, AIR 1954 J&K 11.
62. Hussain Umar v. Dalipsinghji, AIR 1970 SC 45, 52.
63. Union of India v. Sheo Shankar Sitaram, (1974) 95 ITR 523 (All).
64. Firm Ghulam Mohi-ud-din v. State of J&K, AIR 1961 J&K 20.
65. Kunjanam Antony v. State of Kerala, AIR 1964 Ker 274.

statements made in official confidence.[66] Particulars contained in the record of assessment are not made in official confidence.[67]

A distinction has to be drawn between cases where two citizens engaged in civil litigation want official communications to be disclosed at the time of the trial and the cases in which the State has entered into a commercial transaction with a private citizen in the course of which the State has made certain communications pertaining to the cases in which it is interested as a defendant or a plaintiff. In the former case the State not being interested either way a Government Officer is expected to keep before himself only the interests of public before a privilege is claimed, but in a case in which the State itself is a party, the court must be satisfied that the mind of the responsible officer has been applied to the question as to whether the safety of the public interest warrants giving or withholding of the information. The court must also be convinced that the privilege is not claimed to avoid inconvenient disclosure which may tell against its own side in the litigation, or as a matter of mere departmental routine.[68]

8. PUBLIC INTEREST SHOULD SUFFER BY THE DISCLOSURE

The second condition to the claim under Section 124 is that the disclosure of the contents of the communication to the public officer must in his opinion, be proved to be injurious or detrimental to public interest. The court must therefore apply its mind and peruse each document before disallowing any claim of privilege, as there may be portions of a document which cannot be disclosed without injury to public interest. Where the document is partly privileged and partly not, the court is neither competent nor justified to direct its production as it is really not in public interest to permit the production of such a document. It is only in cases where the court is satisfied that the disclosure of the contents of the document or information or statement would in any way injure or adversely affect public interest, the claim of privilege can be rejected, but not otherwise. The ingredients of Section 124 must be held to have been satisfied if the communication is made to a public officer either by a private citizen or another public officer in official confidence and if the public officer considers that the disclosure of the contents of the same would injure public interest. The very intention and purpose of Sections 123, 124 and 125 is to safeguard the interests of general public. Hence, the provisions of Section 124 must be construed liberally so as to take it within their ambit any communications made to public officer in official confidence irrespective of the person who communicates.[69]

The public officer before claiming protection under Section 124 must come to a positive conclusion that by the disclosure of the communications public interest would suffer. He cannot claim protection under Section 124 on any other ground.[70]

The government can claim privilege in respect of the file on which decision as to the appointment of the President of Customs, Excise and Gold Control Appellate Tribunal was made by it.[71]

9. WHEN HE CONSIDERS THAT THE PUBLIC INTERESTS WOULD SUFFER BY THE DISCLOSURE

The public officer claiming privilege has to exercise his own discretion in giving or refusing disclosure.[72] His decision must not be arbitrary or capricious. He should not claim privilege merely because such disclosure would either advance the case of the adversary or damage his case. This section must in no event be resorted to as a cloak to shield the truth from the Court.[73]

---

66. Apparao v. Suryaprakasa Rao, AIR 1951 Mad 864; Tilka v. State, AIR 1959 All 543; In re : Subramaniam Chettiar, 1967 Cr LJ 1232; Mahabirji v. Prem Narain, AIR 1965 All 494; Soryamoni Tarai v. State of Orissa, AIR 1967 Ori 189.
67. Allah Bux v. Ratanlal Jain, AIR 1958 All 829.
68. Tirath Ram v. Govt. of J&K, AIR 1954 J&K 11.
69. Public Prosecutor, A.P. v. Pocku Syed Ismail, 1973 Cr LJ 931 (AP); In re : Suryanarayana Naidu, AIR 1954 Mad 278; In re : Subramanian Chettiar, 1967 Cr LJ 1232 (Mad); Kotah Match Factory v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1970 Raj 118; Venkatesam Naidu v. State of Madras, AIR 1959 Mad 335.
70. B.R. Srinivasan v. B. Parakalaswamy Mutt, AIR 1960 Mys 186; Excelsior Film Exchange v. Union of India, AIR 1968 Bom 322.
71. R.K. Jain v. Union of India, AIR 1993 SC 1769 (paras 4 and 60).
72. Jehangir v. Secretary of State, (1903) 6 Bom LR 160; King-Emperor v. Bhagwati Prasad, ILR (1929) 5 Luck 297
73. Excelsior Film Exchange v. Union of India, (1966) 69 Bom LR 878 : AIR 1968 Bom 322.

10. WHO IS TO DECIDE ?

Under Section 124 whether the communication in question was made in official confidence is a matter for the court to decide.[74]

It was held by VENKATASUBBRAO J., that there are two matters involved in this section. Firstly, whether a particular document for which the privilege is claimed falls within it, i.e. whether the document is a communication made to a public officer in official confidence. On a proper construction of the section, it is for the court to decide that question. Secondly, if the court decides that the document is of the nature contemplated by the section, then the public officer himself is the sole judge as to whether by its disclosure public interest would suffer. (that alone being the ground of privilege).[75] This distinction of deciding the two matters involved in this section was drawn earlier in Venkatachela Chetty v. Sampathu Chetty[76].

In all these above cases it was held that the second question, namely whether disclosure of the communication results in public interest being harmed (would suffer) is to be decided by the public officer concerned. However, the Supreme Court held that the court has the inherent power to look into the document and decide and the head of the department is not the sole judge to decide that question.[77]

In view of the decision in Gupta's case the decisions above referred to insofar as they decide that the decision of the officer concerned whether the disclosure by the communication is in public interest is final and cannot be received by the Court are no longer good law.

See Commentary under Section 123.

Information as to commission of offences.

S. 125. No Magistrate or Police-officer, shall be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence, and no Revenue-officer shall be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence against the public revenue.

Explanation.*—"Revenue-officer" in this section means any officer employed in or about the business of any branch of the public revenue.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1195
2. Source of Information ... 1196
3. Police officer ... 1197
4. No adverse inference if objection is raised ... 1198

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section which provides that no Magistrate or Police Officer shall be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of an offence and that no Revenue Officer shall be compelled to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence against the public revenue, is based on public policy. It is of importance to the public for the detection of crimes that those

---

74. B.R. Srinivasan v. B Parakalaswamy Mutt, AIR 1960 Mys 186; Thirath Ram v. Government of J&K, AIR 1954 J&K 11; Kunjanam Antony v. State of Kerala, AIR 1964 Ker 274; State of Kerala v. Midland Rubber and Products Co., 1971 Ker 228; Kunjannam v. State of Kerala, ILR (1964) 2 Ker 83; Brijnath Kerdarnath v. State of M.P., 1957 Cr LJ 134; In re : Suryanarayana Naidu, AIR 1954 Mad 278; Gangaram v. Union of India, AIR 1964 Pat 444; Public Prosecutor v. Pocku Syed Ismail, 1973 Cr LJ 931.
75. Vythilinga Pandarasannidhi v. Secretary of State, 1953 Mad 342.
76. ILR 32 Mad 62; Nagaraja Pillai v. Secretary of State, AIR 1915 Mad 1113; Collector of Jaunpur v. Jamnaprasad, ILR 44 All 360 : AIR 1922 All 37; In re : Mantu Bhai Mehta, AIR 1945 Bom 122; Bhalchandra v. Chanbasappa, AIR 1939 Bom 237; Chandra Dhar v. Deputy Commissioner, Lucknow, AIR 1939 Oudh 65; Tirath Ram v. Govt. of J&K, AIR 1954 J&K 11; In re : Suryanarayana Naidu, AIR 1954 Mad 278; State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493.
77. S.P. Gupta v. Union of India, AIR 1982 SC 149 following the earlier case in Union of India v. Rajnarayana, AIR 1975 SC 865.

persons who are the channel by means of which the detection is made should not be unnecessarily disclosed.

"It is perfectly right, that all opportunities should be afforded to discuss the truth of the evidence given against a prisoner, but there is a rule which has universally obtained on account of its importance to the public for the detection of crimes, that those persons, who are the channel by means of which the detection is made, should not be unnecessarily disclosed."[78]

The section places a prohibition on compelling the Magistrate, Police Officer or Revenue Officer to say from which source he had the information referred to in the section. It appears therefore that he can give the information if he is so willing in which case he waives the privilege.[79] Thus a Magistrate or Police Officer or Revenue Officer has the discretion to give out such information as to the commission of the offence or not. But under the English Law it is the duty of the Judge to exclude such information whether any objection is taken by the witness, or not, if it is detrimental to the public interest. But if the Judge feels that such exclusion results in miscarriage of justice, he may relax the rule.[80]

The above principle was adopted by WOODROFFE J., who observed: "Though the section (Section 125) does not in express terms prohibit the witness, if he be willing, from saying whence he got the information, both the English authorities from which the rule is taken and a consideration of the foundation to the rule show that the protection should not be made to depend upon a claim of privilege being put forward, but that it is the duty of the judge, apart from objection taken, to exclude the evidence. A fortiori if objection is taken, it cannot, since the law allows it, be made the ground of adverse inference against the witness."[81]

The Allahabad High Court observed: "Section 125 entitles a Police Officer to refuse to disclose the source of his information as to the commission of any offence, while public policy demands that no adverse inference be drawn against the prosecution for withholding an information from the witness-box."[82]

It is absolutely essential to the welfare of the State that the names of spies, decoys or informers should not be divulged; for, otherwise, be it from fear, or shame, or the dislike or being mixed up in enquiries of this nature, few men would choose to assume the disagreeable part of giving or receiving information respecting offences, and the consequence would be that a great many crimes would pass unpunished.

2. SOURCE OF INFORMATION

What is prohibited under the section is the disclosure of only the source of information as to the commission of offence. In England the law is different. The rule protects not only the names of the persons by, or to, whom the disclosure was made, but the nature of the information given, and any other question as to the channel of communication or what was done under it.[83] Thus the witness cannot be asked whether he himself was the informer[84] or even by whom he had been advised to communicate his information to the authorities[85] nor can a police constable be cross-examined as to what passed between himself and his superior officer[86]; or as to inquiries made in the course of his duties.[87] A witness may, however, be asked whether the person to whom he made the communication was a Magistrate or not[88];

---

78. Per EYRE, LORD CHIEF JUSTICE in R v. Hardy, (1794) 24 How. St. Tr. 199. see TAYLOR, 939; Amrita Lal Hazra v. Emperor, ILR 42 C 957 : 29 IC 513 : 16 Cr. LJ 97.
79. Mahamed Ally v. Emperor, 12 Cr LJ 277.
80. Marks v. Beyfus, (1890) 25 QBD 494 CA; Hennesey v. Wright, (1888) 21 QBD 509.
81. Weston v. Peary Mohan Dass, ILR 40 Cal 898.
82. State of U.P. v. Randhir Sri Chand, AIR 1959 All 727, following Home v. Bentick, (1820) 2 B&B 162.
83. R v. Hardy, (1794) 24 How. St. Tr. 199; R v. Watson, (1817) 32 How. St. Tr. 82; Marks v. Beyfus, ante, Auten v. Rayner, (1958) 1 WLR 1300.
84. Att.-Gen. v. Briant, (1846) 15 M&W 169.
85. R. v. Hardy, ante.
86. R. v. Herlihi, (1898) 32 Ir. LT 38.
87. R. v. Carpenter, (1911) 156 C.C.C. Sess. Pap. 261, per CHANNELL J.
88. Ibid.

and a constable has been compelled to disclose in which house he was secreted whilst watching licensed premises kept open after hours.[89]

In Sarkar's Law of Evidence (1990 Re-print of 13th Ed., p. 1236) it is however observed "The law does not appear to be otherwise in India. 'Information' must necessarily include not only names of persons but also the nature and source of information. It includes all questions relating to the channel through which the detection is made. If information is confined to names only, the rule would be infructuous. But the privilege does not apply to the contents of the statement, for the contents of the communication must necessarily be disclosed while prosecuting the offender."

The Madras High Court held that Section 125 contemplates only the prohibition of the source from whom the Magistrate or the Police Officer got the information as to the commission of the offence and not as to the custody of any documents or other material objects, that might have been seized and that might be tendered in evidence in support of the commission of the offence.[90] Section 125 secures privilege for a Magistrate or a Police Officer to refuse to say whence he got any information as to the commission of any offence. The FIR is not a privileged document to get any protection under Section 125.[91] This section has no application to an informer who lays sworn information and thereby initiates criminal proceedings.[92] If in asking for the production of a complaint the object is to ascertain the informer's name, the complaint can be refused to be produced.[93]

Section 162, Cr PC prohibits the use of statement of a witnesses recorded by the Police Officer except for contradicting the statement of the witness. Under Section 125, a Police Officer cannot be compelled to say as to how he got the information relating to the commission of any offence. Under Section 91, Cr PC, (Section 94 old) the discretion for production of a document should be exercised so that it may not come into conflict with the policy of Section 125.[94]

3. POLICE OFFICER

A prohibition officer under the Prohibition Act is a Police Officer only for the purpose of Section 125 and not for any other purpose.[95] (Excise Inspector empowered under the Opium Act can claim privilege as a Police Officer). It may be noted that for purpose of Section 25 of this Act (relating to Confession) it was held that a prohibition officer is not a Police Officer.[96]

A Police Officer can not be questioned as to the source from which he got information. He can not say that from a source he learnt that certain persons were going to commit dacoity in a certain locality, because it would be hearsay evidence, and is inadmissible.[97]

Where a Magistrate suggested that the spy should have been examined, it was held that he ignored the provisions of Section 125 which provides that no Magistrate or Police Officer shall be compelled to disclose the source of information as to the commission of an offence.[98]

The accused is not entitled to elicit from a prosecution witnesses whether he was a spy or an informer, or discover from police officials the names of persons from whom they had received information; but a detective cannot refuse, on grounds of public policy, to answer a question as to where he was secreted.[99]

---

89. Webb v. Catchlove, (1886) 3 TLR 159.
90. Public Prosecutor v. M. N. Govindaraja Mudaliar, AIR 1954 Mad 1023.
91. Munnasingh Tomar v. State of M.P., 1989 Cr LJ 580 (MP)(DB).
92. Liladhar v. Emperor, (1915) 16 Cr LJ 447.
93. Bagumal v. Emperor, (1917) 18 Cr LJ 70.
94. R. v. Bilal Mahommed, ILR 1940 Bom 768.
95. Public Prosecutor v. Shaik Dawood, AIR 1957 AP 977; State of Kerala v. Chacka, ILR (1967) 2 Ker 687.
96. In re : Venkata Reddy, AIR 1948 Mad 116; Srinivasa Narasimha v. State, 1954 Mad WN 659.
97. Sitaram Mahato v. State, ILR (1957) 2 Cal 57.
98. State of U.P. v. Dhanpati, AIR 1960 Pat 582.
99. Amrita Lal Hazra v. Emperor, ILR (1915) 42 Cal 957 : AIR 1916 Cal 188.

4. NO ADVERSE INFERENCE IF OBJECTION IS RAISED

If objection is taken, it cannot, since the law allows it, be made a ground of adverse inference against the witness.[1]

Professional communications.

S. 126. No barrister, attorney, pleader or vakil shall at any time be permitted, unless with his client's express consent, to disclose any communication made to him in the course and for the purpose of his employment as such barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil, by or on behalf of his client, or to state the contents or condition of any document with which he has become acquainted in the course and for the purpose of his professional employment, or to disclose any advice given by him to his client in the course and for the purpose of such employment:

Provided that nothing in this section shall protect from disclosure—

(1) any such communication made in furtherance of any illegal purpose;

(2) any fact observed by any barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil, in the course of his employment as such, showing that any crime or fraud has been committed since the commencement of his employment.

It is immaterial whether the attention of such barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil was or was not directed to such fact by or on behalf of his client.

Explanation.*—The obligation stated in this section continues after the employment has ceased.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) A, a client, says to B, an attorney—"I have committed forgery and I wish you to defend me."

As the defence of a man known to be guilty is not a criminal purpose, this communication is protected from disclosure.

(b) A, a client, says to B, an attorney—"I wish to obtain possession of property by the use of a forged deed on which I request you to sue."

This communication, being made in furtherance of a criminal purpose, is not protected from disclosure.

(c) A, being charged with embezzlement, retains B, an attorney, to defend him. In the course of the proceedings, B observes that an entry has been made in A's account book, charging A with the sum said to have been embezzled, which entry was not in the book at the commencement of his employment.

This being a fact observed by B in the course of his employment, showing that a fraud has been committed since the commencement of the proceedings, it is not protected from disclosure.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope	...	1199	9. Time of consultation—Rejection or Retention	...	1204
2. Privilege may be waived	...	1200	10. Or to state the contents or condition of any document	...	1204
3. Barrister, Attorney	...	1201	11. "Express Consent"	...	1205
4. Chartered Accountant	...	1202	12. Provisos—Illegal purposes	...	1205
5. At any time	...	1202	13. Pleading and Proof	...	1206
6. To Disclose	...	1202
7. Any Communication	...	1203
8. In the course and for the purpose of his employment	...	1203

1. Weston v. Peary Mohan Dass, ILR (1912) 40 Cal 898, 920.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Sections 126 to 129 deal with the privilege that is attached to professional communications between the legal adviser and the client. Sections 126 and 128 mention the circumstances under which the legal adviser can give evidence of such professional communications. Section 127 provides that interpreters, clerks or servants of legal advisers are restrained similarly. Section 129 says when a legal adviser can be compelled to disclose the confidential communication which has taken place between him and his client.

Under this section no barrister, attorney, pleader or vakil shall any time be permitted to:

(1) disclose (i) any communication made to him by or on behalf of his client or (ii) any advice given by him to his client in the course and for the purpose of his employment;

(2) to state the contents or conditions of any document with which he has become acquainted in the course and for the purpose of his employment.

The section does not protect from disclosure—

(1) any communication made in furtherance of any illegal purpose;

(2) any fact observed in the course of employment showing that any crime or fraud has been committed since the commencement.

This section is based upon the principle that if communications to a legal adviser were not privileged, a man would be deterred from fully disclosing his case, so as to obtain proper professional aid in a matter in which he is likely to be thrown into litigation.[2]

The section not only protects the legal adviser from disclosing communications made to him by his client when interrogated as a witness, but he is not permitted to do so even if he is willing to give evidence unless with the express consent of his client. Section 126 has been enacted for the protection of the client and not of the lawyer. And it is founded on the impossibility of conducting legal business without professional assistance and on the necessity, of securing full and unreserved intercourse between the two, in order to render that assistance effectual.

The privilege is the privilege of the client and not of the legal advisor. The latter is therefore bound to claim the privilege unless it is waived by his client expressely under Section 126 or impliedly under Section 128, e.g. by examining the legal advisor as to the privileged communication.[3]

In HALSBURY LAWS OF EVIDENCE, 4th Ed., Vol. 17, Para 237, page 166 it is observed: "Confidential communications passing between a client and his legal adviser and made for the purpose of obtaining or giving legal advice are in general, privileged from disclosure. The privilege is available in respect of the oral testimony of witnesses, and the principles which determine whether a communication is or is not privileged are the same for both oral and written communications. The privilege is that of the client and may be waived by him."

In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), Paras 20-04, 20-05 and 20-06, Pages 506-507 it is observed: "In Wheeler v. Le Marchant,[4] JESSEL M.R. analysed legal professional privilege as a manifestation of the principle protecting confidentiality, distinguishing for this purpose between communications with a lawyer which do enjoy this protection and communications with a doctor, priest or confidant, which do not. The protection is restricted to the obtaining of legal advice and assistance and all things reasonably necessary in the shape of communication to the legal advisers are protected from production or discovery in order that that legal advice may be obtained safely and sufficiently. The policy justifying a rule "which protects confidential communications from discovery as regards the other side" was described by JESSEL M.R. in Anderson v. Bank of British Columbia[5] as follows :

---

2. Greenough v. Gaskel, (1833) 1 Myl & K 98.
3. Ayasha Bi v. Peer Khan Sahib, AIR 1954 M 741.
4. (1881) 17 Ch D 675, 681.
5. (1876) 2 Ch D 644, 649.

"The object and meaning of the rule is this: that as, by reason of the complexity and difficulty of our law, litigation can only be properly conducted by professional men, it is absolutely necessary that a man, in order to prosecute his rights or to defend himself from an improper claim, should have resource to the assistance of professional lawyers, and being so absolutely necessary, it is equally necessary, to use a vulgar phrase, that he should be able to make a clean breast of it to the gentleman whom he consults with a view to the prosecution of his claim, or the substantiating [of] his defence against the claim of others; that he should be able to place unrestricted and unbounded confidence in the professional agent, and that the communications he so makes to him should be kept secret, unless with his consent (for it is his privilege, and not the privilege of the confidential agent) that he should be enabled properly to conduct his litigation. That is the meaning of the rule."

The historical development of legal advice privilege is reviewed in detail in R. v. Derby Magistrates ex p. B.[6]

Confidential communications between a lawyer and client which come into existence for the purpose of giving or getting legal advice are privileged at all times. The privilege may be asserted by successors in title. It covers direct communications and communications through agents. It covers all documents generated for the purpose of giving or getting legal advice, not merely letters to and from solicitors and instructions to and opinions from counsel, but also all working papers and drafts. The privilege exists whether or not litigation is contemplated or pending.

The second category of legal professional privilege is wider than the first but arises only when litigation is in prospect or pending. From that moment on, any communications between the client and his solicitor or agent or between one of them and a third party will be privileged if they come into existence for the sole or dominant purpose of either giving or getting advice in regard to the litigation or collecting evidence for use in the litigation. This is the basis for claiming privilege for correspondence with witnesses of fact or experts and proofs, reports or documents generated by them.

The rule was stated by JAMES L.J. in Anderson v. Bank of British Columbia[7]:

". . .as you may have no right to see your adversary's brief, you have no right to see that which comes into existence merely as materials for the brief . . ."

A more modern rationalisation was set out by DONALDSON M.R. in Lee v. South West Thames Health Authority[8]:

"The principle is that a defendant or potential defendant shall be free to seek evidence without being obliged to disclose the result of his researches to his opponent."

In order for litigation privilege to apply, there must be a confidential communication between client or lawyer or agent, or between one of these and a third party made for the dominant purpose of use in litigation, that is, to seek or provide information or evidence to be used in or in connection with litigation in which the client is or may become a party and when litigation is either in process or reasonably in prospect."

The rule is established for the protection of the client, not of the lawyer; and is founded on the impossibility of conducting legal business without professional assistance, and on the necessity, in order to render that assistance effectual, of securing full and unreserved intercourse between the two.[9]

2. PRIVILEGE MAY BE WAIVED

The privilege, therefore, may be waived by the client, but not by the adviser.[10]

---

6. (1996) 1 AC 487.
7. (1876) 2 Ch D 644, 676.
8. (1985) 1 WLR 845, 850.
9. Jones v. Great Central Ry. (1910) AC 4, 5; Lyell v. Kennedy, (1884) 9 App. Cas. 81, 86; Wheeler v. Le Merchant, (1881) 17 Ch. D. 675, 681-682. Waugh v. British Railway Board, (1980) AC 521 (HL) per LORD WILBERFORCE at p. 531 CF).
10. Wilson v. Rastall, (1792) 4 TR 758; Proctor v. Smiles, (1886) 55 LJQB 527 (CA); Re. Cameron's Co., 25 Beav. 1, 4; R. v. Leverson, ante; Humphrey v. Wake, (1917) 33 TLR 433.

Nor can the latter claim the benefit of the privilege.[11]

In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE 15th Edn. (2000), para 20-07, page 508 it is observed: "The rule is established for the protection of the client, not the lawyer. It follows from this that the privilege can be waived by the client but not the lawyer.[12] The lawyer is under a professional obligation to assert the privilege until it is waived by the client.[13] Thus the lawyer has no locus to assert the privilege in his own right or commence proceedings in his own name for that purpose.[14] Nor can the lawyer invoke the privilege or use it for his own benefit if the client waives it.[15] Nor can the person to whom a litigant communicates under the cloak of litigation privilege claim to rely on it."[16]

3. BARRISTER, ATTORNEY

The restrictions imposed by this section extend also to communications made to Mukhtears when acting as pleaders for their clients.[17]

In HALSBURY'S LAWS OF EVIDENCE, 4th Edn., Vol. 17, para 237, page 166 it is stated: "Salaried legal advisers acting as such are in the same position for the purposes of this rule as independent legal advisers.[18] This rule was followed in Bombay Municipal v. Vijay Metal Works,[19] Foreign Legal advisers are in the same position, Duncan Garfield v. Jay.

Law Officers have been held to be within the scope of the section.[20] Communications between an insurer and his counsel are also privileged.[21]

Opinion given by a Law Secretary who functions as a legal remembrancer to the State, regarding the plaintiff's claim against the State and which are in the nature of an advice given by the legal adviser to his client are privileged.[22]

If an attorney discloses the facts which came to his knowledge while he was engaged as an attorney, he will be guilty of professional misconduct.[23]

In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 13th Ed., Para 15.09, Page: 296 it is stated: "The privilege attaching to confidential professional disclosures is confined to the case of legal advisers. This term certainly embraces salaried legal advisers. Amusement Machines Ltd. v. Customs and Excise Commissioners.[24] (The point was conceded in the House of Lords), and it may be that it goes further and includes any person to whom resort is made for specifically legal advice, notwithstanding that that person has no formal legal qualifications.[25] Foreign legal advisers are certainly within the scope of the privilege.[26]

---

11. Cf. Haywood v. Wegg-Prosser, (1978) 122 SJ 792 which is either incompletely reported or rets on a confusion between the privilege against the production of documents and privilege as that term is used in the law of defamation.
12. Wilson v. Rastall, (1792) 4 TR 753, cited in Derby Magistrates' Court by Lord TAYLOR C.J.
13. R. v. Central Criminal Court, ex p. Francis & Francis, (1989) 1 AC 346, 381, per Lord GRIFFITHS; Proctor v. Smiles, (1886) 55 LJQB 527.
14. Abbey National v. Clive Travers, May 19, 1999 CA; R. v. Central Criminal Court, ex p. Francis & Francis, (1989) 1 AC 346.
15. Re International Power Industries, (1985) BCLC 128, where the lawyer sought to rely on the privilege in answer to a personal subpoena despite the fact that client had waived it.
16. Schneider v. Leigh, (1955) 2 QB 195; Lee v. South West Thames Health Authority, (1985) 1 WLR 845.
17. Abbas Peada v. Queen-Empress, ILR (1898) 25 Cal 736.
18. Alfred Crompton Amusement Machines Ltd. v. Customs and Excise Commissioners, (No 2) (1972) 2 QB 102 : (1972) 2 All ER 353 at 371, CA; affirmed on other grounds (1974) AC 405 : (1973) 2 All ER 1169, HL.
19. 1982 Bom 60.
20. M C. of Greater Bombay v. Vijay Metal Works, AIR 1982 Bom 6.
21. R. Ramalingam v. P.R. Thakur, AIR 1982 Del 486.
22. Tirath v. Government of Jammu, AIR 1954 J&K 11.
23. In re : An Attorney, (1924) 26 Bom LR 887, FB : 1925 All 1 (FB).
24. Crompton (Alfred) Amusement Machines Ltd. v. Customs and Excise Commissioners, (1972) 2 QB 102 (CA) : (1972) 2 All ER 353.
25. M W Graxebrook Ltd. v. Wallens, (1973) 1 CR 256 (NIRC).
26. Mac Farlan v. Rolt, (1872) LR 14 EQ. 580; Great Atlantic Insurance Co. v. Home Insurance Co., (1981) 2 All ER 485 (CA).

The communication made to the advocate by the client in furtherance of his illegal purpose (here obtaining decree on a forged promissory note) is not privileged.[27]

The evidence of a practising lawyer that he was living half a kilometer away from the place of occurrence and the accused alone had gone to his house on the intervening right does not fall under this section and were, therefore, admissible.[28] Where an advocate was sought to be summoned to prove sending of notice to the defendant, claiming privilege in respect of it was not permissible as the contents of the said notice were not confidential as the same was already communicated.[29]

4. CHARTERED ACCOUNTANT

Where a Chartered Accountant disclosed the information acquired in the course of his professional engagement without the consent of his client, a bank, to third parties, he was held to be guilty of professional misconduct.[30]

5. AT ANY TIME

These words indicate that the legal adviser is not to disclose the communication even when the relation is ended or even after the client's death. The rule is "once privileged always privileged"[31] The explanation to the section clearly shows this.

The privilege continues throughout and does not get terminated by the termination of the litigation or the death of the parties.[32] This section imposes secrecy of the communications even after the employment has ceased, in view of the explanation under the section, and it has nothing to do whether at the time of making the communications there was any pending litigation or any prospect of it.[33] But the communication must have been made during the subsistence of the relationship between the legal adviser and the client.[34] And such privilege continues even when the client dies[35] and ensures for the benefit of successors of the client in any action when the relevant interest subsists.[36]

Privilage extends to communications made in contemplation of a suit.[37]

6. TO DISCLOSE

Communications protected by the section must be confidential. The word 'disclose' shows that the privileged communication must be of a confidential or private nature.[38] The word 'disclosure' implies that which was not already made known to others. If the communication by the client to the advocate is put in the form of a notice and that notice is produced in court in a defamation case, there is already a disclosure. So when the advocate is called upon to prove that notice he is not disclosing any fact for the first time, but is only substantiating what is already disclosed. Section 126, therefore does not stand in the way of summoning the advocate for this purpose.[39]

---

27. Gurunanak Provisions Stores v. Dulhonumal Savanmal, AIR 1994 Guj 31 (para 23).
28. V. Ravi v. State of Kerala, 1994 Cr LJ 162 (para 26) (Ker), distinguishing Hakam v. Emperor, AIR 1934 Lahore 269 : 1935 (36) Cr LJ 31.
29. P.G. Anantasayanam v. Miriyala Sathiraju, AIR 1998 AP 335 (para 2).
30. Council of the I.C.A.I. v. Mani S. Abraham, AIR 2000 Ker 212 (para 6).
31. Per COCKBURN CJ in Bullock v. Corrie, (1878) 3 QBD 356.
32. Ayeasha Bi v. Peerkhan Sahib, 1954 M 741; Bullock v. Corrie, (1878) LR 3 QBD 356—once prvileged always prvileged.
33. In re : An Attorney, (1924) 26 Bom LR 887 (FB) : AIR 1925 Bom 1; Moti Bai v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1954 Raj 241.
34. Minter v. Priest, (1930) AC 558.
35. Bullivant v. Attorney-General for Victoria, (1901) AC 196.
36. Schneider v. Leigh, (1955) 2 All ER 173.
37. Gansford v. Grammer, (1809) 2 Comp 9 but run in consultation in vague amherpation of Crompton (Alfred) Amusement Mechines Ltd. v. Customs and Excise Commissioners, (1972) 3 All ER 353 (CA).
38. Framji Bhicaji v. Mohansingh Dhansingh, ILR (1893) 18 Bom 263, 272; Memon Hajee Haroon Mahomed v. Moulvie Abdul Karim and Moola Ahmed Molla Abdulla, ILR (1878) 3 Bom 91, Emperor v. Rodrigues (1903) 5 Bom LR 122; Kalikumar Pal v. Rajkumar Pal, (1931) 58 Cal 1379 : AIR 1932 Cal 148.
39. P. Rajamma v. P. Chantiah, (1972) 2 An WR 253.

7. ANY COMMUNICATION

It is not every communication made by a person to his legal adviser that is privileged from disclosure. The privilege extends only to communications made to him confidentially, and with a view to obtaining professional advice.[40] This rule covers only the private and confidential communication between the client and the lawyer, which cannot be disclosed either by means of direct questions or elicited by means of indirect tactics. It does not preclude the lawyer from replying to the opposite party who wants to proceed against him for stating that what all he did was in pursuance of the instructions given to him and not on his own volition. The rule under Section 126 does not require that a lawyer should vicariously make himself responsible for an offence which he never committed. And in any event he will not be advancing his client's cause by remaining mute since in that case it is a fair inference to draw that what he did was either in violation or in excess of the instructions given to him.[41] Where the imputation concerning a third person was made by a lawyer in the presence of his client, the protection under Section 126 would not arise.[42] Communication to a third person in lawyers presence is not privileged.[43] The section applies as much to what a witness has learned by observation, e.g., by watching a manufacturing process being carried on, as to what is communicated to him by word of mouth or writing.[44]

8. IN THE COURSE AND FOR THE PURPOSE OF HIS EMPLOYMENT

The privilege applies to all communications oral or documentary in the course of or for the purpose of the employment as legal advisor.[45]

It was observed: "The Privilege extends to all communications between client and legal adviser in the course and for the purpose of his professional employment. If the communication is not made to a legal adviser in the course of professional employment, it does not matter if it was made under seal of secrecy. A mere gratuitous communication is not protected, it must be made to a person as professional adviser. Consultation as a friend is not sufficient. The privilege does not apply to communications made before the existence of the relationship or after it has ceased."[46]

A widow who wanted to adopt a son employed an attorney for the purpose of drawing up an adoption deed. After the draft was drawn up, it was approved by another independent firm of attorneys on behalf of the boy to be adopted. In a suit filed by a Bank for recovery of money alleging that the adoption was invalid, the attorney produced some papers including the draft adoption deed and also made some statements regarding the instructions he had from the widow. It was held that if the attorney was acting for the widow alone, the disclosures made by him were contrary to Section 126; if it is taken that the attorney was engaged by the widow and also the adopted son, it would not be open to the attorney to disclose the facts relating to the documents in the suit brought by the third party (bank) against the widow's husband, and the adopted boy; even if the negotiations for adoption took place in the presence of the friend of the widow, it would not relieve the attorney from his obligation.[47]

The privilege attaches only if the opinion was given professionally. Even if the services were rendered without fee, still the communications would be privileged.

Whether an opinion was given professionally or in a friendly capacity or otherwise is a matter of fact to be inferred from circumstances, such as the local habits of life and other cognate matters. In Green Law v. King[48] LORD LANGDALE MR held that the correspondence with the solicitor was as a confidential friend but not in his professional capacity and therefore not privileged. Lively, J. stated in Woodrum v.

---

40. Framji Bicaji v. Mohansingh Dhansingh, ILR (1893) 18 Bom 263; Emperor v. Bala, (1902) 4 Bom LR 460; Park Horst v. Lowthen, (1819) 2 Swanst 194—PA LORD ELDOW The moment confidence ceases, privilege ceases.
41. Ayeasha Bi v. Peer Khan Saheb, AIR 1954 Mad 741.
42. Rebecca Mohdal v. R, AIR 1947 Cal 278.
43. Hanson v. Bran, (1892) 51 Minn 546.
44. Gopi Lal v. Lakhpat Rai, ILR (1918) 41 All 125 : AIR 1918 All 38.
45. Ayeasha Bi v. Peerkhan Saheb, AIR 1954 Mad 741.
46. Greenough v. Gaskell, (1833) 1 Myl. & K 101.
47. In re : An Attorney, AIR 1925 Bom 1 (FB).
48. (1838) 1 Beav 137.

Price[49] regarding communication with an attorney friend that it was common knowledge that lawyers were consulted in the rural areas for gratuitous information without any suggestion of employment as lawyer. These opinions are called "Curbstone" or "Horseback" opinions. In such cases the burden is on the objector to show that the relationship of client and lawyer existed.

9. TIME OF CONSULTATION—REJECTION OR RETENTION

The privilege of the client attaches to a communication that his lawyer makes during negotiations in relation to the retainer for fee. On principle, the client must be protected in his preliminary statements for he does not know whether the attorney would accept the fee suggested by him. Even if the lawyer refuses to work for him for the fee suggested by the client, still privilege attaches to the communication made during such a negotiation. It does not matter that the lawyer's refusal for the retainer was due to disagreement as to the fee suggested by the client or was due to the client's own withdrawal by reason of the large fee demanded by the lawyer. In Minter v. Priest[50] the solicitor ultimately declined to work for the client but the communication by the solicitor during an interview with the person requesting him to act, was held privileged. This decision is still good law though on appeal, it was reversed on other grounds by the House of Lords. However, if the client continues his communication even after the attorney's refusal to act for him, or if a person knowingly admits to retain one who has already been retained by the opponent and consequentially not retainable by him, he does not need or deserve the protection of the privilege. The communication of a client seeking to retain an attorney who declined because of a prior retainer on the other side was held not privileged.[51] (From the paper read by Justice M. JAGANNADHARAO at the workshop organised by the A.P. State Bar Council at Visakhapatnam in May 1984).

10. OR TO STATE THE CONTENTS OR CONDITION OF ANY DOCUMENT

Under this section an advocate is not permitted to state the contents or condition of any document with which he has become acquainted in the course and for the purpose of his professional employment. The protection against production or disclosure does not extend to any original document which might have come into the possession of the advocate from his client e.g. a letter addressed to the client which was alleged to be in the brief of the counsel.[52]

A succession certificate was granted to a widow who applied through her pleader, without production of the will. Later, another person applied for letters of administration to the estate of the deceased. It was held that the refusal of the pleader to disclose the contents of the will when he was examined as a witness was proper as the pleader became acquainted with the contents of the will in the course of and for the purpose of professional employment which was privileged under Section 126.[53]

In a criminal case the protection under Section 126 cannot be availed of against an order to produce a document. After the document is produced, then under Section 162, Evidence Act, it will be for the court, after inspection of the documents to decide any objection regarding its production and admissibility.[54]

The House of Lords decided that when the motive for preparing a document was not predominantly for use in anticipated litigation it was not to be privileged. The report concerned a railway accident which was investigated by the Board and which gave rise to the cause of action.[55]

Communications passed by third persons to a solicitor were held to be privileged on the ground that the solicitor received them for the purpose of advising his clients[56]. In another case the Court of Appeal observed that it would be strange if a forger could hide behind a claim of legal professional privilege by

---

49. (1927) 104 W. Vr 382 : 140 SE 346.
50. (1921) 1 KB 655.
51. Tukker v. Pinch, (1886) 66 WIS 17 : 27 NW 817.
52. Chandubhai v. State, AIR 1962 Guj 290.
53. Bai Kanta v. Bhailal, AIR 1929 Bom 414; see also Davies v. Waters, (1842) 9 M&W 608.
54. Gangaram v. Habibullah, ILR 58 All 364; Public Prosecutor v. M S Menoki, AIR 1939 Mad 914; Chandu Bhai v State, AIR 1962 Guj 290; Emperor v. Bilal Mahamed, AIR 1940 Bom 361.
55. Waugh v. British Railways Board, 1980 AC 521.
56. Re : Getty (Sarah C.) Trust, (1985) 2 All ER 809.

the simple device of sending all the incriminating documents in his possession to his solicitors to be examined by the expert.[57]

11. "EXPRESS CONSENT"

Mere failure on the part of the accused/client to claim privilege does not amount to "express consent."[58]

12. PROVISOS—ILLEGAL PURPOSES

The protection of the section will not extend to any communications made in furtherance of illegal purpose in view of proviso 1, or to any fact showing that a crime or fraud has been committed since the commencement of the employment; in view of proviso 2.[59] If a client and his lawyer co-operate in effecting a crime the lawyer ceases to be a counsellor and becomes a criminal along with his client and there would be no privilege.[60]

This proviso differs from the English law. Under it any communiction made in furtherance of an "illegal purpose" is not privileged. Under the English law the purpose must be 'criminal and not merely 'illegal'. The privilege under Section 126 is not absolute but qualified. The Common Law of England under which an advocate can claim an absolute privilege for words uttered in the course of his professional duty is not applicable to India.[61]

The existence of an illegal purpose would prevent any privilege attaching to any communication. Illustration (b) exemplifies this.

A Government employee who was found guilty of misconduct by a tribunal, sent a notice under Section 80, CPC, through his advocate which contained highly defamatory aspersions against the members of the tribunal. The complaint was filed under Section 500, IPC, read with Section 198(b), Cr PC, both against the advocate and his client. The advocate pleaded good faith under Section 499, IPC, stating that he acted on the instructions of the client. The client pleaded that as the said notice was not signed by him, he is not liable and the lawyer alone was responsible for the contents of the notice. Thereupon a revision petition was filed to quash the proceedings. It was held that the immunity from disclousre which can be claimed by a client in respect of a communication made to his lawyer is not absolute but limited in its scope; and Section 126 prescribes those limits.....The interests of justice requires unity of identity between a lawyer and his client and so a lawyer is precluded from making a disclosure of the communication made to him by his client; but this rule of law is for very good reasons restricted in its scope by the two proviso contained in the section itself, no communication made to further any illegal purpose is protected.....It cannot be the duty of a lawyer to advise his client how to commit a breach of the law or evade the law or commit a fresh crime in order to defend him against the charge of a crime which he has already committed. Such conduct would be covered fully by the first proviso as it would be clearly in furtherance of an illegal purpose. The question in the case is whether the defamatory imputations contained in the notice were necessary or justifiable for the purpose of a civil suit. If the conclusion is that there was no justification for making those imputations the case would fall under proviso 1 of Section 126 and not under the general rule of this section. Then it would not be a privileged communicaton and there would be no bar to a lawyer making a disclosure." It was held that Section 126 does not help the applicant and the revision petition was dismissed.[62] With regard to defamatory statement in court proceedings or defamatory suggestions to witnesses, privilege cannot be claimed under this section. The privilege intended under the section is only to protect the interests of the client in respect of any action for any prior act or offence. And it is not intended to apply to cases of 57. R. v. King, (1983) 1 All ER 929, noted in All ER Annual Rev. 1983.

---

58. Mandesan v. State of Kerala, 1995 Cr LJ 61 (paras 10 and 13) (Ker).
59. Ayesha Bi v. Peer Khan Sahib, AIR 1954 Mad 741; Mahli Bhai v. State of Rajasthan, 1954 Raj 241; Sonreva v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 All 33.
60. Mathews v. Hougland, (1891) 40 HJEQ 455.
61. Satish Chandra v. Ram Doyal, AIR 1921 Cal 1 (SB); followed in Nirsu Narayan Sinha v. King Emperor, AIR 1926 Pat 499; Gendan Lal v. R, AIR 1948 All 409.
62. K.C. Sonreva v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 All 33; following Ayeasha Bi v. Peer Khan Sahib, AIR 1954 Mad 741; Deep Chand v. Sampath Raj, AIR 1970 Mys. 34.

commission of any offence in future. A defamatory imputation about a person in the instructions to an advocate is not a privileged communication.[63]

In the case of a conviction on a charge of instructing a lawyer to put defamatory questions, it was held that the conviction based on evidence of the lawyer is unsustainable, as it is a communication between a client and his lawyer which is privileged under Section 126.[64] In a defamation case a letter containing imputations concerning the complainant was dictated by the advocate (accused) to his clerk and sent to the complainant's advocate in reply to a notice issued to him, it was held that there was no publication of the imputation, but the statement is protected under Section 126.[65]

13. PLEADING AND PROOF

In regard to communications by a client to his advocate, before getting protection under this section, privilege must be claimed before the advocate is called upon to give evidence.[66]

The Privy Council held that when the document is in fact a privileged one, from its non-production no adverse inference can be drawn because if adverse inference is drawn, it would destroy the privilege.[67]

Section 126 to apply to interpreters, etc.

S. 127. The provisions of Section 126 shall apply to interpreters, and the clerks or servants of barristers, pleaders, attorneys and vakils.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE & SCOPE

The extension of the protection to interpreters is particularly important in a country like India, in which there are so many races speaking different languages, and in which the important portion of the administration of justice is conducted in a foreign language. (FIELD ON EVIDENCE, 11th Ed., Vol. 5, P. 4573).[68]

This section extends the privilege given by S. 126 to interpreters, clerks, or servants of lawyers. It extends to a communication made to a pleader's clerk the same confidential character that attaches to a communication to the pleader direct under Section 126.[69] The privilege extends to communications made to the pleader's clerk as no pleader can work without the assistance of a clerk.[70] Confidential Secretary of a lowyer is included in the privilege.[71]

Privilege not waived by volunteering evidence.

S. 128. If any party to a suit gives evidence therein at his own instance or otherwise, he shall not be deemed to have consented thereby to such disclosure as is mentioned in Section 126; and, if any party to a suit or proceeding calls any such barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil as a witness, he shall be deemed to have consented to such disclosure only if he questions such barrister, attorney or vakil on matters which, but for such question, he would not be at liberty to disclose.

---

63. Autony v. G.S. Naidu, AIR 1967 Mad 395.
64. Appayya v. Rama Subbayya, AIR 1950 Mad 537; Palaniappa Chettiar v. R, 1935 Mad WN 460; Saukhi Gope v. Uchit Rai, AIR 1948 Pat 56.
65. P R Ramakrishnan v. Subbaramal, AIR 1988 Ker. 18; Rev Fr. Bernard v. Ramachandran Pillai, 1987 Cr LJ 739 (Ker).
66. Autony v. G.S. Naidu, AIR 1967 Mad 395.
67. Dulhin v. Harnandan, AIR 1916 PC 157; Weston v. Peary Mohan Das, ILR 40 Cal 898; Wentworth v. Lloyd, (1864) HLC 591.
68. Taylor v. Foester, (1825) 2 C&P 195; Bowman v. Norton, (1831) 5 Cr P 177; Lyell v. Kennedy, (1881) 9 App Cas 91.
69. Kameshwar v. Amanutulla, ILR (1898) 26 Cal 53.
70. Kameshwar v. Amanutulla, ILR (1898) 26 Cal 53; Ramakrishnan v. Subbaramma Sastrigal, AIR 1988 Ker 18; Abbas Pedda v. R, ILR 25 Cal 736.
71. Taylor v. Taylor, (1934) 179 Cr 691.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that, if a party to the suit gives evidence, he shall not be deemed to have consented to any disclosure as mentioned in Section 126. This section also says that the privilege would not be lost even if the legal adviser is called as a witness, unless the party questions him on a particular point. The privilege belongs to the client and therefore he alone can waive it. The privilege is not lost by calling the legal adviser as a witness, unless the party having the privilege questions him relating to confidential matters.

"By calling the solicitor as a witness, unless he (client) also examines the solicitor in-chief as to the matter privileged, the client would not waive his privilege; and even in that case, it has been held in Ireland that the cross-examination must be confined to the point upon which the witness has been examined in-chief." (TAYLOR).

"A privileged person cannot be allowed, after disclosing as much as he pleases, to withhold the remainder; he may elect to withhold or disclose, but after a certain point, his election must remain final."

WIGMORE indicated the following distinctions:—

(1) The client's offer of his own testimony in the cause at large is not a waiver, for the purpose either of cross-examining him to the communications or of calling the attorney to prove them.

(2) The client's offer of the attorney's testimony in the cause at large is not a waiver so far as the attorney's knowledge has been acquired casually as an ordinary witness, but otherwise it is a waiver.

(3) The client's offer of his own testimony as to specific facts about which he has happened to communicate with attorney is not a waiver, for the same reason as in (1) supra; but his offer to the attorney's testimony as to such specific facts is waiver, for the same reason as in (2). supra;

(4) The client's offer of his own or the attorney's testimony as to specific communication to the attorney is a waiver as to all other communications to the attorney on the same matter; for the privilege of secret consultation is intended only as an incidental means of defence, and not as an independent means of attack, and to use it in the latter character is to abandon it in the former.

(5) The client's offer of his own or his attorney's testimony as to a part of any communication to the attorney is a waiver as to the whole of that communication on the analogy of the principle of completeness. (WIGMORE ON EVIDENCE, Section 2327).

Confidential communications with legal advisers.

S. 129. No one shall be compelled to disclose to the Court any confidential communication which has taken place between him and his legal professional adviser, unless he offers himself as a witness, in which case he may be compelled to disclose any such communications as may appear to the Court necessary to be known in order to explain any evidence which he has given, but no others.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that no one shall be compelled to disclose to the court any confidential communication which has taken place between him and his legal adviser. But this privilege is subject to a condition namely, if he offers himself as a witness, he may be compelled to disclose any such communications which may appear to the court necessary in order to explain any evidence he has given in the witness box. This section provides protection to any witness including the client, whereas Sections 126, 127 & 128 provide protection to the legal adviser, his clerks etc., from disclosing confidential communication between them and the client. If protection is not provided for the client as was done in this section the protection given to the advocate or legal adviser under Section 126, 127 and 128 would become illusory.

"It has long been established that, where the client himself as the party interrogated all communications between the solicitor and client, whether pending and with reference to litigation or made before litigation and with reference thereto, or made after the dispute between the parties followed by litigation, though not, in contemplation of, or with reference to, that litigation, are protected." (TAYLOR, 924).

If a party becomes a witness of his own accord he shall, if the Court requires it, be made to disclose everything necessary to the true comprehension of his testimony.[72] If the client offers himself as a witness, then alone he can be compelled to disclose the confidential communication, if the court is satisfied such disclosure is necessary in order to explain the evidence given by the witness.[73]

Where the propounder of a will obtained a brief note for the execution of the will, and subsequently that person was examined as a witness, it was held that the brief note was privileged from production and the caveators were not entitled to see it, and the judges should not have allowed their minds to be influenced in considering the evidence by the fact that the note was not produced in court for the information of the caveators.[74]

Section 129, unlike Section 126 where the word "permitted" is used, uses the word "compelled". Whereas the legal adviser is not at liberty to disclose any professional communication without his client's consent, the client may, if he so wishes, disclose the communication, but if he refuses to do so, he cannot be forced to make the disclosure. Therefore, where evidence concerning a privileged communication is given by the client without any pressure being put upon him, the evidence would be admissible.[75]

2. COMPELLED

This word compelled does not mean subpoenaed. The section uses the words 'compelled to disclose' with reference to the case when a man has offered himself as a witness, and must refer to some force put upon the witness after he is in the witness box.[76]

3. COMMUNICATION WITH THIRD PARTIES

"Whereas all that passes between a lawyer and his lay client is privileged, if it does so in the course of a professional relationship, where either the lawyer[77] or the client[78] has communicated with a third party about a matter relevant to the litigation in hand, that communication will be privileged only if it has been made in contemplation of the litigation. Thus a report made to the officials of a trade union, enclosing relevant statements and evidence, so as to obtain the consent of the trade union to the reference of a claim for wrongful dismissal to a solicitor was held not to be privileged.[79] Where litigation is not contemplated[80] or the communication owes its existence to extraneous and independnet considerations[81], no privilege attaches to the communication. Whether or not litigation is in contemplation is often a

---

72. See Munchershaw Bezonji v. New Dhurumsey S&W Company, ILR (1880) 4 Bom 576, 581.
73. Union of India v. Om Prakash Gupta, ILR (1969) 2 Punj 473.
74. Dulhin v. Harnandan, AIR 1916 PC 157 : 20 Cal WN 617 (PC).
75. See Moher Sheikh v. Queen Empress, ILR (1893) 21 Cal 392, 400.
76. Moher Sheikh v. Queen-Empress, ILR (1893) 21 Cal 392, 400.
77. Crompton (Alfred) Amusement Machines Ltd. v. Customs and Excise Commissioners (No. 2), (1973) 2 All ER 1169 (HL).
78. Pacey v. London Tramways Co., (1876) 2 Ex. D. 440n. (C.A.); Friend v. London, Chatham and Dover Ry., (1877) 2 Ex. D. 437 (C.A.); Southwark Co. v. Quick, (1878) 3 QBD 315 (CA).
79. Jones v. Great Central Ry. Co., (1910) AC 4 (HL). The decision, in principle correct, is a trap for the unwary. In most such cases, in modern conditions, the dispensation in favour of employed solicitors inaugurated by Cromptons case (ante 15-09) will protect such communications.
80. Abbas Peada v. Queen-Empress, ILR (1898) 25 Cal 736.
81. Woolley v. N. L. Rly., (1869) LR 4 CP 602; G.E. Crippen & Associates v. Vancouver Tug Boat Co., (1971) 2 Lloyd's Rep. 207, 210; Wheeler v. Le Marchant, (1881) 17 Ch. D. 675 (CA). See also Abbas Peada v. Queen-Empress, ILR (1898) 25 Cal 736.

difficult question. It is clear that it is not essential that a cause of action has arisen[82]. It has been said that a mere request for information from the third party was not privileged even when litigation was probable, because nothing in the request to the third party indicated the purpose for which the information was sought[83]; but this decision is of doubtful validity[84]; there is no obvious reason why the third party should be told that litigation is contemplated. (Indeed there is something to be said for the view that his evidence will be the more reliable if he does not know a result in most cases impossible to achieve). Often the dealings with the third party are not prompted by a single motive, and in such cases it is necessary to investigate the purpose for which the communication with the third party chiefly took place.

A document would attract legal professional privilege only if the sole or predominant purpose of its preparation is to enable it to be used by lawyers. The only question to be answered is whether the dominant purpose of the document was that it should be submitted to legal advisers.[85]

"No privilege attaches to communications between claimant and defendant, or between opposing parties. There can be no confidentiality in such communications. It follows that there can be no confidentiality, and no privilege, in notes or reports of matters at which both sides were present. Thus a transcript of proceedings in chambers, in open Court or before arbitrators will not be privileged.[86] This is so whether the transcript is prepared by a Court reporter, either present taking a shorthand note or from the tape, or a solicitor or barrister. Any tape-recording of such proceedings will also not be privileged. Nor will depositions in prior foreign proceedings between the same parties attended by representatives of both parties.[87]

It also follows from this that a solicitor's attendance note of a meeting with the solicitor for the opposing party will not be privileged. This was held in Parry v. News Group.[88] It was alleged in a libel action that a concluded agreement was reached between the parties during a telephone conversation between the plaintiff's solicitor and the defendants' legal manager. The plaintiff's solicitor prepared a file note of the telephone conversation, and disclosed it. It was argued this was a waiver of privilege and gave rise to an obligation to disclose additional privileged documents. The Court of Appeal rejected the contention that the document was ever privileged. It was not suggested that the oral exchange between the parties was itself subject to legal professional privilege and in consequence the contemporaneous note could not be subject to privilege." PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), Para 20-10, pp 510-511.

The privilege, where it attaches, remains in all cases that of the litigant, and the third party from whom the information is sought cannot claim privilege.[89] It may be observed that the principle of Calcraft v. Guest[90] whereby secondary evidence of privileged documents is admissible, has never, so far as is known, been sought to be applied to a third party by way of subpoena duces tecum).

Where a legal adviser collates and copies material not in itself privileged for the purpose of advising a client or preparing the case, it has been held that the copies are privileged[91]. In Buttes Gas & Oil Co. v. Hammer (No. 3),[92] LORD DENNING M.R. disapproved some of these authorities and would have denied privilege to copies of documents the originals of which were not privileged, on the ground that the maker of the original could be made the subject of a subpoena duces tecum.[93] It is perhaps doubtful whether it was open to the learned Master of the Rolls to discard several decisions of the Court of Appeal; but at all events his dicta can only have been intended to extend to documents in the hands of the client, as the 82. Bristol Corporation v. Cox, (1884) 26 Ch. D. 678.

---

83. Anderson v. Bank of British Columbia, (1876) 2 Ch. D. 644. See also 15-30, n. 71.
84. Cf. di Pietrantonio v. Austin Hospital-Heidelberg, (1958) V.R. 325.
85. Melick v. Norwich Union, (1980) 1 Lloyd's Rep. 523 (assessors report to insurers); Neilson v. Laugharne, (1981) 1 All ER 829 (CA) (report for a complaint, the report being made pursuant to a duty under the Police Act 1964, (S. 49). In both cases, privilege was refused following Waugh v. B.R.B. (ante).
86. Ainsworth v. Wilding, (1900) 2 Ch 315, 320.
87. Visx Inc v. Nidek Co., (1999) FSR 91.
88. (1990) 140 NLJ 1719.
89. Schneider v. Leigh, (1955) 2 QB 195 (CA).
90. (1898) 1 QB 759 (CA) see ante, 15-04.
91. Lyell v. Kennedy, (1884) 27 Ch D 1 (CA); the Palermo (1884) 9 P.D. 6 (CA); Watson v. Cammell Laird, (1959) 1 WLR 702 (CA).
92. (1980) 3 All ER 475, 489 g-h : (1981) 3 WLR 787. See ante n. 17a.
93. Ibid. at p. 484 f-h.

authority approved by him would suggest[94]. It can hardly be the case that copies taken in the course of evidence-gathering are not privileged.

The Bombay High Court held "Although a document may not be such as passed directly between the legal adviser and the client, yet, if it is of such a nature as to make it quite clear that it was obtained confidentially for the purpose of being used in litigation and with a view to being submitted to legal advisers, then, the court will not compel the production of such a document.[95]

Letters written by one of the defendant's servants to another for the purpose of obtaining information with a view to possible future litigation, are not privileged, even though they might, under the circumstances, be required for the use of the defendant's solicitor. In order that privilege may be claimed, it must be shown on the face of the affidavit that the documents were prepared or written merely for the use of the solicitor.[96] Reports made by defendant's servants to the defendant regarding the subject-matter of the suit are not privileged.[97]

Production of title-deeds of witness, not a party.

S. 130. No witness who is not a party to a suit shall be compelled to produce his title-deeds to any property, or any document in virtue of which he holds any property as pledgee or mortgagee, or any document the production of which might tend to criminate him, unless he has agreed in writing to produce them with the person seeking the production of such deeds or some person through whom he claims.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that a witness who is not a party to the suit shall not be compelled to produce his title deeds to any property, or any document under which he holds the property as a pledgee or a mortgagee, or any document the production of which might tend to incriminate him. But he may agree to produce such document in which case such agreement must be in writing.

This section is based on the principle that great inconvenience and mischief would result to witnesses if they are compelled to disclose their titles by the production of their title-deeds. The object of the privilege is that the title may not be disclosed and examined.

The section protects a witness, who is not a party to the suit in which he is called, from producing—

(1) title-deeds to any property, or

(2) any document in virtue of which he holds any property as pledgee or mortgagee, or

(3) any document the production of which might tend to criminate him, unless he has agreed in writing to produce such document.

It would be entirely optional for the witness to produce his title-deeds, and to raise any objection whatever.

STEPHEN in his Digest (Art. 118) states: "That Section 130 differs from the English Law in one respect that the section does not excuse a witness from producing a document which might expose him to a penalty or forfeiture; whereas the English Law does excuse. But, both according to the English and the Indian Law a witness is not excused from producing a document on the ground that the production might render him liable to civil action." The privilege under this section has to be claimed in an affidavit stating that the documents constitute exclusively evidence of his own case or title.[98]

Section 131 extends the protection to an agent which Section 130 provides for a principal.

---

94. Chadwick v. Bowman, (1886) 16 QBD 561 (DC).
95. Vishnu Yeshawani v. New Life Insurance Co., (1905) 7 Bom LR 709.
96. Bipro Dass Dey v. Secretary of State for India in Council, ILR (1885) 11 Cal 655.
97. Central India Spinning & Co. v. G.I.P. Railway, (1926) 29 Bom LR 414 : AIR 1927 Bom 367.
98. Balamoney v. Ramaswami, ILR 30 Mad 230; Attorney General v. Emerson, 10 QBD 191.

TAYLOR ON EVIDENCE (8th Ed., Section 458 & 428) states "Upon principles of reason and equity judges will refuse to compel either a witness or a party to a cause to produce either his title deeds, or any document the production of which may tend to criminate him, or any document which he holds as mortgagee or pledgee."

It is stated in PHIPSON 13th Edn., pages: 312 & 313, para: 15.32 & 15.33 as follows:

"A witness, if a stranger, cannot be compelled to produce his title-deeds, or documents in the nature of title-deeds.[1] This rule can only apply in criminal proceedings, being abrogated in any other legal proceedings by the Civil Evidence Act 1968, S. 16(1)(b).

In criminal proceedings, the old rule of law that a party cannot be compelled to produce documents which relate solely to his own case and do not tend to support the title or case of his adversary[2] still presumably applies to the prosecution in criminal proceeding. But this rule has been abrogated in civil proceedings by Section 16(2) of the Civil Evidence Act 1968.[3]

A witness cannot withhold production, as distinguished from delivery, of a document on the ground that he has a lien upon it as against a stranger[4]. However, he can withhold production, where the lien is against the party requiring its production[5] unless the rights of third parties would be prejudiced thereby, as in the case, e.g. of Bankruptcy[6]; Administration[7]; Winding-up[8]; or Partition actions[9]. It has been held that the witness cannot withhold production even where the third party claims through the person against whom the lien exists.[10]

Order XVI, Rule 6, C.P.C. provides that any person may be summoned to produce a document without being summoned to give evidence. Order XI, C.P.C. provides for discovery and inspection of the documents in the possession of a party to the suit.

Section 162 of the Evidence Act states that a witness summoned to produce a document shall, if it is in his possession or power, bring it to the court, not withstanding any objection which there may be to its production or to its admissibility. The validity of any such objection shall be decided on by the court. This is a mandatory provision and the person to whom the summons is issued has to produce the document and then can claim privilege either under Section 130 or 131.

In English Law however the oath of the witness is conclusive as to the nature of the document.[11]

"In England the title-deeds to land are of such extraordinary importance that as, when a witness called on to produce documents under a subpoena duces tecum swears that they are his documents of title, the court always excuses him from producing them." (BEST-8th Edn. See 138 p. 115).

2. TITLE-DEED

A lease deed is the title-deed of a lessee within the meaning of this section.[12] A will is the title-deed of a devise (TAYLOR, 459).

Where a stranger who was directed to produce a document, stated that it was his own title-deed and it was not in his possession but offered to produce it the next day, and the court proceeded against him under Section 476, Cr. P.C. (old) (Section 340 new), it was held that if the document is his own title-deed

---

1. Doe v. Date, (1842) 3 QB 690; Pickering v. Noyes, (1823) 1B & C. 262.
2. Morris v. Edwards, (1891) 15 App. Cas. 309; Milbank v. Milbank, (1900) 1 Ch. 376; Miller v. Kirwan, (1903) 2 IR 120, Chowwood v. Lyall, (1929) 2 Ch. 406; Budden v. Wilkinson, (1893) 2 QB 432; Frankerstein v. Gavin, (1897) 2 QB 62; Bursill v. Tanner, (1885) 16 QBD 1; Volant v. Soyer, (1853) 13 CB 231; Phelps v. Prew, (1854) 3 E&B 430; Hibberd v. Knight, (1848) 2 Ex. 11.
3. See n.91, above.
4. Re.: Hawkes, Ackerman v. Lockhart, (1898) 2 Ch. 1, and cases cited.
5. Re.: Hawkes, ante; Re.: Jones, 21 TLR 352.
6. Bankruptcy Act 1914, S. 25; Re.: Winslow, (1886) 16 QBD 696. A claim by a bankrupt not to answer questions as to a secret process was rejected In re : Keene (1922) 2 Ch. 475; cf. Re.: Stevenson (1918-19) B&CR 106.
7. Re.: Broughton, 23 Ch D 169; Re.: Hawkes, ante.
8. Companies Act 1948, S. 268; Re.: Capital Fire Assoc., (1884) 24 Ch D 408.
9. Boden v. Hensby, (1892) 1 Ch 101.
10. Lockett v. Cary, (1864) 10 Jur. (N.S.) 144; but see Re.: Hawkes, ante.
11. Morris v. Edwards, (1891) 15 AC 309.
12. Imrit Chamar v. Sridhar Pandey, 17 CWN 108 : 13 I.C. 120.

he would be entitled to refuse to produce it and he could not be compelled under Section 130 and 131 of the Evidence Act, and that before taking any proceeding the court should have determined the nature of the document; and without determining the nature of the document no proceedings can be taken.[13]

Normally, in the case of joint ownership of property one holding the document cannot be compelled to produce the same, or if the document is in possession of another person, he also cannot be compelled. A seller who sells part of the property is entitled to retain the title-deed under proviso to Section 55(3), T.P. Act. Where one sells his entire property to different purchasers in plots, the buyer of the plot of greatest value will be entitled to all the documents. In such cases the other buyers will take an agreement from the buyer of the highest value to produce the title-deeds whenever required.

In the case of a person pleading joint ownership as a ground for non-production of the document, it was held that he should satisfy the court as to the nature of the joint ownership.[14]

3. CONSEQUENCE OF REFUSAL

If the witness refuses to produce his title deed, as he cannot be compelled to produce it, the party who wants its production may be allowed to give secondary evidence of the contents of the document.[15]

But the person claiming privilege cannot himself be examined as to its contents.[16]

Production of documents or electronic records which another person, having possession, could refuse to produce.

[17][S. 131. No one shall be compelled to produce documents in his possession or electronic records under his control, which any other person would be entitled to refuse to produce if they were in his possession or control, unless such last-mentioned person consents to their production.]

COMMENTS

1. THE INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY ACT, 2000 PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

The Section 131 as substituted by the Act mentioned above accommodates electronic records in the expression "documents" and says that no person shall be compelled to produce documents in his possession or electronic records under his control which any other person would be entitled to refuse to produce, if they were in his possession unless he consents to their production.

2. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Persons in possession of documents on behalf of others are generally agents, attorneys, mortgagees, trustees, etc. This section extends to these persons the same protection which the preceding section provides for a witness who is not a party to a suit.

The Act is silent as to whether the agents, mortgagees or pledgees can be compelled to give the contents of the document though they are protected from producing the document itself under the section. BAROLD ALDERSON observed, "It would be perfectly illusory for the law to say that a party is justified in not producing a deed, but that he is compellable to give parol evidence of its contents: that would give him, or rather his client through him, merely an illusory protection, if he happens to know the contents of the deed, and would be only a round-about way of getting from every man an opportunity of knowing the defects may be in the deeds and titles of his estate."[18]

FIELD adds that the same rule will, no doubt be followed in India. (FIELD 11th Edn., p. 1433).

---

13. Bhagabat Prasad Singh v. Emperor, (1911) 12 Cr LJ 450 (Cal).
14. Dhirabala v. Tincouri, 31 CWN 80.
15. Imrit Chamar v. Sridhari, 17 CWN 108.
16. Davies v. Waters, (1842) 9 M&W 608.
17. Substituted by the Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92, Sch. II (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).
18. Davies v. Waters, 9 Meeson & Wels By's Rep 612 : 60 RR 843.

Where summons were issued under Section 94, Cr.P.C. to accused company's employee for production of certain documents, it was held the company can under Section 131 object to its own employees producing its documents in court, without its consent, and that no summons under Section 94, Cr.P.C. can be issued to produce documents against the company's employees.[19]

If a person refuses to produce the document under this section the court is not entitled to draw an adverse inference as to its contents.

Witness not excused from answering on ground that answer will criminate.

S. 132. A witness shall not be excused from answering any question as to any matter relevant to the matter in issue in any suit or in any civil or criminal proceeding, upon the ground that the answer to such question will criminate, or may tend directly or indirectly to criminate, such witness, or that it will expose, or tend directly or indirectly to expose, such witness to a penalty or forfeiture of any kind:

Proviso.

Provided that no such answer, which a witness shall be compelled to give, shall subject him to any arrest or prosecution, or be proved against him in any criminal proceeding, except a prosecution for giving false evidence by such answer.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope	...	1213	7. Customs Act	...	1215
2. Oath of witness necessary but not conclusive	...	1214	8. Companies Act	....	1215
3. Claim must be bona fide	...	1214	9. Any question as to any matter relevant to the matter in issue	...	1216
4. Applicability	...	1214	10. Proviso—Protection to answer	...	1216
5. Approver	...	1215	11. Exceptions to this section	...	1218
6. Art. 20(3) of the Constitution & Section 132 Evidence Act	...	1215

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Under this section a witness shall not be excused from answering any question as to any matter relevant to the matter in issue, in any criminal proceedings (among others) upon the ground that the answer to such a question will incriminate or may tend directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture of any kind. The safe-guard to this compulsion is that no such answer which the witnesses is compelled to give exposes him to any arrest or prosecution or can it be proved against him in any criminal proceeding, except a prosecution for giving false evidence by such answers.[20]

The privilege is based on the policy of encouraging persons to come forward with evidence in Courts of Justice by protecting them, as far as possible, from injury or needless annoyance, in consequence of so doing. A sensible compromise has, however been adopted in several modern statutes by compelling the disclosure, but indemnifying the witness in various respects against its results.[21]

Where there were cross-cases under Section 107, Cr.P.C. in a case, a prosecution witness (the defendant in the defamation suit) used abusive language against the accused who was a lawyer (plaintiff in the defamation suit). In the suit for defamation it was held that though using abusive language is a gross abuse of the privilege of a witness, in view of the peculiar position of the plaintiff as an accused in that case, the defendant was protected under the proviso of Section 132 and was not liable.[22]

---

19. State of Maharashtra v. Nagpur Electric Light & Power Co. Ltd., AIR 1961 Bom 242.
20. State v. Jagjit Singh, AIR 1989 SC 598.
21. PHIPSON 13th Edn. (para 15-36) p. 314.
22. Rajindra Kishore Sahi v. Durga Sahi, AIR 1967 All 476.

The Evidence Act does not apply to interrogations by a Customs Officer exercising powers under Section 171-A of the Sea Customs Act, and Section 132 cannot be attracted.[23]

In a case before the Supreme Court, the Customs Officers questioned one lady who was said to be involved in a smuggling racket. She admitted her own part along with others. But, the customs authority proceeded against others leaving that lady so that they might examine her as a prosecution witness. A contention was raised that she should also be tried along with them, so that her testimony might not be available against them. HIDAYATULLAH, J. observed "In India the privilege of refusing to answer has been removed so that temptation to tell a lie may be avoided but it was necessary to give this protection. The protection is further fortified by Art. 20(3), which says that no person accused of any offence shall be compelled to be a witness against himself. This article protects a person who is accused of an offence and not those questioned as witnesses. A person who voluntarily answers questions from the witness box waives the privilege which is against being compelled to be a witness against himself because he is then not a witness against himself but against others. Section 132 of the Indian Evidence Act sufficiently protects him since his testimony does not go against himself. In this respect the witness is in no worse position than the accused who volunteers to give evidence on his own behalf or on behalf of the co-accused. There too, the accused waives the privilege conferred on him by the Article since he is subjected to cross-examination and may be asked questions incriminating him. The Evidence of Ethyl Wong cannot, therefore, be ruled out as that of an incompetent witness"[24]

2. OATH OF WITNESS NECESSARY BUT NOT CONCLUSIVE

A witness cannot refuse to go into the witness-box on the ground that he might criminate himself; he can only claim the privilege after he is sworn and the question put.[25] And he must pledge his oath that he honestly believes the answer will or may tend to criminate him,[26] though even this does not necessarily suffice; for the court is entitled to see, from the circumstances of the case and the nature of the evidence the witness is called to give, that there is reasonable ground to apprehend danager from his being compelled to answer[27] but, once such danger is made apparent, great latitude should be allowed to the witness in judging for himself of the effect of any particular question.[28]

3. CLAIM MUST BE BONA FIDE

The court must also be satisfied that the claim is made genuinely for the protection of the witness, and not for ulterior purposes (R. v. Armagh, ante; Re Reynolds, ante, where a witness, having declined to answer whether he had, as trustee, executed a post- nuptial settlement made by a bankrupt on the ground that he might be charged with conspiracy to defeat the latter's creditors, the court disallowed the objection, considering it a mere device to stifle inquiry.). Moreover, the claim may be made at any stage of the proceedings and, when allowed, protects both future and past answers.[29]

4. APPLICABILITY

Section 132 of the Evidence act, does not apply to a statement made by a person during an investigation under Section 161, Cr.P.C. An investigation under Chapter XIV, Cr.P.C. may be a proceeding but is certainly not a suit or a civil or criminal proceeding. A person who is interrogated under Section 161 by a Police Officer making an investigation is not a witness within the meaning of Section 132, as it refers only to a person who enters the witness box and is sworn as a witness. So

---

23. Hira H. Advani v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1971 SC 44; Shankerlal v. Collector of Central Excise, AIR 1960 Mad 225; Maniklal Soni v. Union of India, 1984 Cr LJ 1359 (Guj).
24. Laxmipat Choraria v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 938.
25. Boyle v. Wise Men, (1855) 10 Ex 647.
26. Webb v. Egst. (1880) 5 Ex D 108; Lamb v. Munster, ante; Re.: Genese, 3 Morrell 223 (CA); National Association of Operative Plastrs. v. Smithies, (1906) AC 434, 438.
27. Rio Tinto Zinc Corp. v. Westinghouse Electric Corp., (1978) AC 547 (HL).
28. Ibid. and see R v. Boyes, (1861) 1 B & S 311; Reynolds, 20 Ch D 294; Lamb v. Munster, (1883) 10 QB 110 ante; Re.: Genese, (1985) 3 MBR 223 (CA). National Assn of Operative Plasters v. Smithies, (1906) AC 434, 438 [PHIPSON 13th Edn. (para 15-41) page 319].
29. R. v. Garbett, (1847) 1 Den CC 236.

defamatory statement made by a person in an answer to interrogatories during investigation under Section 161 are not protected u/s. 132.[30]

5. APPROVER

The moment the pardon is tendered to the accused he must be presumed to have been discharged whereupon he ceased to be an accused and becomes a witness, though, a formal order of discharge is not recorded.[31]

In a criminal trial for offences of violating a control order, the prosecution witness became hostile. Later that witness was made an accused under Section 319(1) of the control order and was convicted without any evidence on the basis of incriminating statements made by him. It was held that conviction was illegal and as a witness in the criminal case he is entitled for protection under the proviso to Section 132 though incriminating statements were made as a witness.[32]

The Madras High Court held that an accused, who had been jointly charged with another but whose case had been separated before the trial commenced so that he could be examined as a witness in the case of the other accused, could not be denied the benefit of the proviso to Section 132. He is as much a witness as any other, when once he is not an accused person within the meaning of Section 342, (old) Cr.P.C. (now Section 313). When an oath could be administered to such a person, naturally the incidents of Section 132 will also attach themselves to such a person as a witness.[33]

6. ARTICLE 20(3) OF CONSTITUTION & SECTION 132 EVIDENCE ACT

Article 20(3) of the Constitution provides a protection for an accused person charged with any offence stating that he shall not be compelled to be a witness against himself. But this provision under Section 132 applies to any witness in a civil or criminal proceedings.

Section 342(a), Cr.P.C. (old) corresponding to Section 313(1), Cr.P.C. of 1973 provides that even an accused can give evidence in his defence.

The Supreme Court in Tukaram v. Shukla[34] held that is cannot be said that if an accused enters the witness box to substantiate his defence, he is thereby compelled to be a witness against himself under Article 20(3) of the Constitution.

The rule laid down by Art. 20(3) of the Constitution is narrower than the Anglo- American rule since the privilege has been kept confined to persons "accused of any offence", an 'offence' being defined by Section 2(38) of the General Clauses Act. Witnesses in India have been left untouched by the Constitution and continue to be governed by Section 132 and other provisions of the Evidence Act.[35]

7. CUSTOMS ACT

Where a notice was issued to the petitioners under Section 171-A Sea Customs Act, to appear before the Customs Officers and to show cause why penalty should not be imposed under Section 167(8) of that act and the petitioner was compelled to answer certain questions, it was held that the proceedings before the Customs Officer are not judicial proceedings and the petitioners are not accused and so Art. 20(3) of the Constitution does not apply; however, if the petitioners are likely to be proceeded against in criminal court, they become accused and then only they can claim protection under Art. 20(3) of the Constitution.[36]

8. COMPANIES ACT

There were two proceedings against a Managing Director, one under Section 185 Company's Act, and the other a Criminal Proceeding in respect of the same subject-matter. When the Managing Director

---

30. Haji Ahmed Hussain v. State, AIR 1960 All 623.
31. A.J. Peiris v. State, AIR 1954 SC 616; Sheorati v. R, 18 Cal WN 1213; Banusingh v. R, (1906) 10 Cal WN 962.
32. Paulose v. State of Kerala, 1990 Cr LJ 100 (Ker); Gangadharan v. State, 1989 Cr LJ 2455 (Ker).
33. In re : Kandaswami Gounder, AIR 1957 Mad 727; see also 1970 Pat LJR 424.
34. AIR 1968 SC 1050.
35. Subedar v. State of Allahabad, AIR 1957 All 396.
36. Shankerlal v. Collector of Central Excise, Madras, AIR 1960 Mad 225; Maniklal Soni v. Union of India, 1984 Cr LJ 1359 (Guj); Hira H. Advani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 44.

asked for adjournment of the proceedings under Section 185 Companies's Act till the disposal of the criminal case, it was held that the Managing Director was not an accused in the proceedings under Section 185 of the Companies Act and as he was not being compelled to make any statement as a witness he could not claim protection beyond what was contained in proviso to Section 132 of the Evidence Act. And the ground for adjournment under Art. 20 Cl. (3) would not be applicable to the proceedings under the Companies Act.[37]

9. ANY QUESTION AS TO ANY MATTER RELEVANT TO THE MATTER IN ISSUE

The section does not in terms deal with all criminatory questions which may be addressed to a witnesses, but only with questions as to matters relevant to the matter in issue. Irrelevant questions should not be allowed, and it may be implied from the limitations in this section that a witnesses could be excused from answering questions tending to criminate as to matters which are irrlevant.[38]

10. PROVISO—PROTECTION TO ANSWER

The section makes a distinction between those cases in which a witness voluntarily answers a question and those in which he is compelled to answer, and gives him a protection in the latter of these cases only. Protection is afforded only to answers which a witness has objected to give or which he has asked to be excused from giving and which then he has been compelled by the Court to give[39]. The mere subpoeaning of a witness or ordering him to go into the witness-box does not compel him to give any particular answer or to answer any particular question. The words "shall be compelled to give "in the proviso apply to pressure put upon a witness after he is in the box, and when he asks to be excused from answering a question.[40] The Allahabad High Court has held that this is too narrow an interpretation. A common sense meaning should be given to the word 'compelled'. It is impossible to deny that in the case of ordinary laymen unacquainted with the technical terms of this section, they are compelled to answer on oath questions put either by the Court or by counsel, especially when the question is relevant to the case. An answer given by a witnesses under such circumstances is protected by this section. Whether or not a witness is 'compelled' within the meaning of this section to answer any particular question put to him while in the witness-box is in each case a question of fact.

In a case a witness for the prosecution admitted in evidence that he helped the accused in the disposal of the dead body. On that admission he was prosecuted latter for the offence of helping to suppress the evidence under Section 201, I.P.C. In that trial the accused stated in his examination under Section 342, (old) Cr.P.C. (now Section 313) that in the original case he stated that fact on the instigation by the police. It was held that the witness in order to be entitled to the protection under Section 132 should object to the question which tends to incriminate him. The question whether a statement was made voluntarily or under compulsion is a question of fact, but an obligation under law to state the truth as a witness on oath, cannot ipso facto be equated with compulsion and admission made by a witness in the witness box about the commission of an offence by him, can be used against him in evidence. The present explanation for the statement during the examination under Section 342, (old) Cr.P.C. (now Section 313) could be regarded in the context as true and sufficient for the purpose of discharging the onus of explaining away the admission, and answers given by the accused in the examination under Section 342, (old) Cr.P.C. (now Section 313).[41]

'A' the husband of 'B' married 'C'. During the trial of A for bigamy the father of the complainant 'B' requested the court that 'C' may be summoned as a witness though there was no allegation against 'C' in the complainant. An objection was raised by 'C' stating that she will be deposing against her own

---

37. People's Insurence Co. v. Sardul Singh, AIR 1962 Punj 101.
38. Queen v. Gopal Doss, (1881) 3 Mad 271, 277, 278 FB; Peddabba Reddi v. Varadda Reddi, (1928) 52 Mad 432; Queen-Empress v. Ganu Sonba, ILR (1888) 12 Bom 440; Queen v. Gopal Doss, ILR (1881) 3 Mad 271 FB; Queen-Empress v. Moss, ILR (1893) 16 All 88; Kallu v. Sital, ILR (1918) 40 All 271; Emperor v. Pramatha Nath Bose, ILR (1910) 37 Cal 878; Jaganath v. King-Emperor, (1934) 10 Luck 169 : AIR 1934 Oudh 386; Rasool Bhai v. Lall Khan, ILR (1939) Ran 479.
39. Queen-Empress v. Ganu Sonba, (1888) 12 Bom 440.
40. Moher Sheikh v. Queen Empress, ILR (1893) 21 Cal 392.
41. State of Orissa v. Aitu Durva, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 475 : ILR 1962 Cut 965; relying on State of Maharashtra v. Laxman, AIR 1962 SC 1204; Peddabba Reddi v. Varada, AIR 1929 Mad 236.

interest and it would amount to compelling her to make a statement against herself. It was held that the proviso to Section 132 provides a sufficient safeguard to 'C'.[42]

According to an earlier decision of the Madras High Court a witness is not guilty of defamation for any statements made in witness-box.[43] But subsequently it has held that a witness who answers a question put to him by counsel without seeking the protection of this section is not entitled to any protection as the statements made by him are entitled not to an absolute but only to a qualified privilege.[44]

The compulsion contemplated by this section may be express or implied. DEVADOSS, J., observed: "Whether the witness seeks the protection of the court in a set form of words or not, if the witness is made to understand directly or indirectly that he has no option in the matter but to answer all the questions put to him I conceive he would bring himself within the proviso to Section 132 I am not prepared to hold that the proviso would only apply to witnesses who ask in so many words the protection of the court under Section 132. The words of the proviso should be understood in the ordinary sense and the word 'compelled' means forcing or insisting upon a witness to answer the question. The witness may not know that he should apply for protection; but any reasonable man ought to know that any statement defamatory of another would expose him to a charge of defamation. If he hesitates to answer and the court tells him he must answer the question, I would hold that hesitation and the direction of the court to the witness to answer would bring the witness within the proviso".[45]

The Bombay High Court observed: "If a man voluntarily makes an incriminating statement, he must take the consequences for it. He can only plead protection if he has specifically declined to make the statement, and has been specifically compelled to do so by the Court."[46] The Bombay High Court has in another Full Bench case laid down that relevant statements made by a witness on oath or solemn affirmation in a judicial proceeding are not protected by this proviso where the witness has not objected to answering the questions put to him.[47] A witness who makes defamatory statements in a witness box comes within the purview of Section 499, Indian Penal Code (ibid).

The Calcutta High Court has held that a witness who makes a voluntary and irrelevant statement not elicited by a question put to him while under examination is not protected by this section. It has therefore, held that a witness making a voluntary and irrelevant statement to injure the reputation of another is guilty of defamation.[48] Where a witness makes a voluntary and irrelevant statement with some malice and when it is not elicited by putting any question, he cannot claim any protection under Section 132 and he would be liable for the offence under Section 500, I.P.C.[49]

The Rangoon High Court held that Section 132, everrides the provisions of the Penal Code and it gives complete protection if the witness is compelled to answer, but that protection must be claimed either directly or impliedly.[50]

Where in a prosecution for the offence of cheating, the petitioners were cited as witnesses, it was held that the petitioners were bound to answer all questions and they could not be prosecuted for their answers in view of proviso to Section 132.[51]

In the case of a witness making defamatory statements in the witness box, it was held that the witness who was proceeded in a suit for damages in a civil action can set up the privilege and the immunity provided under Section 132. But no such privilege is recognised by the Penal Code beyond the limits of exceptions embodied in Section 499, IPC and the principles of English law cannot be invoked by going beyond what is enacted in the said exceptions. But where the witness is compelled by the court

---

42. Usha Devi v. Jagdish Prasad, 1988 Cr LJ 1239 (All).
43. Manjayya v. Sesha Shetty, ILR (1888) 11 Mad 477.
44. Peddabba Reddi v. Varada Reddi, ILR (1928) 52 Mad 433 : AIR 1929 Mad 236.
45. Peddabba Reddy v. Varada Reddy, AIR 1929 Mad 236.
46. Emperor v. Cunna, AIR 1920 Bom 270 (FB).
47. Bai Shanta v. Umrao Amir, (1925) 28 Bom LR 1 : ILR 50 Bom 162 FB : AIR 1926 Bom 141.
48. Haider Ali v. Abru Mia, ILR (1905) 32 Cal 756.
49. Surajmal v. Ramnath, AIR (1928) Nag 58.
50. Rasool Bhai v. R, AIR 1939 Rang 371.
51. Teneja v. State of Rajasthan, (1970) Cr LJ 945 (Raj).

to make such a statement in answer to a question he can claim protection under the proviso to the section, unless the statement is false.[52]

The distinction between 8th Exception to Section 499, IPC and the Proviso to Section 132 is that the former excludes a statement from the definition of defamation altogether, whereas the latter excludes prosecution for defamation and bars proof of the accusation in a trial for a defamation. The proviso to Section 132 assumes that the accusation contained in the answer is punishable as defamation under Section 500, I.P.C. Consequently in order to consider whether proviso is applicable or not, it is irrelevant to consider whether the answer contains a defamation under Section 500, I.P.C. or not, as the proviso will apply even though the statement is not made in good faith and hence is not covered by exception 8 to Section 499, I.P.C. The proviso to Section 132 would come into play when the witness was compelled to give the answer to the questions. When witnesses in their chief examination itself voluntarily and without any protest or hesitation give certain answers containing defamatory matter they would not be entitled for protection under the proviso to Section 132. And so they can be prosecuted for defamation and the accusation made by them in their depositions can be proved against them. The compulsion contemplated by the proviso should be special compulsion by the Presiding Officer of the court, and it must arise from refusal of his prayer to be excused.[53]

WIGMORE (3rd Ed., Para. 2192) observes: "A person, by virtue of his very existence in civilised society, owes a duty to the community to disclose for the purposes of justice all that is in his control which can serve the assertainment of the truth.

A citizen owes his Government a duty to attend its courts and give his testimony whenever he is properly summoned.[54]

In para 2196, it is observed: "The claim of privilege can be made solely by the witness himself, the privilege is purely personal."

11. EXCEPTIONS TO THIS SECTION

Section 94 of the Representation of People's Act of 1951 is an exception to Section 132 and so a voter cannot be compelled to divulge to whom he voted, as the secrecy of the ballot has to be maintained.[55] Protection under the proviso to this section cannot be granted to an officer of a company with regard to answers given by him in his public examination which might tend to incriminate him and can be used in criminal as well as civil proceeding that might ensue, even though he may be compelled to give the same by reason of the provisions of S. 478(5) of the Companies Act, 1956.[56]

Accomplice.

S. 133. An accomplice shall be a competent witness against an accused person; and a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope	... 1219	7. Accomplice a competent witness	... 1230
2. Accomplice: Who is and who is not	... 1222	8. Accomplice—corroboration	... 1230
3. Accessories after the fact	... 1225	9. Murder—accomplice	... 1233
Victim of Rape	... 1225	10. Accomplice related to accused	... 1233
4. Bribery	... 1226	11. Accomplice—Approver	... 1233
5. Partisan witness	... 1228	12. Confession	... 1236
6. Trap witness	... 1228

---

52. Gayaram v. Shanti Kinwar, ILR 1971 MP 373; relying on Haji Ahmed Hussain v. State, AIR 1960 All 623; Rajinder Kishore v. Durga Sahi, AIR 1967 All 476; Brijlal Prasad v. Mohanlal Das, ILR (1940) Nag 125; Bobba Bala Tripurasdari v. Building Inspector Municipality, Vijayawada, (1983) 2 Chand. LR (Crl) 406 : 1982 Cr LJ 180 NOC (AP).
53. Chotkan v. State, AIR 1960 All 606; Gir Raj v. Sulla, AIR 1965 All 597; Hemraj Poonam Chand v. Babulal Bhagirath, AIR 1962 MP 241.
54. Blackmer v. United States, (1931) 284 US 421 : 76 L. Ed 375.
55. Raghubir Singh Gill v. Gurcharan Singh, AIR 1980 SC 1362.
56. Gill & Co. (P) Ltd. v. Madhav Mills, (1969) 72 Bom LR 679.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that an accomplice shall be a competent witness against an accused person; and a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. The first part of the section may not be necessary because Section 118 provides that all persons are competent to testify, subject to certain exceptions. Reference may be made to Section 114, Illus. (b), which states that an accomplice is unworthy of credit, unless he is corroborated in material particulars. This section states that a conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is not illegal. PEACOCK C.J. observed: "I am of opinion that a conviction upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice is legal. This is not a new law, nor founded upon a new principle. This point was decided in England, as far back as the 10th Dec., 1662 after conference with all the judges".[57]

The Bombay High Court observed: "The rule in Section 114 and that in Section 133 are part of one subject and neither section is to be ignored in the exercise of judicial discretion. The illus. (b) is, however, the rule, and when it is departed from, the court could show, or it should appear, that the circumstances justify the exceptional treatment of the case."[58]

The Madras High Court held by a majority that "It is impossible consistently with the Indian Evidence Act to hold that, as a matter of law, the presumption must be raised and rebutted by special circumstances or by corroboration."[59] SUNDERA IYYAR. J., observed: "It would be an ordinary right to require a judge to draw the presumption, but it is not necessary to draw the presumption in every case."

This section is the only absolute rule of law as regards the evidence of an accomplice. But illustration (b) to S. 114 is a rule of guidance to which also the Court should have regard, It is, however, not a hard and fast presumption incapable of rebuttal, a presumption juris et de jure.[60] The combined effect of this section and Section 114, illustration (b), is that though the conviction of an accused on the testimony of an accomplice cannot be said to be illegal, yet the Courts will, as a matter of practice, not accept the evidence of such a witness without corroboration in material particulars.[61]

The Privy Council observed: "Reading these two enactments together, the Courts in India have held that whilst it is not illegal to act upon the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice it is a rule of prudence so universally followed as to amount almost to a rule of law that it is unsafe to act upon the evidence of an accomplice unless it is corroborated in material respects so as to implicate the accused; and further that the evidence of one accomplice cannot be used to corroborate the evidence of another accomplice. The law in India, therefore, is substantially the same on the subject as the law in England, though the rule of prudence may be said to be based upon the interpretation placed by Courts on the words "corroborated in material particulars" in Illus. (b) to Section 114."[62]

The Supreme Court, dealing with Section 133 and Section 114, illus. (b) observed "There is no antithesis between S-133 and illus (b) to S-114 of the Evidence Act, because the illustration only says that the court 'may' presume a certain state of affairs. It does not seek to raise a conclusive and irrebuttable presumption". It is hazardous, as a matter of prudence, to proceed upon the evidence of a self-confessed criminal, who, so far as an approver is concerned, has to testify in terms of the pardon tendered to him. The risk involved in convicting an accused on the testimony of an accomplice, unless it is corroborated in material particulars, is so real and patent that what during the early development of law was felt to be a matter of prudence has been elevated by judicial experience in to a requirement of law. It is necessary to understand that what was hardened into a rule of law is not that this conviction is illegal, if it proceeds upon the uncorroboration testimony of an accomplice but that the rule of corroboration

---

57. Queen v. Elahee Buksh, 5 WR (Cri) 80 (FB).
58. Queen Empress v. Chagan Dayaram, ILR (1890) 14 Bom 331.
59. Muthukumaraswamy Pillai v. R., ILR 35 Mad 397 (SB of five judges).
60. Emperor v. Shrinivas Krishna, (1905) 7 Bom LR 969.
61. Bhiva Doulu Patil v. State of Maharashtra, (1962) 65 Bom LR 347 : AIR 1963 SC 599.
62. Bhuboni Sahu v. The King, AIR 1949 PC 257, 258.

must be present to the mind of the judge and that corroboration may be dispensed with only if peculiar circumstances of a case make it safe to dispense with it.[63]

The classic judgement which was followed in several cases inclduing the Supreme Court was rendered by Lord READING in R. v. Baskerville[64] "There is no doubt that the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice is admissible in law. But it has been long a rule of practice at common law for the judge to warn the jury of the danger of convicting a prisoner on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, and in the discretion of the judge, to advise them not to convict upon such evidence, but the judge should point out to the jury that it is within their legal province to convict upon such confirmed evidence.....This rule of practice has become virtually equivalent to a rule of law, etc.....We hold that evidence in corroboration must be independent testimony which affects the accused by connecting or tending to connect the accused with the crime. In other words, it must be evidence which implicates him, that is which confirms in some material particular not only the evidence that the crime has been committed but also that prisoner committed it. The test applicable to determine the nature and extent of the corroboration is thus the same whether the case falls within the rule of practice at common law or within that class of offence for which corroboration is required by statute. The nature of the corroboration will necessarily vary according to the particular circumstances of the offence charged. It would be in high degree dangerous to attempt to formulate the kind of evidence which would be regarded as corroboration, except to say that corroborative evidence which shows or tends to show that the story of the accomplice that the accused committed the crime it true, not merely that the crime has been committed by the accused.....The corroboration need not be direct evidence that the accused committed the crime; it is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial evidence of his connection "with the crime".

The above view was followed by several courts in England and also in India.[65]

The Supreme Court observed: "The combined effect of Sections 133 and 114 Ill. (b) may be stated as follows: According to the former which is a rule of law, an accomplice is competent to give evidence and according to the latter which is a rule of practice it is almost always unsafe to convict upon his testimony alone. Therefore, though, the conviction of an accused on the testimony of an accomplice cannot be said to be illegal yet, the courts will, as a matter of practice, not accept the evidence of such a witness without corroboration in material particulars".[66]

A judge is not required to adopt the English rule as laid down in.[67]

---

63. Abdul Sattar v. Union Territory of Chandigarh, AIR 1986 SC 1438; C. Chellappan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1979 SC 1761; Dagdu v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1977 SC 1579; Union Territory of Arunachal Pradesh v. Lag Tagum, 1982 Cr LJ 1519 (Gau)(DB); Chinna Gowda etc. v. State of Mysore, 1965 (2) SC J 500; Bhiua Doulu Patil v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1963 SC 599; Bhuboni Sahu v. King, AIR 1949 PC 257; Rex v. Baskerville, 1916 (2) KB 658; Khushal Rao v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 22; Kilimanni Abu v. State of Kerala, 1965 (2) Cr LJ 557 (Ker); Nand Lal More v. State, 1965 (1) Cr LJ 393 (Punj); Kunj Behari v. State, AIR 1951 Pat 84; Abraham John v. State of Kerala, 1969 Cr LJ 1577 (Ker); Suraj Mal v. Sundar Mal Patwa, ILR (1965) Madh Pra. 800.

64. (1916) 2 KB 658 : 86 L.J.K.B. 28.

65. See Davies v. D.P.P., (1954) 1 All ER 507; In re : Venkata Subba Reddy, 54 Mad 931 : AIR 1931 Mad 689; Noor Mohammed v. R, 38 Cal WN 108; Khadim v. R, AIR 1937 Sind 162; Safdar Ali Shah v. R, AIR 1941 Lah 82; Ramdayal Kahar v. R., AIR 1942 Pat 271; Bishnu Pada v. R., AIR 1945 Cal 441; In re : Chinnasami, AIR 1960 Mad 462; In re : Padma Raja Chetty, (1949) 2 MLJ 428; Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State, AIR 1952 SC 54; Vemireddy v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1956 SC 379; Jnanendra Nath v. State of W.B., AIR 1959 SC 1199; In re : Bassi Redy, 1972 Cr LJ 1141 (Mys); Haroom Haji Abdulla v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 832; L.S. Raju v. State of Mys., AIR 1953 Bom 297 DB; Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159; Ramchand v. State, AIR 1952 HP 57; Gorakh Nath v. Emperor, AIR 1935 All 86; Gurnam Singh v. State of Raj., 1979 Cr LJ (Noc) 215; Emperor v. Mohiuddin Sahib, 25 Mad 143; Emperor v. Rama Saran, ILR 8 All 306; Crown v. Karam Singh, Sadhu Singh, AIR 1951 Pepsu 73 DB; Lalchand Khatri v. State, AIR 1961 Pat 260; Kalyan Singh v. State of Raj : Lachmandas v. State, ILR (1971) 2 Delhi 426; State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500; Bhan Singh Jubar Singh v. State, 1957 Cr LJ 67 (MB); Bhaskaran Nair v. State of Kerala, ILR 1970 2 Ker 283; Gurunath K. Reddy v. V. Seshaiah, AIR 1966 AP 331.

66. Bhiva Doulu Patil v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 599, following R v. Baskerville, (1916) 2 KB 658 : 86 L.J.K.B. 28 and Bhuboni Sahu v. King, 1949 PC 257. See also Empress v. Govindam, ILR 9 All 528; R v. Ram Saran, ILR (1885) 8 All 396; Rattan Dhanuk v. Emperor, ILR 8 Pat 235; Nanhak Ahir v. Emperor, ILR 13 Pat 529; Surajpal Singh v. Crown, ILR (1938) Nag 516; King v. Nga Myo, ILR (1938) Ram 190 (FB) : AIR 1938 Rang 177 FB.

67. R v. Baskerville, (1916) 2 KB 658 : 86 L.J.K.B. 28; Bereng Griffith Lerotholi v. King, AIR 1950 PC 10.

The Privy Council has laid down in Mahadeo v. King[68] which is a decision on appeal from Fiji Islands, where the English law of evidence is in force, that the evidence of an accessory must be corroborated in some material particular not only bearing upon the facts of the crime but upon the accused's implication in it. Evidence of one accomplice is not available as corroboration of another. It further holds that this rule of corroboration, which was long a rule of practice, is now virtually rule of law. In keeping with this principle the House of Lords have again emphasised that a clear warning must be given to the jury that "it is dangerous to convict" and not merely telling them to proceed with caution. The facts of R v. Bagshaw[69] were virtually repeated in R. v. Spencer[70]. The accused were charged with various offences of maltreating patients in the same mental hospital which figured in R. v. Bagshaw. The prosecution evidence was wholly based upon the evidence of patients themselves. In such cases the Court may feel unsafe to convict because of the character of such witnesses.[71] The majority of the decisions of the Bombay[72], the Calcutta[73] and the Lahore High Courts[74] and the late Chief Court of Oudh.[75] and Full Bench decision of the Madras High Court[76] have taken the same view. The Allahabad[77] , the Patna[78], the Rangoon[79] and the Nagpur[80] High Courts have taken a different view.

The Calcutta High Court has held that it is now the universal practice of the Courts not to convict where an accomplice's evidence is uncorroborated. Where the trial is by jury, a conviction after clear warning cannot be set aside.[81]

In special circumstances the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice can be relied upon for basing a conviction.[82]

There is no violation of Arts. 14 and 20 of the Constitution of India when there is power to tender an accomplice as a witness instead of trying him as an accused.[83]

An enquiry officer, conducting enquiry against a public servant is not bound by the strict rules of law or evidence. Hence, illus (b), S. 114 of the Evidence Act cannot be literally applied and it is open to his officer to hold a public servant guilty even on the basis of the evidence of an accomplice.[84]

Even in civil case, while assessing evidence the court has to require corroboration of evidence of an accomplice for no other reason but that the witness has a serious stain upon his evidence as a participant in a nefarious act.[85]

---

68. (1936) 38 Bom LR 1101, PC followed in Surajpal Singh v. Crown, ILR (1938) Nag 516.
69. (1984) 1 All ER 971.
70. (1985) 1 All ER 673.
71. For comments see All ER Annual Review 1985.
72. Queen-Empress v. Maganlal, ILR (1889) 14 Bom 115, 119; Queen-Empress v. Chagan Dayaram, ILR (1890) 14 Bom 331.
73. Emperor v. Lalit Mohan Chuckerbutty, (1911) 38 Cal 559; S.B. Ambica Charan Roy v. Emperor, (1931) 35 CWN 1270 (SB); Bimalkrishna Biswas v. Emperor, ILR (1935) 62 Cal 819, Contra, Nirmal Jiban Ghosh v. Emperor, ILR (1934) 62 Cal 238 (SB) followed in Purnanand Das Gupta v. Emperor, ILR (1939) 1 Cal.
74. Sher Singh v. Crown, ILR (1932) 14 Lah 111; Katar Singh v. Crown, ILR (1935) 17 Lah 518; Nikka v. Crown, (1936) 17 Lah 541.
75. Baboo Singh v. King-Emperor, (1935) 11 Luck 662; Beni Madho v. King-Emperor, (1933) 9 Luck 22; Gaya Prasad v. King Emperor, ILR (1931) 6 Luck 658; Lale v. King Emperor, ILR (1929) 5 Luck 101, Contra Jagannath alial Khairati v. King Emperor, 1941 17 Luck 516.
76. Rajgopal B.K. In re., ILR (1944) Mad 380 F.B. : AIR 1944 Mad 117. The following cases are not referred to in the Full Bench case and they laid down that an accomplice need not be corroborated in material particulars before it can be acted upon and that it is open to the Court to convict upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice if the Court is satisfied that the evidence is true; King Emperor v. Nilakanta, ILR (1912) 35 Mad 247 (SB); Muthukumaraswami Pillai v. King-Emperor, ILR (1912) 35 Mad 397 FB.
77. Queen-Empress v. Gobardhan, ILR (1887) 9 All 528; Queen Empress v. Ram Saran, ILR (1885) 8 All 306.
78. Rattan Dhanuk v. King-Emperor, ILR (1928) 8 Pat 235; Nanhak Ahir v. King-Emperor, ILR (1934) 13 Pat 529.
79. King v. Nga Myo, ILR (1938) Ran 190 210, FB.
80. Surajpalsingh v. Crown, ILR (1938) Nag 516 and Mohanlal v. King-Emperor, ILR 1946 Nag 982.
81. Ganeshdas Mimani v. King, ILR (1950) 1 Cal 462.
82. State v. Sardara, 1974 Cr LJ 43 (Raj); State v. Anil Ranjan Dutta, AIR 1952 Cal 534; Rangaswami v. State of Kerala, ILR 1958 Ker 420; Data Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1977 Cr LJ 1428 (Raj).
83. Laxmipat Choraria v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 938.
84. Anil Behari Saran v. State of Bihar, AIR 1967 Pat 43; Made Gowada v. State of Mysore, AIR 1966 Mys 220.
85. Surajmal v. Sundarlal Patwa, ILR 1965 Madh Pra 800.

"Accomplices are usually interested and always infamous witness and whose testimony is admitted from necessity, it being often impossible without having recourses to such evidence, to bring up the principal offenders to justice". (TAYLOR ON EVIDENCE).

2. ACCOMPLICE: WHO IS AND WHO IS NOT

An accomplice is a person who participates in the commission of the actual crime charged against an accused. He is to be a participes criminis. There are two cases, however, in which, a person has been held to be an accomplice even if he is not a participes criminis:

(1) Receivers of stolen property are taken to be accomplices of the thieves from whom they receive goods, on a trial for theft.

(2) Accomplices in previous similar offences committed by the accused on trial are deemed to be accomplices in the offences for which the accused is on trial, when evidence of the accused having committed crimes of identical type on other occasions be admissible to prove the system and intent of the accused in committing the offence charged.[86] Under S. 337, (old) Cr. PC (now Section 306) "an accomplice" is any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned or privy to the offence.[87]

The word 'accomplice' is inter-changeable with an associate in crime who is so connected with the criminal act done by his confederate, that he on account of the presence of necessary mens era and his participation in the crime in some city or the other can be tried along with that confederate actually perpetrating the crime.[88] A person who is present at the commission of the crime and who is interested in not disclosing the commission of the crime is a person who is in the position of an accomplice.[89] When a witness goes on watching the alleged offence from beginning to end without raising any hue and cry, the witness is none else than an accomplice.[90] Witnesses to whom assurances are given are themselves guilty of offences and they are accomplices.[91] Leaders of a community accepting money for voting from a candidate at an election are accomplices.[92] The person who offers a bribe to a police officer was treated as an accomplice.[93]

The following have been held to be accomplice:

An ekka driver who took passengers with criminal intention and aided them to escape from the place of offence.[94]

Who aids, knowingly of the offence, in the disposal of the property.[95]

Police agents in gambling cases.[96]

Persons without any judicially recognised amnesty requires corroboration.[97] reversed on another point in 1971 SC 520.

Pimps and prostitutes are accomplices and require corroboration.[98]

---

86. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Admin., AIR 1962 SC 1821 : 1962 2 Cr LJ 805 (SC); Davies v. Director of Public Prosecution, (1954) AC 378; Mohd. Hussain Umar v. K.S. Dalip Singhji, AIR 1970 SC 45; State of Assam v. Upendra Nath, Raj Khowa, 1975 Cr LJ 354 (Assam); Ramaswami Gounden v. Emperor, ILR (1903) 27 Mad 271; Jagannath v. Emperor, ILR (1941) 17 Luck 516 : AIR 1942 Gudn 221; Kishan Chand Mangal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1982 SC 1511.
87. State v. Murli, AIR 1957 All 53 DB.
88. State v. Bashambher Dayal, AIR 1953 Pepsu 83 (DB); K.S. Nirmal Kumar Singhji v. State, AIR 1954 Sau 55 (DB).
89. Behari Mandal v. State, AIR 1957 Ori 260 (DB); Narayan v. State, AIR 1953 Hyd. 161 (DB).
90. Harnath v. the State, AIR 1952 Ajmer 49; Ranjit Singh v. State, AIR 1952 HP 81.
91. Sirajuddin v. Govt. of Madras, represented by the Chief Secy. Madras, AIR 1968 Mad 117.
92. Trilochan Singh v. Karnail Singh, AIR 1968 Punj 416 AB.
93. R v. Maganlal, ILR 14 Bom 115, 14 Bom 331 Supra.
94. State v. Ram Avtar, AIR 1955 All 138.
95. Mavythalayan v. Emperor, AIR 1934 Mad 721.
96. State v. Jethanand, (1968) 9 Guj LR 832.
97. P. Sirajuddin v. Govt. of Madras, 1968 Cr LJ 493 : AIR 1968 Mad 117 reversed on another point in AIR 1971 SC 520.
98. Bhulu Mia v. State, AIR 1969 Cal 416 : 1969 Cr LJ 1553.

In view of Section 165 A of IPC (now repealed) a complainant who gives the bribe is in no better position than an accomplice in a case of bribery.[1]

A person cannot be said to be an accomplice unless he had consciously participated in the commission of the crime so that he could along with other accused be jointly indicted for the criminal act. Where a person is not concerned with the commission of the crime for which the accused is charged and happens to be merely one cognizant of a crime or one who has made no attempt to prevent it or disclose its commission, he canot be said to an accomplice in this crime. All accessories before the fact, if they participate in the preparation for the crime are accomplies, but if their participation is limited to the knowledge that the crime is to be committed they are not accomplies. Whether a person is or is not an accomplice depends upon the facts of each particular case. Persons to be accomplices must participate in the commission of the same crime as the accused persons.[2] A rustic village labour who acted according to his master's advice under threat of death is not disclosing for sometime the offence committed, by his mater but thereafter he disclosed the same to the informant, the police and before the Magistrate, cannot be called an active participant in crime i.e. an accomplice.[3] If a man sees the perpetration of a crime that does not give information to any one, he might be regarded as an accomplice.[4] A witness, who assisted the criminals to the extent of keeping a look out to see whether the police were approaching, is in the position of an accomplice.[5] A Police Officer by posing himself to be son of a rich planter represented that he would exchange his genuine currency notes for counterfeit notes, which he wanted to distribute amongst his labourers towards their wages. As this was an illegitimate trap, the Police Officer and his associates were held to be accomplices and their evidence could not be accepted without effective corroboration.[6]

The evidence of an accomplice must be confirmed not only as to the circumstances of the crime but also as to the identity of the prisoners. The corroboration need not be by direct evidence that the accused committed the crime. It is sufficient if there is circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime. The judge should warn the jury of the danger of convicting a prisoner on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice and in his discretion advise them not to convict upon such evidence, but he should at the same time point out to them that it is within their legal province to disregard the caution and to convict upon such unconfirmed evidence if believed by them.[7] It is the invariable practice of the Courts to require the corroboration by an independent witness of so much of the evidence of an accomplice as goes to identify the accused person as the offender[8]. Such corroboration ought to be that which is derived from unimpeachable or independent evidence.[9]

It may be noted that the above principle may prove to be an extra step and a dangerous one, as in some cases people out of fear of being victimised may not dare to give out information to anyone. The safe rule seems to be that if such person has necessary mens rea (guilty mind) then he can be said an accomplice.[10] A witness, who is not a guilty associate in crime or who does not sustain such a relation to the criminal act, is not an accomplice as the element of mens rea is entirely absent. A witness who only happens to be conversant with a crime or who makes no attempt to prevent it or who does not disclose it,

---

1. Panalal Damodar Rattni v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1979 SC 1191.
2. Ranchhod v. State, AIR 1956 Madh Bha 262 (DB); Anna v. State of Hyd., AIR 1956 Hyd. 99 (DB); Abdul Munim Khan v. State of Hyd., AIR 1953 Hyd. 145; Ghulam Nabi v. State, AIR 1953 J&K 3; Vemireddy Satyanarayan Reddy v. State of Hyd., AIR 956 SC 379; Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Raj, AIR 1952 SC 54; State v. Mansingh Majhi, ILR 1973 Cut 967; State v. Abdul Aziz, ILR (1971) 21 Raj 209; Md. Sardar v. State of H.P., 1988 Cr LJ Noc 80 AP.
3. Subash Chandra Panda v. State of Orissa, 2001 Cr LJ 4108 (para 13) (Ori).
4. Vemireddy Satyanarayan Reddy v. State, AIR 1956 SC 379; Umed Sheikh v. Emperor, 45 Cal LJ 581; Queen v. Chando chandalinee, (1875) 24 WR (Cr) 55; Ishan Chandra v. Queen Empress, ILR 21 Cal 328; Loki Prasad v. State, AIR 1957 Ori 258; V. Jagannadham v. State, AIR 1952 Ori 164; Contra: Ramaswami Gounden v. Emperor, ILR 27 Mad 271; In re : Addanki Venkadu, AIR 1939 Mad 266; Nural Amin v. Emperor, AIR 1939 Cal 335 (can no longer be law).
5. Dhanapati De v. Emperor, ILR (1944) 2 Cal 312.
6. Karim Kunju v. State, 1972 Cr LJ 292 (Ker); Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of Vidh Pra., AIR 1954 SC 322; Ramyanam Singh v. Bihar State, AIR 1956 SC 643; Hiralal v. State of Haryana, AIR 1971 SC 356; Bhanu Prasad Hari Prasad Dave v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1968 SC 1323.
7. Ramarao v. State, ILR (1951) Nag 349.
8. Emperor v. Kostalkhan, (1902) 4 Bom LR 431; Queen-Empress v. Krishnabhat, ILR (1887) 10 Bom 319.
9. Emperor v. Bajikrishna, (1904) 6 Bom LR 481.
10. In re : Ambujam Ammal, AIR 1954 Mad 326.

is not an accomplice and the rule of practice as to corroboration does not apply to his evidence.[11] There is no warrant for the proposition that if a man sees the perpetration of a crime and does not give information of it to anyone else, he might well be regarded as an accomplice.[12] A man who quietly looks on at a murder, may not necessarily be an accomplice; but he is not a safe witness against the alleged murder.[13] The fact that a person is engaged to witness a crime does not make him an accomplice unless he is proved to have participated in the commission of the crime.[14] A pretended confederate such as a detective, spy or decoy is not an accomplice. "If such a person has made himself an agent for the prosecution before associating with the wrongdoers or before the actual perpetration of the offence he is not an accomplice; but he may be an accomplice if he extends no aid to the prosecution until after the offence has been committed.[15] A person's knowledge of the deliberations in the course of which a dacoity was planned, his having seen the accused departing for a particular purpose or his having accompanied the accused when the latter went for disposal of the stolen articles cannot make him an accomplice.[16] Persons giving illegal gratification under coercion and fear of being harassed are not accomplices.[17] Witness printing offending leaflet would not make him an accomplice.[18] An innocent purchaser for value of gold without notice that the gold was tainted with the vice of smuggling is in no sense liable to be regarded as an accomplice.[19] Accused engaged a coolie to carry bundle containing stolen property but the coolie has no knowledge that bundle contained stolen articles. The coolie is not in a position of an accomplice.[20] A witness who merely lends himself to a scheme for the purpose of catching the guilty is not an accomplice.[21] The clerk in the office of the Municipal Corporation was a subordinate of the accused. He was actually working directly under accused No. 2 and at the instances of the accused he procured his municipal labour and material and carried out his repairs to the house of accused No. 1. The clerk was not a party to the offence under Section 409, IPC and not an accomplice.[22] A witness who is a relative of this deceased shares his hostility to the victim cannot be classed as an accomplice.[23] A police officer who has no intention to and does not accept an amount offered to him as bribe in order to enrich himself, but who merely lays a trap in order to bring to book his person offering it and to bring him to punishment for attempting to corrupt a public servant is not an accomplice.[24] A prosecutrix in a rape case is not an accomplice.[25] Generally stated, an abducted woman is not an accomplice.[26] A Food Inspector is not an accomplice.[27] A Minister informing the Anti-Corruption Bureau and filing a complaint against the person offering him bribe to gain certain favour, cannot be equated with an accomplice and the accused could be convicted on his uncorroborated testimony.[28] Likewise the person paying bribe so as to expose the conduct of a public servant and as directed by the police, is not an accomplice.[29]

---

11. Ghudo v. King Emperor, ILR (1945) Nag 315.
12. Vemi Reddy Satyanaranayan Reddy v. State of Hyderabad, ILR (1956) Hyd. 386.
13. Kandhai Manfer v. State of V.P., AIR 1953 Vind. Pra 38.
14. State of Ori v. Minaketan Patnaik, AIR 1953 Ori 160 (SB); Kunhaman v. State of Kerala, 1974 Ker LJ 328; Hayatu v. Emperor, AIR 1929 Lab 540.
15. Basheeruddin Ahamed v. State of Mysore, ILR (1951) Mys 464.
16. K.S. Nirmal Kumar Sinhji v. State, AIR 1954 Sau 55 DB.
17. Dalpat Singh v. State of Raj, AIR 1969 SC 262; G. Moogappa v. State, AIR 1961 Mys 44; Nyalchand v. State, AIR 1955 Sau 117; Kamini Kumar v. State, AIR 1971 Tri 26; Srinibas Mall v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 135; K.S. Nirmal Kumar Sinhji v. State, AIR 1954 Sau 55; P.K. Subbiah v. State, AIR 1952 Tri 1; Pyarey Mohan v. State, AIR 1956 All 358.
18. Virendra Singh v. Vimal Kumar, AIR 1976 SC 2169; In re : Veeral alias Kanal, AIR 1970 Mad 298; Hadu v. State, AIR 1951 Ori 53.
19. Vali Mahomed (M/s). v. C.T.A. Pillai, AIR 1961 Bom 48.
20. King Emperor v. Sheo Shanker Singh, AIR 1954 Pat 109 (DB); Lachhi Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 792.
21. State Govt. of MP v. Hiralal Tejulal, AIR 1952 Nag 58.
22. Chandrakant Vishwanath Jakkal v. State of Maharastra, 1978 Cr LJ 431 (Bom); State of Assam v. Upendra Nath Raj Khowar, 1975 Cr LJ 354 (Gau) DB.
23. Chellammal v. Packiam, 1976 Cr LJ 1666 (Mad).
24. Mahadeo Daunappa Gunaki v. State, 1952 Bom 435 (DB).
25. Sidheswar Ganghuly v. State of W.B., AIR 1958 SC 143, 147; A.W. Khan v. State, AIR 1962 Cal 641; Suresh Chand v. State of Haryana, 1976 Cr LJ 452. (See also commentary infra under the head Sexual offences).
26. State Govt. of Manipur v. K.G. Sarma, 1968 Cr LJ 1390 (Manipur); State of HP v. Kala, AIR 1957 HP 42.
27. Babulal Hargovindas v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1971 SC 1277.
28. C.R. Mehta v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 2863 (paras 13 and 30) (Bom).
29. Rajasingh v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 955 (para 10) (Mad) explaining and distinguishing State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 : 1958 Cr LJ 976.

The burden of proof rests on the person who alleges that particular witness is an accomplice.[30]

An accomplice has to be distinguished from a co-accused. The statement of a co-accused may be admissible in certain circumstances, though not examined, but not that of an accomplice who is available to be examined.[31] A distinction has to be drawn between an accomplice and a decoy witness, the former being a person who joins another with the intention of aiding the commission of an offence and the latter who is instrumental in provoking the commission of the offence with the object of discovering the offence and detecting the offender.[32]

3. ACCESSORIES AFTER THE FACT

Three conditions must unite to render one an accessory after the fact, viz 1. the felony must be complete, 2. the accessory must have knowledge that his principal committed the felony and, 3. his accessory must harbour or assist the principal felon.[33]

An accessory after the fact may be an accomplice. Such accessory is not concerned with the main offence. Still he may be treated as an accomplice.[34] Whether or not accessories after the fact can be described as accomplices, their evidence is tainted evidence on the same footing as the evidence of an accomplice and requiring the same measure of corroboration.[35] Wife having illicit connection with accused and luring with him without raising alarm is accessory after the fact and is to that extent an accomplice.[36]

The Supreme Court has held that the rule laid down in R. v. Baskerville[37] with regard to the admissibility of the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice is the law in India also, so far as accomplices are concerned and it is not any higher in the case of sexsual offences. The only clarification of the rule that is necessary for the purposes of India is where this class of offence is tried by a judge without the aid of jury. In such cases it is necessary, that the judge should give some indication in his judgement that he has had the rule of caution in his mind and should proceed to give reasons for considering it unnecessary to require corroboration on the facts of the particular case before him and show why he considers it safe to convict without corroboration in that particular case. There is, however no rule of law or practice that there must in every case be corroboration before a conviction can be allowed to stand.[38] The Supreme Court has also held that a conviction can be based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice provided the judge has the rule of caution in mind.[39]

Victim of rape.—In the case of rape, the evidence of prosecutrix that she had been forcibly subjected to sexual intercourse by accused along with co-accused when her conduct and circumstances indicates that she was consenting party, has to be disbelieved by court unless there is adequate corroboration.[40] A prosecutrix cannot be considered as an accomplice and her testimony cannot be equated with that of an accomplice in an offence. As a rule of prudence, however, court normally looks for some corroboration of her testimony, so as to satisfy its conscience that she is telling the truth and the

---

30. Kamini Kumar v. State, AIR 1971 Tri 26.
31. Hadu v. State of Orissa, 1951 Ori 53 (DB); Des Raj Sharma v. State, AIR 1951 Simla 14.
32. State v. Bashamber Dayal, Naib Tehsildar, AIR 1953 Pepsu 82 DB; Ambalal Motibhai Patel v. State, AIR 1961 Guj 1 DB; In re : Ambujam Ammal, AIR 1954 Mad 326; T.A. Basheerruddin Ahmed v. Govt. of Mysore, AIR 1952 Mys 42 (DB); K.H. Bhattacharjee v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Cal 374; Kesho Pershad v. State, AIR 1967 Del 57; T. Narayan Rao v. Republic of India, 1977 Cr LJ 1586 (Ori); Miyabhai v. State, AIR 1963 Guj 188; Harak Chand v. State, AIR 1954 Madh B 145.
33. State of Bihar v. Srilal Kejriwal, AIR 1960 Pat 459; Mahadeo v. King, AIR 1936 PC 242.
34. In re : Ambujam Ammal, AIR 1954 Mad 326; Surya Kanta v. R, AIR 1920 Cal 980 : Cal WN 119; R v. Burn, (1909) 11 Bom LR 1153.
35. Pudur Rangaswami v. State of Kerala, ILR 1958 Ker 420; Pt. Darshan Lal v. Munnosingh, AIR 1937 Oudh 258; Ismail v. Emperor, AIR 1947 Lah 220; In re : S.A. Sattar Khan, AIR 1939 Mad 283.
36. Bhairon Lal v. State, AIR 1953 Raj 131 (DB).
37. (1916) 2 KB 658 : 86 L.J.K.B. 28.
38. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, (1952) SCR 377; State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500.
39. Kashmira Singh v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1952 SC 159 : 1952 SCR 526; Bhairon Lal v. State, ILR (1952) Raj 669; State v. Autar Singh, AIR 1960 Punj 364.
40. Shri Rakshit Khosla v. State, ILR 1969 Delhi 653; Jarnail Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1972 Cr LJ 824 (Raj); Bijoy Kumar Mohapatra v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 2162 (Ori)(DB); Ahamad Pillai v. State, AIR 1951 TC 167.

person accused of rape on her has not been falsely implicated.[41] Corroboration is not the sine qua non for conviction in a rape case. The Indian courts refusing to act on the testimony of a victim of sexual assault in the absence of corroboration as a rule, is adding insult to injury. There is no reason why the evidence of the girl or the woman who complains of rape or sexual molestation should be viewed with the aid of spectacles fitted with lenses tinged with doubt or disbelief or suspicion. To do so is to justify the charge of male chauvinism in a male dominated society.[42] In case of rape independent confirmation of every material circumstances is not required and the corroboration of the evidence of the prosecutrix need not be direct evidence that the accused committed the crime but it is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial evidence of the connection with the crime.[43] Corroboration of evidence of a prosecutrix in trial under Section 366, Penal Code is not necessary.[44] What she said at or about time of occurrence being part of res gestae can be corroborative evidence of her evidence and conviction can be based on testimony of the prosecutrix.[45]

In the case of rape on a girl of 7 years whose evidence was changing from time to time her evidence must be corroborated.[46] In the case of rape the evidence of the girl should carry more weight than the evidence of an ordinary witness.[47]

4. BRIBERY

The rule requiring corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice applies with very little force where the accused is charged with the offence of extorting a bribe and the accomplice is not a willing participant in the offence but a victim of that offence[48]. Persons coming technically within the category of accomplices cannot be treated precisely on the same footing.[49] The uncorroborated evidence of a witness who would be characterised as an accomplice being a bribe-giver is unworthy of credit.[50] Where a person had given bribe to the accused on previous occasions, it is proper to require the same degree of corroboration for his evidence in regard to the alleged bribe as in the case of an accomplice.[51] A person who offers bribe and another person who goes with him are clearly witnesses who are agents provocateur whose evidence needs corroboration.[52] In a bribery case, the payer's testimony carries little conviction in the absence of reassuring support.[53] In a bribery case the complainant is a partisan witness and it is not safe to rely upon his uncorroborated evidence.[54] The evidence of a punter and police investigating

---

41. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1972 SC 2661; Ram Murti v. State of Haryana, AIR 1970 SC 1029; Rameshwar v. the State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; R. v. Basker Ville, (1916) 2 KB 658; Sailendra Kumar Roy Choudhury v. Territory of Tripura, AIR 1959 Tri 11; Kshetrimayum v. Union Territory of Manipur, 1968 Cr LJ 690 (2); Gopi Shanker v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1967 Raj 159; Idan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1977 Cr LJ 556 Raj; Raju v. State, ILR (1977) 1 Kant 307; Idan Singh v. State of Raj., 1977 Cr LJ 556; Sheikh Zakir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 911; Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1958 SC 143; A.W. Khan v. State, AIR 1962 Cal 641; Harnath v. State, AIR 1952 Ajmer 49.

42. Bharwada Bhoginabhai Hirjibhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1983 SC 753; Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; Emperor v. Mahadeo Tatya, AIR 1942 Bom 121 (FB).

43. Sheikh Zakir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 911; Bhudanlal Sharma v. State, 1961 (1) Cr LJ 689 (Ori); Emperor v. Mahadeo Tatya, AIR 1942 Bom 121 (FB); Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1958 SC 143; Dhaneshwar Thakur v. State, AIR 1958 Pat 412; State Govt. M.P. v. Sheo Dayal Gurudayal, AIR 1956 Nag 8; Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; Koli Tapu Dharamshi v. State, AIR 1955 Sau 96 DB; State of Kerala v. Kundumakara Govindan, 1969 Cr LJ 818 (Ker).

44. Motiram Krishna Rao v. State of M.P., AIR 1955 Nag 121.

45. Santa Bala Dasi v. Sashi Bhusan Das, AIR 1953 Cal 332.

46. Arabinda Dey v. State, AIR 1953 Cal 206; Gangaram v. Crown, AIR 1950 Nag 9; (723 Evidence has not corroborated by medical evidence) Dulichand v. State, AIR 1952 Ajmer 54 (Girl 9. 10 yrs. Corroboration and mother held sufficient).

47. Bhagwat Prakash v. State, AIR 1956 All 22; Dharam Pal v. State, AIR 1971 HP 17.

48. Emperor v. Papa Kamalkhan, (1935) 37 Bom LR 366 : ILR 59 Bom 486; Deo Nandan Pershad v. Emperor, ILR (1906) 33 Cal 649; See also Yusuf Abdul Aziz v. State of Bombay, AIR 1954 SC 321.

49. King Emperor v. Malhar, (1901) 3 Bom LR 694 : ILR (1901) 26 Bom 193; Kamala Prasad v. Sital Prasad Sup. Banu Singh v. Emperor, ILR (1906) 33 Cal 1353.

50. Mehar Singh Hazara Singh v. State of Pepsu, AIR 1955 Pepsu 156; R.R. Chari v. State, AIR 1959 All 149; Manohar Rao Srinivas Rao v. State, ILR 1973 Bom 1234; P.K. Subbaiah v. State, AIR 1952 Tri 1; Kewal Krishan v. State of J&K, 1975 Cr LJ 1963 (J&K); Dewan v. State, 1988 Cr LJ 1005 (Ker).

51. M.M. Gandhi v. State of Mys., AIR 1960 Mys. 111 (DB).

52. Nitya Nand Premlal v. State, AIR 1954 Punj. 89 (DB).

53. Raghubir Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1974 SC 1516.

54. Pandurang Laxman v. State, AIR 1959 Bom 30; C.J. Emden v. State of U.P., AIR 1960 SC 548 officer who are interested in securing a conviction, is unworthy of credit, and there is no reason why the principles applicable to the one type of witness who is unworthy of credit, viz an accomplice should not apply to another type of witness who is unworthy of credit for different reasons.[55]

Where a person paying bribe and the accused are the only persons, one cannot expect corroboration nor that corroboration in every particular is essential.[56] Where it is not possible to get a number of witnesses to speak to the incident amounting to an offence of receiving illegal gratification or criminal breach of trust the only manner in which the evidence of the accomplice can be tested is by seeing whether it is consistent with this circumstances and the circumstantial evidence in the case.[57] In a case of bribery where the person who pays the bribe is not a willing participant in the offence but is really a victim of the offence, conviction of the accused may be based on the evidence of the person paying the bribe if there is a slight independent corroboration of his evidence.[58]

Where the witness directly proving the tendering of the bribe is the full brother of the person to whom the bribe was offered his evidence has to be taken with some caution.[59] Though the witnesses who are willing parties to giving a bribe to the accused but are only actuated with the motive of trapping the accused, can be treated as partisan witnesses but not accomplices, their evidence cannot be relied upon without independent corroboration.[60] A person who pays a bribe to the accused, not voluntarily but merely with a view to render necessary assistance in the detection of the crime cannot be said to an accomplice in the commission of the offence under Section 161, IPC (now repealed), because he has not the mens rea that he is paying the amount to secure a favour from the accused. It cannot be said that he aided or abetted of offence of illegal gratification by the accused.[61] It does not seem to be law that if the money given as bribe is provided by a particular officer of the police then the evidence of all the witnesses becomes evidence of accomplices and must be looked at with the suspicion.[62] Independent corroboration on all material particulars from the evidence of panch and independent sources should be looked into by the Court before it can act on the testimony of the complaint in a trap case and the evidence of police officer cannot be used in order to corroborate the testimony of the complainant.[63] In an offence u/s. 51(1)(a) and (2) of Prevention of Corruption Act if the evidence of the police officer who laid trap is found reliable, corroboration is not necessary.[64] The officer functioning in the anti-corruption department must seriously endeavour to secure really independent and respectable witnesses, so that the evidence in regard to the trap inspires confidence in the mind of the court and the court is not left in any doubt as to whether or not any money was paid to the public servant by way of bribe. They should insist on observing this safeguard for the protection of public servants against whom a trap may have been laid.[65] In a case under the prevention of Corruption Act, for accepting the illegal grantification, when the circumstantial evidence is consistent with the guilt of the accused and not with his innocence, the accused can be convicted and the question whether a trap witness is independent or not becomes immaterial.[66] The decoy who is not acting for gain, but being himself the victim of the demand helps the authority sponteneously from a sense of duty, is a reliable and respectable witness.[67] Where there was the sole evidence of only the decoy witness about the taking of bribe by the accused and there was no

---

55. Miya Bhai Pir Bhai v. State, AIR 1963 Guj 188.
56. In re : K.V. Ayya Swamy, AIR 1965 AP 105 (DB).
57. State v. Narayanan, AIR 1952 Trav. Co. 128 (DB); C.M. Narayan v. State of Trav. Co., AIR 1953 SC 478.
58. Narayan Prashad v. King Emperor, ILR (1948) Nag 276; State of Kerala v. Samuel, AIR 1961 Ker 99; P.K. Subbiah v. State, AIR 1952 Tri 1; Kewal Krishan v. State, 1975 Cr LJ 1963 (J&K).
59. Bhajahari Mandal v. State, AIR 1956 Cal 385 DB; Bhajahari Mondal v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1959 SC 8; Chadala Vada Subba Rao v. Kasu Brahmhananda Reddy, AIR 1967 AP 155.
60. Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of Vindh-Pra, AIR 1954 SC 322; Pyarey Mohan v. State, AIR 1956 All 358; Prakash Chand Jain v. State, 1968 Cr LJ 391 (All).
61. K.M. Narayana Swami v. Kerala State, AIR 1957 Ker 134 (DB); Pappa Kamal Khan v. Emperor, AIR 1935 Bom 230; State v. Minaketan Patnaik, AIR 1952 Ori 267; Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of Vindh Prad., AIR 1954 SC 322; King v. Singh Rajasthan, AIR 1951 Ori 297 (DB).
62. Ramanlal Mohanlal Pandya v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 961.
63. Raghbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 91.
64. Hazarilal v. State (Delh Admn.), AIR 1980 SC 873; Manilal Harchand Mehta v. State, ILR 1967 Guj 386.
65. Raghbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 91.
66. State of U.P. v. G.K. Ghosh (Dr.), AIR 1984 SC 1453.
67. State of V.P. v. Shiva Bahadur Singh, AIR 1951 VP 17.

other evidence either direct or otherwise and the explanation given by the accused is probable, the conviction of the accused is not proper.[68]

Where a trap witness was a person who was in the habit of bribing station masters in order to secure the booking of his goods and his story was that only because the Police Officer contacted him, he became a party to the trap, it was held the witness is in the position of an accomplaice rather than an honest trap witness.[69] Whether the criminal tendencies of a man might be, he has a right to expect that he will not be deliberatedly tempted beyond the powers of his frail endurance and provoked into breaking the law and this at the instance of those who are the guardians and keepers of the law. Where such method is employed, that alone might make the conviction illegal.[70]

The evidence of search witness can provide independent corroboration to the evidence of a bribe giver as a trap witness.[71]

5. PARTISAN WITNESS

In the case of evidence of an accomplice no conviction can be based on his evidence unless it is corroborated in material particulars, but as regards the evidence of a partisan witness it is open to a Court to convict an accused person solely on the basis of that evidence if it is satisfied that the evidence is reliable.[72]

But it may, in appropriate cases, look for corroboration.[73] A testimony cannot be rejected only on the ground that the witness was interested and inimical.[74] An interested witness is not like an approver, only more precaution is necessary[75]. A son of the deceased cannot be disbelieved[76].

The Supreme Court has held that in a case of mid-night murder, home people are natural witnesses.[77]

The independence and impartiality of the judiciary requires that Magistrates whose normal function is judicial should not be relegated to this position of partisan witnesses and required to depose to matter transacted by them in their official capacity unregulated by any statutory rules of procedure or conduct whatever—employing of Magistrates as trap witnesses depreciated.[78]

Whether a witness is partisan witness or not would depend upon the circumstances of each case.[79]

6. TRAP WITNESS

Though trap witnesses are interested witnesses, as a matter of law, their evidence cannot be rejected for want of corroboration.[80]

---

68. Ramanarayan Patnaik v. State, (1989) Cr LJ 172 (Ori).

69. In re : Venkatarama Iyer, AIR 1957 AP 441.

70. In re : R.G. Jacob, AIR 1961 Mad 482; Ramjanam Singh v. Bihar State, AIR 1956 SC 643.

71. M.P. Agarwal v. State of Bihar, (1973) Cr LJ 1582 (Pat).

72. Bhanuprasad Hari Prasad Dave v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1968 SC 1323; E.G. Barsay v. State of Bombay, 1961 SC 1792; Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of Vindhya Pradesh, AIR 1954 SC 322; Ramachand Tolaram v. State, AIR 1956 Bom. 287; Dalpat Singh v. State, AIR 1969 SC 17.

73. Bhanu Prasad v. State of Gujarat, (1968) 71 Bom LR 43 SC : AIR 1968 SC 1323; State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500.

74. Babu v. State of U.P., AIR 1980 SC 443; See further Ram Ashrit v. State of Bihar, AIR 1981 SC 942 which explains the situation where all witnesses are interested State of U.P. v. Manohar Lal, AIR 1981 SC 2073. For difference between interested and related witness see State of Rajasthan v. Kalki, AIR 1981 SC 1390.

75. State of U.P. v. Ballabh Das, AIR 1985 SC 1384.

76. Natthu v. U.P., AIR 1977 SC 2096; Guli Chand v. Rajasthan, AIR 1974 SC 775.

77. State of U.P. v. Gajun Singh, AIR 1980 SC 2128.

78. State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500; M.M. Gandhi v. State of Mysore, AIR 1960 Mys 111; State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 : 1958 All WR NC 47; Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of Vindhya Pradesh, AIR 1954 SC 322; Ramkrishan v. Delhi State, AIR 1956 SC 476.

79. 1956 Cr LJ 275.

80. Dalpat Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1969 SC 262; Tarsemlal Shanti Ram v. State, AIR 1960 Punj 72 (DB); State v. Pundalik, AIR 1959 Bom 543; Ganadhesh v. State, AIR 1968 Goa 63; Khembu Ram v. State, 1972 Cr LJ 381 (HP); Balaram Singh v. State of Orissa, 1984 Cr LJ (NOC) 21 (Ori); T. Narayan Rao v. Republic of India, 1977 Cr LJ 1586 (Ori); Iswar Devi Malik v. Union of India, AIR 1969 Delhi 183; Srichand v. Dupendra Chandra, ILR (1967) 19 Assam 521.

In the following cases it was held that corroboration by independent witnesses is required to support the evidence of trap witnesses.[81]

It is not safe to rely upon the evidence of a trap witness without corroboration. However it is not necessary to have corroboration of all the circumstances of every detail of the crime. It will be sufficient if there is corroboration as to the material circumstances of the crime and of the identity of the accused in relation to the crime.[82] The Supreme Court has however, cautioned against a harsh approach which would make things impossible of proof.[83]

Though it is neither illegal nor imprudent to convict the accused on the sole testimony of the partisan witness, it is advisable to look for independent corroboration though the Court has discretion in proper cases to dispense with a corrborating witness.[84]

As held in Samprakash v. State[85], if an honest and respectable man is to be treated as a partisan witness, it may impair confidence in the judicial system. Therefore, the Court has a duty to bestow care and view the evidence in the light of circumstances, probabilities and intrinsic credibility of the witness before looking for corroboration.[86] The Supreme Court held that every panch witness who helps in trapping the accused need not necessarily be regarded as a partisan witness.[87] Where, in a trap case, the judge magnified every minor detail or omission to falsify or throw even a shadow of doubt on the prosecution evidence then, it would be the very antithesis of a correct judicial approach to the evidence of witnesses in a trap case.[88] Police officials cannot be discredited in a trap case merely because they are police officials nor can other witnesses be rejected because on some other occasion they have been witnesses for the prosecution in the past. The court has to view the evidence in the light of probabilities and the intrinsic credibility of those who testify.[89] The demanding degree of proof traditionally required in a criminal case and the devaluation suffered by a witness who is naturally involved in the fruits of his investigative efforts suggest the legitimate search for corroboration from an independent source, human or circumstantial, to make judicial certitude doubly sure.[90]

Where no temptation nor bribe money was offered by the police when the trap was arranged and the Executive Magistrate merely sought to do his public duty of intercepting a crime which was otherwise in the process of fulfilment, the veracity of his testimony cannot be discredited.[91] A distrinction has to be drawn between an accomplice and a decoy–witness, the former being a person who joins another with the intention of aiding the commission of an offence and the latter who is instrumental in provoking the commission of the offence with the object of discovering the offence and detecting the offender.[92] Evidence of a decoy witness supported by another trap witness about the sale of spurious parts of a cycle by accused is sufficient to sustain conviction.[93]

---

81. Prakash Chand Jain v. State, 1968 Cr LJ 391 (All); Khalilur Rahman v. Nabi Hussain, AIR 1967 Assam 55; Khalilur Rahuman v. Nabi Hussain, 1967 Cr LJ 1138; Kesho Parshad v. State, AIR 1967 Delhi 51; Ganadesh v. State, 1968 Cr LJ 925 : AIR 1968 Goa 83; Cherian Lukose v. State of Kerala, 1968 Cr LJ 168 : AIR 1968 Kel. 60; Mehar Chand v. State of Rajasthan, ILR (1969) 19 Raj 641.

82. Major E.G. Barsay v. State of Bombay, AIR 1961 SC 1762; Raghubir Singh v. Haryana, AIR 1974 SC 1516; Maharaj Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1981 SC 936; Jadunath Khatua v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 954 (Ori).

83. State of Maharashtra v. Narsingrao, AIR 1984 SC 63; R.P. Arora v. State of Punjab, AIR 1973 SC 498; Hiralal v. State of Haryana, AIR 1971 SC 356.

84. Bhanuprasad v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1968 SC 1223; State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500; Dalpat Singh v. State, AIR 1969 SC 17; R.P. Arora v. State, AIR 1973 SC 498; Ramchand Tolaram v. State, AIR 1956 Bom 287.

85. AIR 1974 SC 989.

86. Gain Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1974 SC 1024.

87. Ramratan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1962 SC 424.

88. State of Maharashtra v. Narsingrao, AIR 1984 SC 63.

89. Gian Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1974 SC 1024.

90. Som Prakash v. State of Delhi, AIR 1974 SC 989.

91. Raghubir Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1974 SC 1516.

92. State v. Bashamber Dayal, Naib Tehsildar of Bihar, AIR 1953 Pepsu 82 (DB); Ambalal Motibhai Patel v. State, AIR 1961 Guj 1 (DB); In re : Ambujam Ammal, AIR 1954 Mad 326; Basheeruddin Ahmed v. Govt. of Mysore, AIR 1952 Mys 42; K.H. Bhattacharjee v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Cal 374; Kesho Parshad v. State, AIR 1967 Del 51; T. Narayan Rao v. Republic of India, 1977 Cr LJ 1586 (Ori).

93. Bahal Singh v. State, AIR 1960 Punj 641; Laurie E. Jacobs v. Union of India, AIR 1958 All 481 (DB).

If a spy or informer in exuberance of enthusiasm actually instigates another to commit a crime, even if it be for detection of the offence, or to get his credit of having him arrested, he is an abettor under the penal law and his position cannot be anything than that of an accomplice.[1] Evidence of a person giving information to police for trapping the accused would not be tainted but it would be interested evidence which would require corroboration before acceptance as in the case of accomplice evidence.[2]

The Court can act upon uncorroborated testimony of trap witness if it is satisfied from facts and circumstances that the witness is witness of truth.[3] Though the trap witness is only a petty clerk his evidence cannot be rejected as wholly unreliable.[4] A Panch witness cannot be taken to be a trap witness as he is not interested in the success of the raid, and his evidence can be accepted without corroboration.[5]

7. ACCOMPLICE A COMPETENT WITNESS

An accomplice is a competent witness against an accused person and a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. But whether it should be accepted is a different matter. Unless the case is a very exceptional one, an accomplice's evidence should not be accepted as being sufficient.[6] An accomplice witness as well as an ordinary witness are competent to testify, but the evidence of an accomplice, though admissible, remains suspect evidence because of the tainted source from which it comes.[7] The competency of an accomplice is not destroyed because he could have been tried jointly with the accused but was not and was instead made to give evidence in the case.[8] Where a driver of a lorry intentionally transports food grains from a village in Orissa to a village in Madras in contravention of the Orissa Food Grains Control Order 1947, under instructions of the petitioner, the driver is equally guilty of the offence. He is competent to depose as an accomplice witness and the mere fact that he was convicted for that offence does not any way detract from his competence.[9] The fact that this accomplice is a man of questionable character is not by itself sufficient to reject his evidence.[10] The court may call in aid the statement of an accomplice witness and use it to lend assurance to the other evidence and thus fortify itself into believing what without the aid of the statment it would not be prepared to accept.[11]

8. ACCOMPLICE—CORROBORATION

The reasons why accomplice evidence is held to be untrustworthy and to require corroboration are that from the very nature of his evidence:

(1) he is a person of low character who has participated in a crime and is therefore likely to have no regard to the sanctity of his oath;

(2) he is interested in falsely destroying the facts in order to shift the guilt from himself; and

(3) that he has the inducement of either a promissed or implied pardon for his own part in the crime, and is therefore likely to be biased in favour of the prosecution.[12]

---

1. In re : M Ranga Rajulu Naidu, AIR 1958 Mad 368; State v. Minaketan Patnaik, AIR 1952 Ori 267 (DB); Cherian Lukose v. State of Kerala, AIR 1968 Ker 60.
2. Ram Chand Tolaram Khatri v. State, AIR 1956 Bom 287; Mahabir Parshad v. State, AIR 1951 Punj 424.
3. Jadunath Khatua v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 954 (Ori).
4. Kishan Chand Mangal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1982 SC 1511.
5. State of Gujarat v. Mangabhai Jethabhai Vaghela, 1982 Cr LJ 1317 (Guj).
6. Rajgopal, In re : ILR (1944) Mad 308 (FB).
7. Ibrahim Husen v. State, AIR 1969 Goa 68; Sarwan Singh Rattan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637; Bhiva v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 599; Ahmed Kunju v. State, ILR 1971 (2) Ker 30; Sheshanna Bhumanna v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1970 SC 1330; Kilimanni Abu v. State of Kerala, (1965) 2 Cr LJ 557 (Ker); Rex v. Baskerville, (1916) 2 KB 658; Dama Alias Damodar jena v. State, ILR 1969 Cut 265; Maghar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 1320; Purnananda Das Gupta v. Emperor, 1939 Cal 65 (FB); State of Rajasthan v. Chhuttanlal, 1970 Crl LJ 1206 (Raj); Sewa Ram v. Union of India, 1983 Crl LJ 1788 (J&K).
8. Laxmipat Choraria v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1968 SC 938.
9. Jaganadhan v. State of Orissa, AIR 1952 Ori 164.
10. Md. Yunus v. State of Bihar, 1977 Cr LJ 1243 (DB); Rama Shankar v. Rikhab Kumar, AIR 1952 All 428 : 1952 Cr LJ 747 (All).
11. State v. Murli, AIR 1957 All 53 (DB); Kashmira Singh v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1952 SC 159.
12. In re : Venkatarama Iyer, AIR 1957 AP 441.

The Supreme Court held that the accomplice evidence cannot be accepted without corroboration.[13]

The fact that the accomplice is a man of questionable character is not by itself sufficient to reject his evidence.[14] The degree of suspicion which will attach to the evidence of an accomplice varies according to the extent and nature of his complicity.[15]

The Supreme Court observed: "It would be impossible, indeed it would be dangerous, to formulate the kind of evidence which should or would be regarded as corroboration. Its nature and extent must necessarily vary with the circumstances of each case and also according to the particular circumstances of the offence charged, but to this extent the rules are clear, i.e. it is not necessary that there should be independent confirmation of every material circumstance in the sense that independent evidence in the case, apart from the testimony of the complainant or the accomplice should in itself be sufficient to sustain conviction. All that is required is that there must be some additional evidence rendering it probable that the story of the accomplice is true and that it is reasonably safe to act upon it."[16]

The independent evidence must not only make it safe to believe that the crime was committed but must in some way reasonably connect or tend to connect the accused with it by confirmation in some material particulars the testimony of the accomplice or complainant that he committed the crime.[17] The corroboration must come from independent sources and thus ordinarily the testimony of one accomplice would not be sufficient to corroborate that of another.[18] The corroboration need not be direct evidence that the accused committed the crime. It is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime.[19] The corroboration need not be of a kind which proves the offence against

---

13. Kanan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1979 SC 1127. See also Pandit Shree Krishna Selot v. Ramacharan Pujari, (1969) 3 SCC 548.
14. Md. Yunus v. State of Bihar, 1977 Cr LJ 1243 (Pat)(DB).
15. In re : Amir Sultan, AIR 1957 Mad 796; Sriniwas Mall v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 135; Chatru v. State, AIR 1953 Bilaspur 3; Ranjha v. State, AIR 1951 HP 75; Rattan Dhanuk v. Emperor, AIR 1928 PC 630; Sriniwas Mall v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 135.
16. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; Major E.G. Barsay v. State of Bombay, AIR 1961 SC 1762; State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500; Tribhuvan Nath v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1973 SC 450; Kuruchiyam Kunhaman v. State of Kerala, 1974 Ker LT 328; Mukhtiar Kaur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1980 SC 1871; Nathuram Godse v. Rex, ILR 1956 Punj 499; Autar Singh v. State, 1960 Punj 364 relying on; Dalip Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Lah 294; Kashmira Singh v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1952 SC 159; Harilal Gordhan v. Emperor, AIR 1937 Bom 385; Hormazdyar Ardeshir Iran v. Emperor, AIR 1948 Bom 250; Harak Chand v. State, AIR 1954 MB 145; Ambalal Motilal Patel v. State, AIR 1961 Guj 1 (DB); Rao Shiv Bahadur Singh v. State of Vidh Prad, AIR 1954 SC 322; Public Prosecutor v. A. Thomas, AIR 1959 Mad 166; Kunti Mohammed v. State, AIR 1959 Ker. 88 (DB); Basheeruddin Ahmed v. Govt. of Mysore, AIR 1952 Mys. 42 (DB); P. Venkata Rao v. King, AIR 1951 Ori. 281; State v. Bai Radha, ILR 1967 Guj 1046; In re : Gundla Narayana, AIR 1959 AP 387.
17. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; Nandalal More v. State, 1965 (1) Cr LJ 393 relying on R v. Baskerville, 1916 (2) KB 658; Bhuboni Sahu v. King, AIR 1949 PC 257; Sarvan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637; Major E.G. Barsay v. State of Bombay, AIR 1961 SC 1762; Bhiva v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1963 SC 599; State of Kerala v. Joseph, 1963 (2) Cr LJ 454 (Ker); Autar Singh v. State, AIR 1960 Punj 364; relying on Dalip Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Lah 294 (supra); Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159 (supra); Bhima Shah v. State, AIR 1956 Ori. 177; Vajeram Raghuram v. State of Kutch, AIR 1954 Kut. 20; Ramchand v. State, AIR 1952 HP 57; relying on Gorakhnath v. Emperor, AIR 1935 All 86; R v. Baskarville, (1916) 2 KB 658 (supra); Chacko Thomas v. State, AIR 1952 TC 155; In re : Padmaraja Setty, AIR 1951 Mad 746; C. Chellappan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1979 SC 1761; Asst. Collector of Customs v. Shantilal Laxmi Chand Modi, ILR (1971) 2 Delhi 584; State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500; Rabidas v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 2004; Chandra Kant v. State of Maharastra, 1978 Cr LJ 431 (Bom).
18. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State, AIR 1952 SC 54; Shamsher Bahadur Saxena v. State of Bihar, AIR 1956 Pat 404; M.C. Taneja v. State of Rajasthan, 1970 Crl LJ 945.
19. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State, AIR 1952 SC 54; K.K. Jadhav v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1966 SC 821 following Sathyanarayana v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1956 SC 379; State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 relying on R v. Baskerville, 1916 (2) KB 658 (supra); Mohamad Hussain Umar v. Dalip Singhji, AIR 1970 SC 45 relying on Bhiva Doulu Patil v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1963 SC 599; Ramanlal v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 961; Major E.G. Barsay v. State of Bombay, AIR 1961 SC 1762; Kuruchiyam Kunhaman v. State of Kerala, 1974 Ker LT 328; Sheikh Zakir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 911; Shamsher Bahadur v. State of Bihar, AIR 1956 Pat 404; Nathuram Godse v. Rex, ILR 1956 Punj 499; In re : Gundla Narayana, AIR 1959 AP 387; Bhima Shaw v. State, 1956 Ori 177; Chacko Thomas v. State, AIR 1952 JC 155; Rehman v. State, 1981 Cr LJ (NOC) 125; In re : Boddu Sanyasi Patrudu, AIR 1957 AP 482; Bhuboni Sahu v. King, AIR 1949 PC 257; State v. Saradara, 1974 Cr LJ 43 (Raj); Mohan v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 48 (para 12) (Mad). relying on Chandran v. State of Rajasthan, 1988 SC 599 at p. 600.

the accused. It is sufficient if it connects the accused with the crime.[20] The testimony of an accomplice cannot be said to have been corroborated by the evidence of a witness who is false and who contradicts other reliable evidence.[21] A person became approver after 20 months. Copies of the earlier statements to the police were not supplied to the defence. These facts weakened his evidence[22] One tainted evidence cannot be used to corroborate another tainted evidence[23]. Evidence of one accomplice cannot be corroborated with that of another.[24] The Supreme Court in Md. Hussain Umar v. Dalip Singhji[25] reiterated the above principle differing from the view taken by Justice Bose in Kashmira Singh v. State[26] that the evidence of an accomplice can be used to corroborate another in exceptional circumstances. Independent corroboration is required because one tainted witness cannot corroborate another tainted witness.[27] Where Several accomplices simultaneously and without previous concert give consistent account of the crime implicating the accused, the court may accept the several statements as corroborating each other.[28]

Evidence that the accused were, at the time the crime was committed, near the scene of the crime and so placed as to justify the inference that they were accompanying persons whose complicity in the crime has been satisfactorily proved by independent evidence, is sufficient corroboration of the testimony of an accomplice.[29] Where a person is only an accomplice by implication or in a secondary sense, his evidence does not require the same amount of corroboration as that of the person who is an actual participator with the principal offender.[30] The rule that evidence of an accomplice should receive corroboration in material particulars applies to the evidence of an accused who is convicted and sentenced on his own plea and who then appears as a witness against his co-accused.[31] Panchas accompanying the police for raid are independent witnesses and their evidence is good evidence and requires no corroboration before acceptance.[32] The fact that the accused who was charged with dacoity at the house of a person who was a money lender, was indebted to him, is no corroboration of the evidence of the accused accomplice.[33]

It is only when the court is not able to say whether the accomplice is wholly reliable, that the court should demand corroboration direct or circumstantial in material particulars in respect of the part played by the accused.[34]

Conviction of an caused under Section 201, I.P.C. based on the uncorroborated testimony of accomplices cannot be sustained when it appears that these accomplices have not given any clear evidence connecting the accused with the crime.[35]

---

20. S. Swaminathan v. State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 340.
21. State (Delhi Admn.) v. V.C. Shukla, AIR 1980 SC 1382, 1398.
22. Lalchand v. Haryana, AIR 1984 P&H 226.
23. C. Chellappan v. State of Kerala, 1979 Cr LJ 1335 (SC) : AIR 1979 SC 1761; Baldeo Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1280 : 1979 Cr LJ 871 (SC).
24. Dagdu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1977 SC 1579; Kunj Behari v. State, 1951 Pat 84; T. Retnakaran v. State, AIR 1955 Trav. Co. 87 (DB); Bhuboni Sahu v. King, AIR 1949 PC 257; Kunj Behari v. State, AIR 1951 Pat 84; L.S. Raju v. State of Mysore, AIR 1953 Bom 297 (DB); Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159; Ramchand v. State, AIR 1952 HP 57; Gorakhnath v. Emperor, AIR 1935 All 86; Gurnam Singh v. State of Raj., 1979 Cr LJ (NOC) 215; Emperor v. Mohiuddin, ILR 25 Mad 143; Empress v. Ram Charan, ILR 8 All 306.
25. AIR 1970 SC 45.
26. AIR 1952 SC 159.
27. C. Chellappan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1979 SC 1761.
28. Mohd. Hussain Umar v. Dalip Singhji, AIR 1970 SC 45; Haroom Haji Abdulla v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1968 SC 832; Bhuboni Sahu v. King, AIR 1949 PC 257; Harichand v. State, ILR (1974) 2 Delhi 706.
29. Dhanapati De v. Emperor, ILR (1944) 2 Cal 312 : AIR 1946 Cal 156.
30. Kamala Prasad v. Sital Prasad, ILR (1901) 28 Cal 339; Banu Singh v. Emperor, ILR (1906) 33 Cal 1353.
31. Emperor v. Allisab, (1932) 34 Bom LR 1453.
32. Ramchand Tolaram Khatri v. State, 1956 Bom 287 (DB); State of Gujarat v. Mangabhai Jetnabhai, 1982 Cr LJ 1317 DB.
33. In re : Boddu Sanyasi Patrudu, AIR 1957 AP 482.
34. Data Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1977 Cr LJ 1428 (Raj).
35. Kanka Singh v. State, 1960 (26) Cut. LT 638; Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500; Bhuboni Sahu v. King, AIR 1949 PC 257.

One has to take into consideration the nature and extent of the participation in the crime. If finds that the act is such as to render it probable that accessory himself would have been charged for the offence then this evidence is of absolutely no value.[36]

Corroboration of accomplices evidence by confession of accused believed to be voluntary and true is said to be good corroboration.[37] Testimony of accomplice, if corroborated in material particulars, can form basis of conviction.[38] Law is not that the accomplice evidence can under no circumstances be relied upon. There must be additional evidence rendering it plausible.[39] Where a co-accused was convicted on his pleading guilty and his evidence corroborated from the evidence of other co-accused, it was held that evidence of such co-accused could be acted upon.[40] Where the evidence of an accomplice is not totally unsupported by re-assuring circumstances, the accused could be convicted on the basis of such evidence.[41]

Where the accused failed to disclose incident of ghastly crime to any authority or person interested in detection and his statement was uncorroborated, it cannot form the basis of conviction.[42] The statement of the accomplice made before the Magistrate before pardon was tendered to him, can be used as corroborative material. It being his former statement, the Court attached no great weight in the instant case.[43]

9. MURDER—ACCOMPLICE

Conviction of the accused resting primarily on the testimony of the accomplice in a murder case in valid only if the testimony is reliable and is corroborated in material particulars.[44]

10. ACCOMPLICE RELATED TO ACCUSED

Where an accomplice is closely related to the accused, it is conceivable that he should try to implicate his accused falsely. In such circumstances, the maxim contained in illus (b), S-114 does not apply and the conviction of the accused would, as laid down in Section 133, not be illegal merely because it proceeded upon his uncorroborated testimony.[45]

11. ACCOMPLICE—APPROVER

When an accomplice turns as a witness on accepting the pardon granted by the Court under Section 306, Cr. P.C., to speak to the facts relating to the offence, he is called an approver.

Firstly, the Court has to satisfy itself that the statement of the approver is credible in itself and there is evidence other than the statement of the approver that the approver himself had taken part in the crime. Secondly, the Court should seek corroboration of the approver's evidence with respect to the part of

---

36. Abdul Munim Khan v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1953 Hyd. 145.
37. Bhairon Lal v. State, AIR 1953 Raj 131 (DB).
38. Rampal Pithwa Rahidas v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 2320 (para 9) (SC). See also Ramprasad v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 Cr LJ 2889 (para 19) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 1969. Evidence of approver corroborated, can't be rejected merely because of some discrepancy, Balbir Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1997 SC 1704 : 1997 Cr LJ 1179.
39. Vasudevan v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 3151 (para 21) (Ker), following State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500 : 1958 Cr LJ 976.
40. Bhana Khalpa Bhai Patel v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1998 SC 1487. See also Narayan Chetanram Chaudhary v. State of Maharashtra, 2000 Cr LJ 4640 (paras 34, 35 and 38) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 3352.
41. State of Tamil Nadu v. Suresh, AIR 1998 SC 1044 : 1998 Cr LJ 1416 (para 22) (SC), reversing Cri A Nos. 782-83 of 1989, decided on 8-2-1991 (Mad).
42. Shanker v. State of M.P., 1997 Cr LJ 3876 (MP). See also Jagannath Prasad v. State of U.P., 2000 Cr LJ 923 (para 12) (All); uncorroborated, infirm and exaggerated version of victims of rape, offence not established beyond reasonable doubt, Babulal v. The State of Madhya Pradesh, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 283 (MP).
43. Ramprasad v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 Cr LJ 2889 (para 25) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 1969.
44. Santan Ghorai v. State of W.B., 1969 SCD 874; State (Del. Admn.) v. V.C. Shukla, AIR 1980 SC 1382; Ravinder Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1975 SC 856; Gopal Krishna v. State, AIR 1964 All 481; State of Ram Autar Choudhary, AIR 1955 All 138; Raja Ram v. State, 1966 All 192 (FB); State v. Bassappa Challappa Bekwad, AIR 1956 Bom 341; Rangaswami Chettiar v. State, AIR 1953 Trav. Co. 280; State v. Youssuf Dar, 1973 Cr LJ 955 (J&K); Prananath Patnaik v. Banamali Patnaik, AIR 1958 Ori. 228.
45. Ranja v. State, AIR 1951 HP 75.

other accused persons in the crime, and this evidence has to be of such a nature as to connect other accused with the crime.[46] The corroboration need not consist of evidence which, standing alone, would be sufficient to justify the conviction of the accused. If that were the law, it would be unnecessary to examine an approver. All that seems to be required is that the corroboration should be sufficient to afford some sort of independent evidence to show that the approver is speaking the truth with regard to the accused person whom he seeks to implicate.[47] Every detail of the story of the accomplice need not be confirmed by independent evidence although some additional independent evidence must be looked for to see whether the approver is speaking the truth and there must be some evidence, direct or circumstantial, which connects the co-accused with the crime independently of the accomplice.[48] Approver's evidence is looked upon with great suspicion, but, if it is found to be trustworthy, it can be decisive in securing conviction.[49]

Non-acceptance of the approver's evidence in respect of one of the co-accused for want of independent corroboration does make her evidence infirm or create any doubt regarding her reliability as a witness.[50] A conviction based on uncorroborated evidence of a trustworthy approver is not illegal though as a matter of practice corroboration in material particulars by independent evidence is insisted upon.[51] Where the evidence of the approver was fully corroborated on material aspects from truthful independent sources and the same showed that he was acting on the tunes of the accused, his evidence was held to be credible.[52] It is well-settled that the appreciation of approver's evidence has to satisfy a double test. His evidence must show that he is a reliable witness. If this test is satisfied, the second test which still remains to be applied is that the approver's evidence must receive sufficient corroboration.[53] The evidence of the approver should be corroborated in material particulars connecting each of the accused with the crime.[54] It must be shown that the approver is a witness of truth, the evidence led to corroborate him in material particulars would be relevant for consideration. The court should bear this in mind in deciding whether the evidence of the approver should be acted upon or not.[55] The nature of corroboration will necessarily vary according to the particular circumstances of the offence charged. It would be in high degree dangerous to attempt to formulate the kind of evidence which would be regarded as corroboration, except to say that corroboration evidence is evidence which shows or tends to show that the story of the accomplice that the crime has been committed by the accused is true. The corroboration need not be direct evidence that the accused committed the crime. It is sufficient if it is circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime.[56] In a murder case, recovery of articles belonging to deceased from different accused and the deadbody from a particular place in pursuance of the statement of the approver, was held to be sufficient corroboration of the approver's statement connecting different accused with the crime.[57]

---

46. Saravanbhavan v. State of Madras, AIR 1966 Mad 1273; See also Lacchi Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 792.

47. Bishnu Padu Chatterji v. Emperor, ILR (1944) 2 Cal 327.

48. Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54.

49. Jasbir Singh v. Vipin Kumar Jaggi, 2001 Cr LJ 3993 (para 19) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2734.

50. Ranadhir Basu v. State of W.B., 2000 Cr LJ 1417 (para 9) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 908.

51. (1972) 1 Cut. LR (Cri) 346; Piara Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1969 SC 961; Haroom Haji Abdulla v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1968 SC 832; Krishna Biharilal v. State, 1956 MB 86 (DB); Chandrakant v. State of Maharastra, 1978 Cr LJ 431 (Bom); Debi v. State, AIR 1953 Raj 49.

52. Vinit v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 1791 (Bom).

53. Piara Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1969 SC 961; Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637; Sheshanna Bhumanna v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1970 SC 1330; Ram Deo v. State of Rajasthan, 1966 Cr LJ 240 (DB); Major E.G. Barsay v. State of Bombay, AIR 1961 SC 1762; Mohinder Singh v. State, (1963) 2 Crl LJ 104 (P&H); Sumer Singh v. State, (1962) 2 Cr LJ 672 (MP); State of Bihar v. Srilal Kerjiwal, AIR 1960 Pat 459; State v. Teka, 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 241; In re : Mukhesh Ramachandra Reddy, AIR 1958 AP 165.

54. G.S. Bakshi v. State Delhi Admn., AIR 1979 SC 569; Jnanendra Nath Ghose v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1959 SC 1199; S. Swami-Rathnam v. State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 340; Ram Deo v. State of Rajasthan, 1966 Cr LJ 240; Sarwansingh Rattan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637; R. v. Baskerville, 1916 (2) KB 658; Balwant Kaur v. Union Territory of Chandigarh, AIR 1988 SC 139.

55. State of A.P. v. Ganeswara Rao, AIR 1963 SC 1850.

56. Samunder Singh v. State, AIR 1965 Cal 598 (DB); Sheo Nandan v. State, AIR 1964 All 139 (DB); Sohan Singh Kesar Singh v. State, AIR 1964 Punj 130 (DB); State of Bihar v. Srilal Kerjiwal, AIR 1960 Pat 459 (DB); Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; Ram Singh v. Crown, 1951 Simla 178; Rabi Das v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 2004 (DB)(Cri).

57. Nizamuddin v. State, AIR 1963 J&K 34 (D.B.).

When there is circumstantial evidence proved against accused that he was guilty of murder then it constitutes substantial corroboration of approver's statement in material particulars.[58]

Courts are naturally reluctant to act on the tainted evidence of an approver unless it is corroborated in material particulars by other independent evidence. But it would not be right to expect that such independent corroboration should cover the whole of the prosecution story or even all the material particulars. If such a view is adopted it would render the evidence of the accomplice wholly superflous. On the other hand it would not be safe to act upon such evidence merely because it is corroborated in minor particulars or incidental details, because in such a case corroboration does not afford necessary assurance that the main story disclosed by the approver can be reasonably and safely accepted as true.[59] Courts should be cautious to the uncorroborated testimony of approver.[60] A conviction ought not to be based on the testimony of the approver unless it is corroborated in material details not only with regard to the general story narrated by him, but also with regard to the corpus delicti and the identity of the accused. It is so even though his testimony does not suffer from inherent defects or improbabilities. It follows that the resiled statement of an accomplice naturally must be subjected to greater scrutiny.[61]

It is a general tendency on the part of approvers to minimise their own role in the offence but that cannot render the prosecution story unbelievable, when there is independent corroboration to his statement of the approver.[62] An approver's evidence cannot be discarded totally merely because it was found unbelievable in respect of the part played by one of the accused who was a acquitted.[63]

The evidence of an approver has to fulfil two tests for its acceptance. (1) it must be natural and credible. Where this is prima facie lacking, there is really no question of further corroboration and the prosecution can only rely upon other pieces of evidence. (2) even if a court is inclined to accept the evidence as natural or convincing, it must be corroborated in material particulars with regard to the participation of the accused concerned.[64]

Identification of one out of six of the accused in circumstances which make the identification questionable, is no corroboration of the evidence of the approver.[65] Where the approver's evidence is corroborated almost in every particular by medical evidence, it would be sufficient to convict the accused.[66] Certain clinching features disclosed by an approver pertaining directly to an accused, if reliable, by the touch stone of other independent credible evidence, would give the needed assurance for acceptance of his testimony on which a conviction may be based.[67]

---

58. Maghar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 1320.

59. Sheo Nandan v. State, AIR 1964 All 139; R.R. Chari v. State of U.P., 1962 (2) Cr LJ 510 (SC); Sarwan Singh Rattan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637; Jnanendra Nath Ghose v. State of W.B., AIR 1957 SC 1199; A.P Kuttan Pancker v. State of Kerala, 1963 (1) Cr LJ 669 (Ker); Nizam-ud-Din v. State, AIR 1963 J&K 34 (DB); Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; V. Govindrajulu v. State of Mysore, AIR 1962 Mys. 275; State of Bihar v. Srilal Kerjiwal, AIR 1960 Pat 459 (DB).

60. S.C. Bahri v. State of Bihar, 1994 Cr LJ 3271 (para 45) : AIR 1994 SC 2420.

61. In re : Kasaboyina Muttiga, AIR 1958 AP 255 (DB).

62. (1975) 2 Cr LJ 285 (HP); Saravana Bhavan and Govinda Swamy v. State of Madras, AIR 1966 SC 1273.

63. 1975 (2) Cr LJ 285 HP; Piare Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1969 SC 961; Emperor v. Rai Singh Narain Singh, AIR 1933 Lah. 871.

64. In re : Chinnasami, AIR 1960 Mad 462 (DB); Sarwan Singh Rattan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637; Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; R v. Baskerville, 1916 (2) KB 658; Ram Narain v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1973 SC 1188; State v. Banwari, ILR 1959 (9) Raj 107; State of Bihar v. Basawan Singh, AIR 1958 SC 500; Rajanikanta Meheta v. State of Orissa, 1976 Cr LJ 1674 (Ori); In re : B.K. Rajgopal, AIR 1944 Mad 117; Bhuboni Sahu v. King, AIR 1949 PC 257; Nafiz Ahmed v. State, 1989 Cr LJ 1296 (Bom).

65. Samunder Singh v. State, AIR 1953 Raj 182 DB; Uma Krishna v. State of Ajmer, AIR 1956 Ajmer 57.

66. Shankar Tukaram v. State, ILR 1979 Bom 300. See also Rukhmmini Bhagoji Pardhi v. State, ILR 1979 Bom 380.

67. Ravinder Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1975 SC 856; State v. Hetep Boro, 1972 Cr LJ 1074; Tulugu Soura v. State, 1973 Cr LJ 1426 (Ori); Ram Deo v. State of Rajasthan, 1966 Cr LJ 240 (Raj); Rangaswami v. State of Kerala, ILR 1958 Ker 420; In re : Gundla Narayana, 1959 AP 387 (DB); Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; State of Orissa v. Bishnucharan Muduli, 1985 Cr LJ 1573 (DB); Aran Datti v. State, AIR 1955 J&K 13 (DB); State of Orissa v. Nazrul Ali Sekh, 1985 Cr LJ 1311 (Ori); Harihar Samal v. State of Orissa, 1982 Cr LJ 1156 (Ori); Khagendra Gohan v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 487 (Ori); Gurnam Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1979 Cr LJ (NOC) 215; State v. Teka, 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 241 (DB); Data Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1977 Cr LJ 1428 (Raj); Sumer Singh v. State of Haryana, 1977 Cr LJ (NOC) 32 (Punj); Chandan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 599; Ranjeet Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1988 SC 672; Ujit Ali v. State, 1988 Cr LJ (NOC) 50 (Cal); Lachhi Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 792.

The fact that a co-accused became an approver after a lapse of 20 months from the date of occurrence and copies of his earlier statements to the police were not supplied to the defence, was held sufficient to lessen the value of his evidence.[68] Where it is proved that there was ill feeling between the father of the approver and the accused the evidence of the approver implicating the accused loses much of its value. Further, where he has been made approver only to obtain the evidence against that accused, it is not possible to attach any weight to such evidence.[69]

The antecedetns of the approver do not make his evidence either better or worse. His evidence can be accepted on its own merits with corroboration.[70]

It cannot be laid down as a matter of law that the evidence of witnesses who support the statement of an approver is not corroborative evidence merely because their evidence was known to the police before the approver was given pardon.[71]

Approver does not cease to be a competent witness after withdrawal of his pardon.[72] That the approver had denied his complicity in the crimes during the earlier stages of investigation does not show that his evidence given by him in the court of session is false as prisoners make full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within their knowledge relating to the offence under investigation only when they are assured of pardon.[73]

When approver was convicted and sentenced and on appeal the conviction was set aside and the case remanded, and after remand pardon was tendered to him and he was made approver, it was held that no reliance could be placed on the statement of such an approver.[74] Unless, the approver's statement is found credible and his part in the crime corroborated by other evidence, no useful purpose will be served by seeking corroboration of other part of his evidence by reference to other evidence on record.[75] An approver is generally a deserter in the hope of reward of pardon. So unless he is wholly reliable corroboration will be necessary.[76]

12. CONFESSION

The difference between evidence of accomplice and confession of an accused is that in the case of a person confessing who has resiled from his statement, general corroboration is sufficient, while an accomplice's evidence should be corroborated in material particulars.[77] A co-accused who confessed is naturally an accomplice and the danger of using the testimony of one accomplice to corroborate another has repeatedly been pointed out. The danger is no way lessened when the evidnece is not on oath and cannot be tested by cross-examination.[78] A confession intended to be used against a co-accused stands on a lower level than accomplice evidence because the latter is atleast tested by cross-examination whilst the former is not. The confession of co-accused are not evidence but if there is other evidence on which a conviction can be based; they can be referred to as lending some assurance to the verdict.[79] An extra judicial confession made by a person, who was subsequently made an approver, cannot be relied upon. The approver is no better than an accomplice and his testimony therefore, would need independent corroboration before it can be acted upon.[80] Corroboration of an accomplice's statement in the court must be found elsewhere and not in his confession, for an accomplice like an approver does not

---

68. Lal Chand v. State of Haryana, AIR 1984 SC 226; Bhiva Doulu Patil v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1963 SC 599.
69. Nathwa v. State, AIR 1951 All 452; In re : Mammadu, AIR 1951 Mad 737.
70. Saravana Bhavan and Govinda Swamy v. State of Madras, AIR 1966 SC 1273.
71. Kesar Singh v. State, AIR 1954 Punj 286 DB.
72. State v. Bhoora, AIR 1961 Raj 274; Dama alias Damodar Jena v. State, ILR 1969 Cut 265.
73. Kesar Singh v. State, AIR 1954 Punj 286.
74. Angom Kala Singh v. Manipur State, AIR 1953 Mani 2.
75. Magan Hema v. State, ILR (1972) Guj 910; Saravana Bhavan and Govinda Swamy v. State of Mysore, AIR 1966 SC 1273; Sarwan Singh Rattan Singh v. State of Punj., AIR 1957 SC 637.
76. Data Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1977 Cr LJ 1428.
77. Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66.
78. Kashmira Singh v. State of M P., AIR 1952 SC 159; Bhaluka Behera v. State, AIR 1957 Ori. 172.
79. Haroom Haji Abdulla v. State of Maharastra, AIR 1968 SC 832; Lexman Padma Bagat v. State, AIR 1965 Bom 195; Bhubon Sahu v. King, AIR 1949 PC 257; Haricharan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1184; Kashmira Singh v. State of M P., AIR 1952 SC 159; In re : Deivendran, 1996 Cr LJ 2209 (para 40) (Mad).
80. State v. Debnu, AIR 1957 HP 52.

corroborate himself. But his confession can certainly be referred to in order to show that his story related by him in the court has in its material particulars been throughout consistent.[81]

Where there is a single retracted confession corroborating other accomplice evidence, the caution must necessarily be still greater and the probative value smaller.[82]

Non-disclosure of the name of one accused person when questioned by police before he offered to confess, is not of much consequence when in the confessional statement he implicated himself and other accused persons.[83]

Number of witnesses

S. 134. No particular number of witnesses shall in any case be required for the proof of any fact.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1237
2. Single witness ... 1238
3. Sole witness—Corroborated by Confession ... 1240
4. Sole witness—Supported by Medical evidence ... 1240
5. Police officer ... 1240
6. Divorce cases ... 1240
7. Food Adulteration cases ... 1241
8. Unlawful assembly and riot ... 1241
9. Sexual offences ... 1241
10. Illustative cases where evidence of sole witness was relied on ... 1242
11. Illustrative cases where evidence of Sole witness was not relied on ... 1243

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that no particular number of witnesses shall be required in any case for proof of any fact.

See also commentary under the head "Number of witnesses" in Section 3.

BEST ON EVIDENCE (8th Ed., Sections 597, 598 P. 554 & 555) observed "Now we are by no means prepared to deny that under a system where the decision of all questions of law and fact is entrusted to a single judge or in a country where the standard of truth among the population is very low, such a rule may be a valuable security against the absue of power and the risk of perjury; but it is far otherwise where a high standard of truth prevails, and facts are tried by a jury directed and assisted by a judge. Add this that the anomaly of acting on the testimony of one person is more apparent than real; for the decision does not proceed solely on the story told by the witness, but on the moral conviction of its truth, based on its intrinsic probability and his manner of giving evidence."

In England, the general rule is the same as enacted by the present section[84] though there are certain exceptions where the testimony of a single witness is declared by Statute to be insufficient to prove a particular fact; e.g., in cases of treason[85] perjury[86] and personation at elections[87], the testimony of a single witness is insufficient. In certain other cases corroboration of the testimony of a single witness is required by Statute; e.g., in cases of breach of promise the testimony of the plaintiff must be corroborated to prove the promise[88], and in bastardy cases the mother's evidence must be corroborated.[89]

The Maxim under the English Law "Unus Nullus" (one is equal to none) was not followed in this section). But as a rule of caution and prudence in cases like perjury and in sexual cases the rule in English Law has been followed.[90]

---

81. Ranjha v. State, AIR 1951 HP 75; Nitai Chandra Jana v. Emperor, AIR 1937 Cal 433.
82. Haroom Haji v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 832; Sheshanna v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1970 SC 1330.
83. Ramprasad v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 Cr LJ 2889 (para 26) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 1969.
84. PHIPSON, Ev., 6th Ed., 484.
85. See Treasons Act, 1695, Sections 2 and 4.
86. See Perjury Act, 1911, Section 13.
87. See 6 & 7 Vict., c. 18, Section 88; 35 & 36 Vict., c. 33, Sections 24 and 37.
88. 32 & 33 Vict., c. 68, Section 2.
89. 8 & 9 Vict., c. 10, Section 6; 35 & 36 Vict., c. 65 Section 4.
90. Raj Lal Data v. State, AIR 1952 HP 1; Budhu Mian v. Emperor, AIR 1947 Pat 416.

Under the English Law in certain cases two witnesses are necessary, e.g., prosecution for perjury, treason etc. The Bombay High Court has laid down that in ordinary cases, and where the provisions peculiar to the Indian Law do not apply, the rule of English Law which is founded on substnatial justice may well serve as a safe guide to those who have to administer the criminal law in this country.[91]

The Court[92] should not leave the number of witnesses to be summoned to the whims and fancies of the party producing the witnesses. The Court has to apply its mind and restrict the number of witnesses to an extent which caters the requirement of the case. In determining the number of witnesses, a court should take into account the following guidelines:—

(a) Nature of litigation
(b) Number of issues required to be produced.
(c) Nature of the issues.
(d) The fact as to on whom the onus has been laid
(e) The specified purpose for which a particular witness is required to be produced. The party seeking to produce a witness is also required to specify the purpose for which the witness is proposed to be produced. Thus detailing out of a purpose is necessary requirement and in absence of that the Court will be within its limits to disallow summoning of that witness.

2. SINGLE WITNESS

The Supreme Court[93] observed:

"(1) As a general rule, a Court can and may act on the testimony of a single witness though uncorroborated, One credible witness outweighs the testimony of a number of other witness of indifferent character.

(2) Unless corroboration is insisted upon by statute, Courts should not insist on corroboration except in cases where the nature of the testimony of the single witness itself requires as a rule of prudence, that corroboration should be insisted upon, for example, in the case of a child witness, or of a witness whose evidence is that of an accomplice or of an analogous character.

(3) Whether corroboration of the testimony of a single witness is or is not necessary, must depend upon facts and circumstances of each case and no general rule can be laid down in a matter like this and much depends upon the judicial discretion of the judge before whom the case comes.

In view of these considerations, we have no hesitation in holding that the contention that in a murder case, the Court should insist upon plurality of witnesses, is much too broadly stated. Section 134 of the Indian Evidence Act, has categorically laid it down that "no particular number of witnesses shall, in any case, be required for the proof of any fact." The Legislature determined, as long ago as 1872, presumably after due consideration of the pros and cons, that it shall not be necessary for proof or disproof of a fact, to call any particular number of witnesses. In England, both before and after the passing of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, there have been a number of statutes as set out in SARKAR'S 'LAW OF EVIDENCE'—9th Edition, at pages 1100 and 1101, forbidding convictions on the testimony of a single witness. The Indian Legislature has not insisted on laying down any such exceptions to the general rule recognized in Section 134 quoted above. The section enshrines the well recognized maxim that "evidence has to be weighed and not counted". Our Legislature has given statutory recognition to the fact that administration of justice may be hampered if a particular number of witnesses were to be insisted upon. It is not seldom that a crime has been committed in the presence of only one witness, leaving aside those cases which are not of uncommon occurrence where determination of guilt depends entirely on circumstantial evidence. If the Legislature were to insist upon plurality of witnesses, cases where the testimony of a single witness only could be available in proof of the crime, would go unpunished. It is here that the discretion of the presiding judge comes into play. The matter thus must depend upon the circumstances of each case and the quality of the evidence of the single witness, whose testimony has to be either accepted or rejected. If such a testimony is found by the Court to be entirely reliable, there is no legal impediment to the conviction of the accused person on such proof. Even as the guilt of an accused person may be proved by the testimony of a single witness, the innocence of an accused person may be established on the testimony of a single witness, even though a considerable number of witnesses may be forthcoming to testify to the truth of the case for the prosecution. Hence, in our opinion, it is a sound and

---

91. PER JENKINS, C.J., in Emperor v. B.G. Tilak, (1904) 6 Bom LR 324, 339 : ILR 28 Bom 479.
92. Yashpal Sawhney v. Gandotra Traders, AIR 1996 J&K 32 (paras 7 and 9), following AIR 1983 SC 925.
93. Vadivelu Thevar v. State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 614 : 1957 SCJ 527.

well-established rule of law that the Court is concerned with the quality and not with the quantity of the evidence necessary for proving or disproving a fact.

Generally speaking oral testimony in this context may be classified into three categories, namely, (1) wholly reliable, (2) wholly unreliable and (3) neither wholly reliable nor wholly unreliable. In the first category of proof, the court should have no difficulty in coming to its conclusion either way—It may convict or may acquit on the testimony of a single witness, if it is found to be above reproach or suspicion of interestedness, incompetence or subordination. In the second category, the court equally has no difficulty in coming to its conclusion. It is in the third category of cases, that the court has to be circumspect and has to look for corroboration in material particulars by reliable testimony, direct or circumstantial. There is another danger in insisting on plurality of witnesses. Irrespective of the quality of the oral evidence of a single witness, if Courts were to insist on plurality of witnesses in proof of any fact, they will be indirectly encouraging subordination of witnesses. Situations may arise and do arise where only a single person is available to give evidence in support of a disputed fact. There are exceptions to this rule, for example, in cases of sexual offences or of the testimony of an approver; both these are cases in which the oral testimony is, by its very nature, suspect being that of a participator in crime But, where there are no such exceptional reasons operating, it becomes the duty of the court to convict, if it is satisfied that the testimony of a single witness is entirely reliable."

Where the deceased was strangled to death and there was only one eye-witness (P.W. 14) to the occurrence, the Supreme Court observed: "indeed, there can be no doubt that the evidence of a man like P.W. 14, should be scanned with much caution and we must be fully satisfied that he is a witness of truth, especially when no other person was present at the time to see the murder. Though he was not an accomplice, we would still want corroboration on material particulars in this particular case, as he is the only witness to the crime, and as it would be unsafe to hang four people on his sole testimony unless we feel convinced that he is speaking the truth....What the law requires is that there should be such corroboration of the material part of the story connecting the accused with the crime as will satisfy reasonable minds that the man can be regarded as a truthful witness."[94] In Vadivelu Thevar v. State of Madras,[95] the Supreme Court referred to this decision and distinguished on the ground that the court insisted on corroboration of the testimony of a single witness not on the ground that his was the only evidence but on the ground that his evidence was analagous to that of an accomplice in the peculiar circumstances of the case. In Ramrathan v. State of Rajasthan[96] relying on Vadivelu Thewar v. State of Madras[97], the Supreme Court reiterated the principle that as a general rule the court may act on the testimony of a single witness, though uncorroborated unless circumstances of a particular case where the nature of the testimony of the single witness itself requires as a rule of prudence, that corroboration should be insisted upon and that the question whether corroboration of the testimony of a single witness was or was not necessary, must depend upon facts and circumstances of each case. There is no hard and fast rule and in each case the court has to consider whether it can be reasonably satisfied to act even upon the testimony of a single witness for the purpose of convicting the person.[98]

---

94. Satyanarayan Reddy v. State of Hyd., AIR 1956 SC 379.
95. AIR 1957 SC 614.
96. AIR 1962 SC 424.
97. AIR 1957 SC 614.
98. Badri v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1976 SC 560; Maqsoodan v. State of U.P., AIR 1983 SC 126 (Neither the number of witnesses nor the quantity of evidence is material. It is the quality that matters); Kunharu v. State of Kerala, 1964 Mad LJ (Cri) 334 : 1963 Ker LT 325; Sathya Vir v. State of U.P., AIR 1958 All 746; Kochan Velayudhan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1961 Ker 8; Ram Bux v. State, 1961 MPLJ (Notes); Chhota Singh v. State, ILR 1957 Cut 642; Daya Singh v. State, ILR 1969-19 Raj 317; State v. Rambali, AIR 1953 All 163; State v. Dasurath Lahanu Kadu, (1973) 75 Bom LR; Apren Joseph v. State of Kerala, 1972 Cr LJ 1162 : ILR (1971) 2 Ker 381 (Ker); Kanaran v. State, ILR (1972) 1 Ker 476; Municipal Corporation Delhi v. J.B. Bottling Co. Pvt. Ltd., 1978 Cr LJ 1149 (MP); Israful Seikh v. State of Bihar, 1978 BLJ 381 (Pat) : 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 240; Balraj Singh v. State of Punjab, 1976 Cr LJ 1471 (P&H); Maqsoodan v. State, 1982 All LJ 1524 : AIR 1983 SC 126; Kewala Shankar v. State, 1985 All LJ 1216 (DB); Ganpat Hiraman v. State of Maharashtra, ILR 1976 Bom 464; Prabakar Behara v. State of Orissa, (1984) 58 Cut LT 42 : 1985 Cr LJ (NOC) 6; Lechha v. State of Rajasthan, 1977 Raj LW 153 : 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 112; Binder Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1984 Raj LR 285 (DB) : 1984 Cr LJ (NOC) 178; Appukuttan v. State of Kerala, 1989 Cr LJ 2362 (Ker); Ramashish Rai v. State of Bihar, 1989 Cr LJ 336 (Pat); State of Orissa v. Dillip Kumar Chand, 1987 Cr LJ 1242 (Ori); Rameshwar v. State of U.P., 1987 Cr LJ 442 (All); Mahipal Pur Co-op., Society Ltd. v. Prabhati (Smt.), AIR 1986 Del 94; Malik Abdul Salam v. State of Orissa, 1985 Cr LJ 1871; State of Maharashtra v. Raju Dadaba Borge, 2001 Cr LJ 3638 (para 11) (Bom).

When the case rests on the testimony of the sole eye-witness, it should be wholly reliable.[1] Conviction can be based on the occular account of a solitary witness.[2] When the evidence of the eye-witness was acceptable, mere non-examination of another person (her eight year old son sleeping in the room of occurrence) was not fatal.[3] Though the evidence of the sole eye-witness should be scrutinised with greater care and caution, yet if it is creditworthy, conviction can be based thereon.[4]

It is open to a final Court of fact to believe or disbelieve a statement, but simply because statement is of one witness that cannot by itself be a ground for not acting upon that testimony.[5]

3. SOLE WITNESS—CORROBORATED BY CONFESSION

The single prosecution witness stated about the recovery of non-duty paid ganja from the possession of the accused. His evidence was corroborated by the confessional statement recorded by another prosecution witness. It was held conviction based on solitory evidence supported by confession is sufficient.[6]

4. SOLE WITNESS—SUPPORTED BY MEDICAL EVIDENCE

When the evidence of single eye-witness was corroborated by medical testimony, it would be sufficient to base the conviction.[7]

5. POLICE OFFICER

There is no law which requires the Sub-Inspector's evidence, like that of an accomplice, to be corroborated in material particulars, before it can be acted upon. His evidence has to be treated like that of any other material witness.[8]

6. DIVORCE CASES

Under Section 7 of the Indian Divorce Act, it was held that the English rule is to be applied in India and the uncorroborated testimony of the wife or the husband should not be accepted under Section 7 of the Divorce Act.[9]

In Fairman v. F[10], it was held that an adulterer when he/she gives evidence is an accomplice whose evidence requires corroboration.[11]

Under the Hindu Marriage Act, in a petition for judicial separation, it was held that the test is qualitative and not quantitative and corroboration is not a matter of law but a matter of precaution and prudence and every case has to be decided on its merits whether it requires corroboration or not.[12]

In a petition by the husband for dissolution of marriage under Section 10 of the Divorce Act on the ground of wife's adultery and desertion, both the respondents remained ex parte and the petitioner alone gave evidence. It was held that his evidence is sufficient to grant the relief.[13] In the case of paternity of a child, it was held that it is the trial court to find out whether the evidence of the mother alone on the facts

---

1. Kathi Odhabhai Bhimabhai v. State of Gujarat, 1993 Cr LJ 187 (para 4) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 1193.
2. Shyamrao Vishnu Patil v. State of Maharashtra, 1998 Cr LJ 3446 (para 10-A) (Bom).
3. Jinnat Mia v. State of Assam, AIR 1998 SC 533.
4. Islam-ud-din v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 2613 (Del), relying on Kartik Malhar v. State of Bihar, (1995) 8 JT (SC) 425 : 1995 AIR SCW 4540 : 1996 Cr LJ 889 (SC).
5. Ram Nath v. Extra Assistant Commissioner, Jabalpur, ILR (1953) Nag 361.
6. 1957 BLJR 149.
7. Choota Singh v. State, ILR 1957 Cut 642; Radhakishan v. State of Rajasthan, 1973 Cr LJ 481 (Raj); Nandeswar Kalita v. State of Assam, 1983 Cr LJ 1515 (Gau); (sole child witness); Vahula Bhushan v. State of T.N., AIR 1989 SC 236.
8. 1957 Mad WN 615.
9. Payne v. P., 42 MLJ 526 (FB); Pendurthi v. P. 43 MLJ 441 (FB); Premchand v. Hira, AIR 1927 Bom 594.
10. (1949) 1 All ER 939.
11. Galler v. Galter, (1954) 1 All ER 536.
12. Saptami Sarkar v. Jagadish Sarkar, ILR (1970) 1 Cal 272.
13. Antoniswamy v. Anna Manikam, AIR 1970 Mad 91.

and circumstances of the case could be believed, and there is no rule that it should be corroborated.[14] In a wife's petition for nullity or marriage on the ground of husband's incapacity, corroboration is not essential to the testimony of the wife, if it is reliable.[15]

7. FOOD ADULTERATION CASES

A fact can be proved by the evidence of a single witness namely the Food Inspector.[16] Evidence of Food Inspector alone about the purchase of sample food stuff is sufficient and it need not be disbelieved merely because the receipt bore no seal of the shop as attesting witness turned hostile.[17]

It is not safe to maintain a conviction on the sole testimony of the witness who made a false statement regarding the implication of the co-accused, or when it does not inspire confidence.[18]

8. UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLY AND RIOT

The testimony of one single witness, if wholly reliable, is sufficient to establish the identification of the accused as a member of an unlawful assembly. However, when the size of unlawful assembly is quite large and many persons would have witnessed the incident, it would be prudent to insist on at least two reliable witnesses for the identification of the accused.[19] In rioting and similar type of cases, it would be extremely hazardous to convict on the testimony of a single eye-witness. In such cases, the rule of prudence requires that the Courts should insist on plurality of eye-witness account.[20]

The Allahabad High Court has held that in communal riot cases it is unsafe to convict on the evidence of one witness alone, unless there is satisfactory circumstantial evidence in addition.[21] Where attacks and counter-attacks by two factions in a locality, created terror in the minds of the people living there, the prosecution examined some witnesses of the locality. It was held that as there was no evidence to show that any person other than the witnesses examined had seen the occurrence, the contention that the prosecution did not examine other witnesses of the locality could not be sustained. It is the quality of the evidence and not the number of witnesses that matters in such case.[22]

9. SEXUAL OFFENCES

In cases of rape no principle of law forbids a conviction on the victim's uncorroborated testimony, though she is wanting in chastity, if the jury are satisfied with the truth. However, the jury and the court should diligently guard themselves from the undue sympathy for the victim.[23]

The Supreme Court held that in sexual offence corroboration is not essential before conviction. As the victim of the rape cannot be treated as an accomplice it needs no corroboration. But depending on the circumstances of the case as a matter of prudence, corroboration may be required.[24] It was held by the Supreme Court that there are exceptions to the rule that conviction can be based on the solitary testimony of the witness, for e.g., in cases of sexual offences or of testimony of an approver, in which, testimony of the witness is, by its very nature suspect being that of a participator in crime.[25] The court reiterated the principle that the victim of rape is not an accomplice and requires no corroboration though in some cases as a rule of prudence corroboration may be required.[26]

---

14. (1970) 1 MLJ (Cri) 207.
15. Suvarnabahen v. Rashmikantt, AIR 1970 Guj 43.
16. Chairman Suri Municipality v. Sisir Kumar Ghosh, ILR (1961) 2 Cal 257; Public Prosecutor v. Sub-ban Chettiar, (1970) 1 MLJ 402; Conviction can be based on the sole testimony of food inspector if it is trustworthy; P.P. v. Marappan, 1980 Mad LJ (Cri) 256.
17. State v. Appuswami, 1980 Mad LJ (Cri) 734 : 1980 Cr LJ (Noc) 168 (Mad).
18. Pritam Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 FAC 356 (Punj); Amar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1980) 2 FAC 344 (Punj).
19. Binay Kumar Singh v. State of Bihar, 1997 Cr LJ 362 : AIR 1997 SC 322.
20. Babu Hamidkhan Mestry v. State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 2355 (paras 10 and 11) (Bom), following Masalti v. State of U.P., 1965 (1) Cr LJ 226 : AIR 1965 SC 202.
21. Emperor v. Ujagar, ILR (1933) 55 All 639.
22. Appukuttan v. State of Kerala, 1989 Cr LJ 2362 (Ker)(DB).
23. Boddie v. S., (1875) 52 Ala 395 (as per BRICKELL C.J.)
24. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State, AIR 1952 SC 54 following R v. Baskerville, (1916) 2 KB 658.
25. Vadivelu Thevar v. State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 614.
26. Siddeshwar v. State of W.B., AIR 1958 SC 143. See also Shamsher Bahadur v. State of Bihar, AIR 1956 Pat 404; State v. Sheodayal, AIR 1956 Nag 8.

The unsworn testimony of a minor girl aged 12 years was accepted, and the accused was convicted without any corroboration.[27]

In cases of rape or abduction the court has to satisfy itself that the victim is telling the truth and that the accused was not falsely implicated. As a matter of prudence corroboration may be required.[28] In a rape case, it was found that the girl had intimacy with a prostitute who was connected with the accused and also had intercourse before. It is in that case it was held that it was unsafe and dangerous to act upon the uncorroborated testimony of the girl without corroboration.[29] The rule of law is not that the testimony of a child witness cannot be believed in any circumstance unless it is corroborated by other evidence. Before passing a conviction on the sole testimony of a child witness as a rule of caution it may require corroboration.[30]

10. ILLUSTATIVE CASES WHERE EVIDENCE OF SOLE WITNESS WAS RELIED ON

Where there are no exceptional reasons, it is the duty of the Court to convict if it is satisfied that the testimony of a single witness is entirely reliable, without corroboration.[31] One credible witness outweighs the testimony of a number of other witnesses of doubtful veracity. If the testimony of a single witness is found to be entirely reliable on scanning the evidence, there is no legal impediment to the conviction of the accused on such evidence.[32] Even the evidence of a single witness can sustain the conviction of an accused person if the court which saw and heard him depose, regards him as a witness of truth.[33] It is open to the court to rest its finding on the solitary testimony of a witness whom it found to be credible even if the witness had a personal interest in the litigation.[34] Where an accused voluntarily caused seven stab injuries on the person of the complainant and the prosecution witness turned hositle, it was held, when the credibility of the complainant was not shaken in the cross-examination, the accused could be held guilty.[35] When the evidence of the solitary witness is found to be cogent and trustworthy and the medical evidence corroborated his testimony, conviction would be proper even in a murder case on the basis of his evidence.[36] When the evidence is convincing and consistent and unimpeachable, conviction can be based on the solitary testimony of a witness.[37] It is not necessary to prove a fact that a number of witnesses should assert it; proof of a fact would depend upon the character of the witness and the competency to speak to that fact; it is the assurance or persuasiveness of the evidence which alone inspires a judicial mind to put any reliance on the testimony.[38] It is the acceptability of the evidence that matters and not the numerical sufficiency of witnesses. Conviction can be based on the evidence of sole

---

27. Lalaram v. State of M.P., AIR 1960 MP 59.
28. Gurcharan v. State of Haryana, AIR 1972 SC 2661; Madho Ram v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 469.
29. Surendra v. R., 38 Cal WN 52; see also R. v. Banu Bai Ardeshir, AIR 1943 Bom 150; Motiram v. State of M.P., AIR 1955 Nag 121.
30. State v. Jan Mohammad, 1981 All LJ 367.
31. Vadivelu Thebar v. State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 614; Badri v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1976 SC 560; Satyavir v. State, AIR 1958 All 746; Kochan Velayuddham v. State of Kerala, AIR 1961 Ker 8; Rupa Saura v. State, ILR (1969) Cut 253 : 1969 CLT 175; Pema Dukpa v. State of Sikkim, 1981 Cr LJ 276; Balraj Singh v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 1471 (P&H).
32. Kunharu v. State of Kerala, 1964 Mad LJ (Cri) 334 : 1963 Ker LT 325.
33. Baleshwar Rai v. State of Bihar, 1963- 2 SCR 433 : 1964-1 Cr LJ 564 (SC); Ganpat Hiraman v. State of Maharashtra, ILR 1976 Bom 464; State v. Ramaswamy, 1983 Mad LW (Cri) 59 : 1983 Cr LJ (NOC) 178.
34. Shiv Singh Rakha Das v. Jiwan Dass, AIR 1958 Punj 164; Narayana Pillai v. State of Kerala, 1968 Cr LJ 1362 (Ker); (witness-a soda vendor); Israful Seikh v. State of Bihar, 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 240 : 1978 BLJ 381 (Pat); Gaj Raj Singh v. State, (1985) 1 Crimes 895 (Del).
35. Gaj Raj Singh v. State, (1985) 1 Crimes 895 (Del).
36. Vahula Bhushan v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1989 SC 236. See also Badnayina Bheemanna v. State of A.P., 1996 Cr LJ 3095 (paras 11 and 12) (AP).
37. Mulkhraj v. State, 1969 Cr LJ 94 (Punj); Pravakar Behara v. State of Orissa, (1984) 58 Cut LT 42 : 1985 Cr LJ (NOC) 6; Sidha Dehury v. State of Orissa, 1982 Cr LJ 500 : (1981) 52 Cut LT 512; Madkami Baja v. State of Orissa, 1986 Cr LJ 433; Ramachandra Jena v. State of Orissa, (1984) 58 Cut LT 155 : 1985 Cr LJ (NOC) 64; Madan Naik v. State of Orissa, 1983 Cr LJ (NOC) 47 (Ori); Nemai Mondal v. State of W.B., AIR 1966 Cal 194; unimpeachable evidence of sole eye-witness, wife of deceased, can form basis of conviction, Kanhaisingh Nayak v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 2812 (para 6) (Ori); S.G. Gundegowda v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 852 (para 21) (Kant); Kartik Malhar v. State of Bihar, 1996 Cr LJ 889 (para 6) (SC) : (1995) 8 JT (SC) 425 : 1995 AIR SCW 4540.
38. Madhabananda Mohapatra v. Rabindranath Misra, AIR 1954 Ori 40. Evidence is weighed and not counted, Barkau v. State of U.P., 1993 Cr LJ 2954 (para 23) (All); Surendra Narain v. State of U.P., AIR 1998 SC 192 : 1998 Cr LJ 359. Quality of evidence matter and not quantity, Poolin Haldar v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 513 (para 25) (Cal).

witness. Therefore, mere non-examination of some persons does not affect the credibility of the prosecution case.[39]

When the evidence of a single witness inspires confidence and is corroborated by other evidence on the record, the single testimony is not to be discarded.[40] Consistent and corroborated testimony of sole eye-witness cannot be discarded for the mere fact that the witness could not be confronted by defence.[41] Where of four eye-witnesses, three had turned hostile, conviction could be based on the corroborated evidence of the fourth one.[42] In the case of solitary witness, what is to be borne in mind is whether it would be safe to place implicit reliance on the testimony of such witness.[43] If the evidence of the solitary witness is unblemished and beyond all possible criticism and the court is satisfied that he was speaking truth, it is sufficient to base a conviction.[44] In a case the wife was the sole witness for the murder of her husband and son. The trial court rejected her evidence as she was an interested witness and for want of corroboration. It was held that when the presence of the wife of the deceased was admitted by the accused the trial court was wrong in rejecting her evidence; that a close relation would be the last to screen the real culprit and falsely implicate an innocent person.[45] Where the part of the evidence of the eye-witness was liable to be rejected but the remaining evidence relating to the incident inspired confidence in his credibility, conviction was upheld.[46]

11. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES WHERE EVIDENCE OF SOLE WITNESS WAS NOT RELIED ON

The question of corroboration arises only in regard to a witness who is neither wholly reliable nor wholly unreliable in which case the court should be circumspect.[47] Where there are inherent inconsistencies in the evidence of the wife of the deceased, the sole eye-witness in the case, it cannot be considered sufficient to find the accused guilty.[48] Where the solitary witness to a murder who was closely related to the accused claimed to know the accused, but his evidence showed that he was a stranger to the accused, it was held that such evidence cannot be relied and the accused is entitled to the acquittal.[49] If the only witness to prove a charge of murder can modulate his evidence to suit a particular prosecution theory for the deleberate purpose of securing a conviction, no conviction can be based on his testimony.[50] Where the solitary witness remained quiet for about six months without giving information about the incident on the ground that he was threatened by the accused, it was held it is unsafe to base the conviction for murder on such solitary testimony.[51] The testimony of only one eye-witness was held insufficient in a murder case where the occurrence took place in broad day-light and was seen by a large number of persons.[52] Where the sole witness failed to identify an accused in an earlier identification parade, but identified in a subsequent parade, it was held that the conduct of the witness showed that he was unreliable, and so conviction could not be based on the sole testimony of such witness.[53]

---

39. Kedar Behera v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 378 (para 8) (Ori). Non-examination of independent witnesses from vicinity not material, Munshi Prasad v. State of Bihar, 2001 Cr LJ 4708 (para 11) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 3031.
40. Ramashish Rai v. State of Bihar, 1989 Cr LJ 336 (Pat). Evidence of solitary eye-witness, corroborated by other evidence, inspiring implicit confidence, conviction could be sustained on such evidence, Gopal Mahadeo Tambada v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 Cr LJ 2425 (Bom). Also see Ramesh Bhagwan Manjrekar v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 Cr LJ 796 (Bom). See also Lalya Dharma Khadkya v. State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 564 (para 10) (Bom).
41. Ram Vilas v. State of M.P., 1993 Cr LJ 3251 (para 5) (SC).
42. Ganpat Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 1466 (paras 17, 24 and 25) (Raj).
43. Gaital v. State, 1988 Cr LJ 960 (All).
44. Chandra Sekharan v. State, 1987 Cr LJ 1715 (Ker).
45. Chellammal v. Packiam, 1976 Cr LJ 1666 (Mad), following Vadivelu Thevar v. State of Madras, AIR 1957 SC 614 and Darya Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1965 SC 328; see also (1985) 1 Ori L. Rev 117 (widow of the deceased); Dhouba Padhan v. State, (1983) 56 Cut LT 251; (mother of the deceased) (note: Section 3 cases under Near Relations); Mangal Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1985 Cr LJ 602 (Raj); (15 years old daughter against her father).
46. Barla Ganga Reddy v. State of A.P., 1993 Cr LJ 1998 (AP).
47. Dinkar Bandhu Deshmukh v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1970 Bom 439.
48. Ramji Surjya v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1983 SC 810 : (1983) 2 SCJ 20 : 1983 Cr LJ 105.
49. State of U.P. v. Satish Chandra, AIR 1986 SC 313.
50. Badri v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1976 SC 560.
51. Mahadeo v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1980 SC 102; reversing the decision of Bombay High Court.
52. 1957 All WR (HC) 48.
53. Gofur Shiekh v. State, 1984 Cr LJ 559 (Cal)(DB).

Where a search under the Arms Act was conducted, it was held that the solitary testimony of the Investigating Officer cannot form the basis of conviction.[54] Where there was evidence that besides the solitary witness, there were 14 or 15 persons who rushed to the scene of occurrence amongst whom there were independent persons not connected with the deceased or the accused, it was held conviction could not be based on the single testimony of an eye-witness.[55] Where the evidence of the sole witness was that the accused was seen by him running away with husking rod (not sharp or semi-sharp weapon) and the evidence of the doctor conducting postmortem was that the injury on the head was a cut injury caused by sharp or semi-sharp weapon but not by a blunt weapon, it was held that the solitory testimony of the witness cannot be relied and the accused cannot be convicted.[56] When the sole eye-witness is found not reliable accused has to be acquitted.[57] Where the eye-witness of the assault on the deceased omitted vital details in the F.I.R. relating to the manner of assault, his version was not worthy of credence and it could be said that he was falsely introduced as eye-witness.[58] Where the plea of alibi of the accused was acceptable, he could not be convicted on the lone testimony of the witness particularly when his name was not mentioned in the F.I.R. or during inquest.[59] Where the single eye-witness was the brother of the deceased and the evidence revealed that his presence in the village was highly improbable, it was held that his evidence is not reliable or trustworthy.[60] Where a Criminal Court has to deal with evidence pertaining to the commission of an offence involving a large number of offenders and a large number of victims, it is usual to adopt the test that the conviction could be sustained only if it is supported by two or three or more witnesses who give a consistent account of the incident.[61] In dacoity cases conviction should not be based on identification by a sole witness.[62]

---

54. Islamuddin v. State of Delhi, 1975 Cr LJ 841 (Del).
55. Manik Malakar v. State of Assam, 1976 Cr LJ 1921 Gau.
56. Mudhan Paying v. State of Assam, 1982 Cr LJ 241 Gau.
57. Malik Abdul Salem v. State of Orissa, 1985 Cr LJ 1871 Ori.
58. Govind Narain v. State of Rajasthan, 1993 Cr LJ 2598 (para 6) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 2457.
59. Nallamsetty Yanadaiah v. State of A P., 1993 Cr LJ 408 (para 7) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 1175.
60. Balraj Singh v. State of Punjab, 1976 Cr LJ 1471 Punj.
61. Masalti v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1965 SC 202 : (1965) 1 SCJ 665 : (1965) 1 Cr LJ 226.
62. Wakil Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1981 SC 1392; Dhruba Charan Lenka v. State of Orissa, 1984 Cr LJ 769 Ori; Chandra Pal v. State, AIR 1954 All 684.

CHAPTER X

OF THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES

Order of production and examination of witnesses

S. 135. The order in which witnesses are produced and examined shall be regulated by the law and practice for the time being relating to civil and criminal procedure respectively, and, in the absence of any such law, by the discretion of the Court.

COMMENTS

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1245
2. Civil Cases ... 1245
3. Examination on Commission ... 1246
4. Examining the opposite party as a witness ... 1246
5. Power of court to order a witness to be outside court ... 1247
6. Criminal proceedings ... 1247
7. Material Witness ... 1248

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that the order in which the witnesses are to be produced and examined shall be regulated by the rules of law and practice relating to civil and criminal proceedings. It also states that, in the absence of any rules and practice, the court has got the discretion to regulate the order in which the witnesses are to be produced and examined.[1]

In civil proceedings the order is to be regulated by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code; and in criminal proceedings, by those of the Criminal Procedure Code. Failing these, the order is to be determined by the discretion of the Court. In practice, however, it is left largely to the option of the party calling witnesses to examine them in any order he chooses.

The court is very slow to interfere with the discretion of counsel as to the order in which witnesses should be examined.[2] While counsel has discretion, the Court has also the power to direct the order in which witnesses cited by the party shall be examined.[3]

2. CIVIL CASES

Order XVIII, Rule 1, C.P.C., states that the plaintiff has the right to begin unless the defendant has admitted the facts alleged by the plaintiff and contends that either in point of law or on some additional facts alleged by the defendant, the plaintiff is not entitled to any part of the relief, which he seeks, in which case the defendant has the right to begin. Order XVIII, Rule 2, C.P.C. states that, on the day fixed for hearing of the suit, or on any other day to which the hearing is adjourned, the party having the right to begin shall state his case and produce his evidence. Sub-rule (4) to rule 2 was added in the new C.P.C. of 1976, enabling the court to direct or permit any party to examine any witness at any stage, for the reasons to be recorded by the court. Similarly, Rule 3(a) was included in Order XVIII, stating that where a party himself wishes to appear as a witness, he shall so appear before any other witness on his behalf has been examined, unless the court, for reasons to be recorded, permits him to appear as his own witness at a later stage. Order XVIII, Rule 3, C.P.C. says that where there are several issues, the burden of proving some of which lies on the other party, the party beginning may, at his option, either produce his evidence on those issues or reserve it by way of answer to the evidence produced by the other party.

---

1. Gopessur v. Bissessur, 39 Cal 245; Achyutana Pitchaiah Sarma v. Chinna, AIR 1961 AP 420.
2. Per STANLEY, J. in Kedar Nath Ghose v. Bhupendra Nath Bose, (1900) 5 CWN XV.
3. In the goods of Gopessur Dutt, (1911) 16 CWN 265.

It is sometime said that, as the plaintiff is the party who brings the case into court, it is natural that he should be first heard with his complaint; and in one sense of the word, the plaintiff always begins; for without a single exception, the pleadings are opened by him or his counsel, and never by the defendant or his consel. But, as it is agreed on all hands that the order of proving depends on the burden of proof, if it appears on the statement of the pleadings that the plaintiff has nothing to prove,—that defendant had admitted every fact alleged, and takes on himself to prove something, which will defeat the plaintiff's claim,—he ought to be allowed to begin, as the burden of proof then lies on him.[4] The authorities on the subject present almost a chaos. This much only is certain that, if the onus of proving the issues or any one of the issues however numerous they may be, lies on the plaintiff, he is entitled to begin,[5] and it seems that, if the onus of proving all the issues lies on the defendant, and the damages which the plaintiff could legally recover are either nominal or mere matter of computation, here also the defendant may begin.

A party need not be the first witness in the suit.[6]

Where a plaintiff files a suit on the basis of a sale deed, but the defendant contends that it is a mortgage, as it is for the defendant to prove the same, he will have the right to adduce evidence first.[7]

When the plaintiff alleged that a particular document was brought into existence by fraud or misappropriation it is for him to prove the allegation. So the plaintiff has to begin his case. He cannot be allowed till after the evidence of the defendant, to place his evidence as a rebuttal evidence.[8]

3. EXAMINATION ON COMMISSION

In both civil and criminal proceedings witnesses may be examined on commission, where evidently the same rules will apply respectively.[9] Evidence taken on commission is later put on the record of the case.[10]

Though a witness is examined on commission under Order XXVI, Rule 8, C.P.C. when the witness is proved to be too ill to give his evidence in court, or his absence is for sufficient reason; the evidence so recorded by the commissioner should only be permitted to be used at the trial. No mode of procedure can be more unsatisfactory than that of following the principal defendant to give his evidence before the plaintiff's case has been opened or the evidence of his witnesses has been given.[11]

4. EXAMINING THE OPPOSITE PARTY AS A WITNESS

In Lal Kunwar v. Chrianji Lal[12]; LORD ATKINSON condemened such practices and described it as a vicious practice, unworthy of a high toned or reputable system of advocacy. The party has no right to summon the opposite party as a witness.[13]

Gurbaksh Singh v. Gurdial Singh, 1927 PC 230 at 233 (degrading practice). If a party, however, is permitted to examine the opposite party as his own witness, it has been held that the court should be careful not to allow him to cross-examine his own witness, because unless the witness is declared hostile; the party producing the wintness has no right to cross-examine his own witness.[14]

"If a party appears as a witness on behalf of the opposing party, the court should, before proceeding to record his statement, question him or his counsel as to whether he does not propose to appear as his own witness. If that party then declares that he does not propose to appear as his own witness, the court

---

4. See Order 18 Rr-1-3, C.P.C. 1908.
5. Wood v. Pringle, 1 Moo & R 277; Curtis v. Wheeler, 4 C&P 196.
6. 1970 All WR (HC) 236.
7. Nabakumar v. Haridas Singh, AIR 1960 Manipur 11.
8. Rashidunnissa v. Ata Rasool, AIR 1958 All 67.
9. See Civil Procedure Code, Order. XXVI, Rr. 1-8; Criminal Procedure Code, Ss. 284-288.
10. Kusum Kumari Roy v. Satyaranjan Das, ILR (1903) 30 Cal 999; Man Gobinda Choudhuri v. Shashindra Chandra Chowdhuri, ILR (1907) 35 Cal 28.
11. Satish Chandra v. Satish Kantha, AIR 1923 PC 73; see also Mahim v. Nabha, AIR 1927 Cal 43; Phanindra v. Pramatha, 32 Cal WN 128.
12. ILR 32 All 104 (PC).
13. Ebrahim Kunju v. Shahabudeen, 1969 Mad LJ (Cri) 303 : 1969 Ker LT 170.
14. Puran Singh v. Mathra Das, AIR 1934 Lah 126.

should point out to the party producing him that ordinarly speaking the matter should be left as it is and the court be left to draw any adverse inference which may justifiably be drawn from such refusal. If the party, however, insists on examining the opposite party as his own witness the court should not allow him to cross-examine his own witness."[15]

5. POWER OF COURT TO ORDER A WITNESS TO BE OUTSIDE COURT

Neither the Evidence Act nor the Codes of Civil and Criminal Procedure contain any section or rule for ordering witnesses out of court. However, the court has power to order unexamined witnesses out of court at any time during the trial on the application of either party.

Under Section 135, the order in which witness are to be produced and examined shall be regulated by the law and practice for the time being relating to the civil and criminal procedure respectively, and, in the absence of any such law, by the discretion of the Court. Since, the court has the power to prescribe the order in which witnesses are to be examined, where a party is also a witness, the court can require him to give evidence before he examines his other witnesses. If he is not willing to do so, the court can order him out of court hall, when his other witnesses are giving evidence. When a party himself is conducting a case without the aid of the counsel, he can examine himself first and then examine his witnesses. It is undoubtedly true that a party to the litigation has got the right to remain in court while the trial of the suit is going on. And it is equally well-established that the court has got inherent power to order any person, who has given evidence, out of the court hall when other witnesses are being examined, until that person is called to give evidence. The court has to consider whether the claim made by one party to exclude the other party from the court is well-founded and also to consider the objections of the other party.[16]

Where a witness disobeys the order to be out of the court hall, he is guilty of contempt[17]; but his evidence cannot be excluded though the weight to be attached to his testimony will be a matter for consideration.[18]

If the witness is present in court, he should be asked to go out when the evidence of other witnesses is being recorded. If this could not be done, because his presence was not noticed, the court should examine him and record his statement with a note that he was present in court when other witnesses were being examined. But, there is no justification in law for cancellation of his evidence; the court should consider what value should be attached to the testimony of such a witness, who was present when the other witnesses were examined.[19]

But this practice of excluding the presence of witnesses from the court when other witnesses are being examined need not be rigidly applied in the case of the investigating police officer, though the criminal court has always the power to direct that a witness who is to be examined in the case should not be in court, till he is examined, when the evidence of other witnesses is being recorded.[20]

6. CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

In criminal proceedings, the complainant or the prosecutor, as the case may be, has the right to begin and, if necessary, the accused is asked to adduce his evidence in defence. The trial before a Magistrate may be (a) in summons cases (Criminal Procedure Code, Ss. 251-258), or (b) in warrant cases instituted by the Police, S. 238; otherwise than on Police report (Ss. 244-249) or (c) summary (S. 260). Where a trial takes place before a Court of Session, or High Court, the procedure is laid down in Section 226, et seq of the Criminal Procedure Code is followed. Where the evidence on record was sufficient to prove the case beyond doubt, mere non-examination of one or some of the witnesses was held be not fatal.[21]

---

15. FIELD ON EVIDENCE 11th Edn. p. 4765. citing Puran Singh v. Mathra Das, AIR 1934 Lah 126.
16. Pitchaiah Sarma v. Chinna, AIR 1961 AP 420. See also Dr. Kasi Ayyar v. State of Kerala, AIR 1996 Ker 316 (in a ciminal case); Nathu Singh v. Crown, AIR 1925 Nag 296; Lalmani v. Bejai Ram, AIR 1934 All 840; Subh Karan Singh v. Kedarnath, AIR 1941 All 314.
17. Cobbet v. Hudson, 1 E&B 14.
18. Subh Karan v. Kedarnath, AIR 1941 All 314; relying on Chandler v. Horne, (1842) 2 M & Rob 423.
19. State v. Sohan Singh, 1955 Cr LJ 814 : AIR 1955 MB 78.
20. Tata Tea Ltd. v. State of Kerala, 1984 Ker LJ 402.
21. Niranjan Shil v. State of Tripura, 1999 Cr LJ 4498 (para 25) (Gau).

7. MATERIAL WITNESS

Material witnesses are to be examined unless allegations are made that they will not speak truth. Thus where in a murder case, according to the prosecution story, a villager who came on the murder spot hearing cries of the son of the deceased and helped him in pulling out the weapon of offence from the chest of the deceased and further carried him to his house was not examined in view of the evidence of the son of the deceased stating that the said villager had joined hands with the accused persons and had taken oath not to depose against, failure to examine him would not vitiate the prosecution.[22]

Judge to decide as to admissibility of evidence.

S. 136. When either party proposes to give evidence of any fact, the Judge may ask the party proposing to give the evidence in what manner the alleged fact, if proved, would be relevant; and the Judge shall admit the evidence if he thinks that the fact, if proved, would be relevant, and not otherwise.

If the fact proposed to be proved is one of which evidence is admissible only upon proof of some other fact, such last-mentioned fact must be proved before evidence is given of the fact first mentioned, unless the party undertakes to give proof of such fact, and, the Court is satisfied with such undertaking.

If the relevancy of one alleged fact depends upon another alleged fact being first proved, the Judge may, in his discretion, either permit evidence of the first fact to be given before the second fact is proved, or require evidence to be given of the second fact before evidence is given of the first fact.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) It is proposed to prove a statement about a relevant fact by a person alleged to be dead, which statement is relevant under Section 32.

The fact that the person is dead must be proved by the person proposing to prove the statement, before evidence is given of the statement.

(b) It is proposed to prove, by a copy, the contents of a document said to be lost.

The fact that the original is lost must be proved by the person proposing to produce the copy, before the copy is produced.

(c) A is accused of receiving stolen property knowing it to have been stolen.

It is proposed to prove that he denied the possession of the property.

The relevancy of the denial depends on the identity of the property. The Court may, in its discretion, either require the property to be identified before the denial of the possession is proved, or permit the denial of the possession, to be proved before the property is identified.

(d) It is proposed to prove a fact (A) which is said to have been the cause or effect of a fact in issue. There are several intermediate facts (B, C and D) which must be shown to exist before the fact (A) can be regarded as the cause or effect of the fact in issue. The Court may either permit A to be proved before B, C and D is proved, or may require proof of B, C and D before permitting proof of A.

COMMENTS

This section embodies three cardinal rules as to the admissibility of evidence.

Though proper time for objecting to the admissibility of a document is when it is tendered, mere omission to so object does not constitute an inadmissible document, evidence. Party seeking to put a document in evidence must show under which section it is admissible. Improper admission or rejection of evidence will not by itself form a ground for a new trial or reversal of a decision, if, in view of the other evidence in the case, the decision would be the same even if there had been no such improper admission or rejection.[23]

---

22. Bishu Sethi v. State of Orissa, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 246 (Ori).
23. Dwijesh Chandra Ray Chaudhuri v. Naresh Chandra Gupta, ILR (1946) 1 Cal 149

Illus. (c) & (d) under this section explain para 3 of this section, under which the court may, in its discretion, allow the first fact to be proved before the second fact and vice versa, when the relevancy of the two facts is interdependent.

What are relevant facts are given in Sections 5 to 26 under this Act. Admissibility is the rule and exclusion is the exception. The circumstances under which other rules might operate to exclude the admissibility under the Act have to be taken into consideration only in judging of the value to be attached to the evidence, when admitted.[24]

When a court entertains a doubt as to the admissibility of a document, it is better to admit than to exclude the document, as the admissibility is a question of law and is determinable by the Court, and its decision is open to appeal.[25]

However doubtful inadmissible evidence might not to be admitted in a criminal trial.[26]

The relevancy would be determined by logic whereas admissibility is governed by the rules of law. What evidence is to be admitted, or not to be admitted, should not be decided under the cover of framing the issues, but has to be determined in accordance with this section as and when the evidence is tendered before the court.[27] An objection to the admissibility should be taken when the evidence is tendered, and not before.[28] When an objection is raised as to the admissibility, it has to be decided then and there, without reserving the question till the end of the trial.[29] The Supreme Court held that, when no objection was taken as to the admissibility of a document in the trial court, it was not necessary to consider whether the document was admissible under law.[30] There is difference between raising an objection to the proof of a document, and admissibility of a document. Proof can be waived by a party or his counsel; and it does not mean that he has admitted the contents of the document. The mode of proof is only a question of procedure, and once it is waived he cannot subsequently raise any objection.[31] In criminal cases the rule of waiver is not applicable. It is the duty of the criminal courts to follow the procedure prescribed by law, and the consent of the accused cannot be invoked against irregularity in procedure.[32] The court shall exclude inadmissible evidence though there is no objection by the party in the proceedings. It was held that an erroneous omission to object to the evidence, which was not admissible or relevant under the Act, would not make it admissible. It is the duty of the court to exclude all irrelevant or inadmissible evidence, though no objection was taken by the parties to its admissibility.[33]

A judgement based upon evidence not relevant under the Act must be set aside even though the parties consented to its being treated as the sole evidence.[34] Under Order XXVI, Rule 17, C.P.C. the commissioner has no power to disallow questions he considers irrelevant.[35] When a question was put to one's own witness, namely whether it was in the public interest to allow the State Transport Unit to operate the routes exclusively, to the total exclusion of private bus operators with a view to obtain his opinion and not to elicit any fact or information, it was held that such question was rightly disallowed by the authority.[36] Where evidence is procured by an illegal search, the illegality of the search, does not

---

24. R. v. Mona Puna, ILR 16 Bom 661, 668.
25. Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari, ILR 12 All 1, 26 (FB); Kali Kishore v. Bhushan, ILR 18 Cal 201; Madhavrao v. Deonak, ILR 21 Bom 695.
26. Laijam Singh v. R., AIR 1925 All 405.
27. Dandi Swamy v. Srijib, 48 Cal WN 635.
28. R v. Patel, (1951) 2 All ER 29; R. v. Hammond, (1941) 3 All ER 318; Gopal Das v. Sri Takurji, AIR 1943 PC 83; Bhagwan Dass v. Khemchand, AIR 1973 P&H 477.
29. Srirama v. Lakshmidevamma, AIR 1957 AP 60; Devasikhamani v. Andamuthu, (1955) 1 MLJ 457; Jadu Rai v. Bhubataran Nundy, ILR (1889) 17 Cal 173; Ramjibun v. Oghore, ILR (1897) 25 Cal 401.
30. Purushothama v. Perumal, AIR 1972 SC 608; following the decision in Bhagat v. Khetu, AIR 1929 PC 110.
31. Jainab Bibi v. Haiderally Saheb, ILR 43 Mad 609 (FB); Ayyavar v. Secretary of State, AIR 1942 mad 528..
32. Deputy Legal Rememberancer v. Upendra, 12 Cal WN 140; Kottam v. Umar, ILR 46 Mad 117; See commentary under Section 58.
33. Narhari v. Ambabai, ILR 44 Bom 192; Miller v. Madho Das, (1890) 19 All 192 PC; Nanak Chand v. Mian Md., AIR 1936 lah 114; Dwijen v. Naresh, AIR 1845 Cal 492; Prakasaravanum v. Venkata, ILR 38 Mad 160.
34. Ponnuswami v. Singaram, ILR 41 Mad 731.
35. Ramkishna Dalmia v. Firoze Chand, AIR 1960 Punj 430.
36. Rajbahadur Lal v. State of U.P., AIR 1972 All 308.

make the evidence of seizure of articles inadmissible, though the Court may be circumspect and closely scrutinize the evidence of seizure.[37]

A judge is not only a judge of law but also of fact. He has to form his own estimate of the evidence produced before him, and he should not be haunted by the idea that there was no ruling or precedent to guide him.[38] If there is anything in a statement of a witness which is disputed, and the opponent avoids asking questions on that matter in cross-examination, it was held that the evidence in-chief examination must be accepted, unless of course there are inherent improbabilities.[39] Where the names of the witnesses were not mentioned in the first information report, and they were examined by the police not on the day of occurrence but on the next day, it was held that there was no ground for discarding their evidence.[40]

Examination-in-chief.

S. 137. The examination of a witness by the party who calls him shall be called his examination-in-chief.

Cross-examination.

The examination of a witness by the adverse party shall be called his cross-examination.

Re-examination.

The examination of a witness, subsequent to the cross-examination by the party who called him, shall be called his re-examination.

Order of examination.

S. 138. Witnesses shall be first examined-in-chief, then (if the adverse party so desires) cross-examined, then (if the party calling him so desires) re-examined.

The examination and cross-examination must relate to relevant facts, but the cross-examination need not be confined to the facts to which the witness testified on his examination-in-chief.

Direction of re-examination.

The re-examination shall be directed to the explanation of matters referred to in cross-examination; and, if new matter is, by permission of the Court, introduced in re-examination, the adverse party may further cross-examine upon that matter.

SYNOPSIS

1. General ... 1251
2. Examination-in-Chief ... 1252
3. Cross-examination ... 1253
4. Who can cross-examine ? ... 1254
5. No opportunity to cross-examine—effect ... 1255
6. Range of cross-examination ... 1255
7. Cross-examination—General ... 1256
8. Cross-examination where there are several accused-defendants ... 1257
9. Cross-examination of witnesses of co-accused or co-defendants ... 1258
10. Cross-examination of witness called by Court ... 1258
11. Omission to cross examine ... 1258
12. Tendering witness for cross-examination ... 1259
13. Tendering a witness who was declared hostile in the commital court for cross-examination ... 1260
14. No right to cross-examination ... 1260
15. Re-examination ... 1260
16. Scope of Re-examination ... 1261
17. Recalling a witness ... 1261
18. Examination by court ... 1261
19. Power of the court to put questions ... 1262
20. Time for examination—Power of court to limit the time for examination ... 1262
21. Delayed Cross-examination ... 1263
22. S. 138 of Evidence Act and S. 311 of Cr.P.C. ... 1263

---

37. State v. Satyanarayan Mallik, (1965) 2 Cr LJ 112 : 1965 Ori 136; following Radhakishan v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 822; Kochan Velayudham v. State of Kerala, 1961 Ker 8 (FB). See also the commentary under Section 5 regarding objection to proof and admissibility, waiver of proof and of admissibility etc.
38. Ramdeo v. State of Rajasthan, 1964 Ra LW 264.
39. Jayalakshmi Devamma v. Janardhan Reddy, AIR 1959 AP 272.
40. In Re, Ratna Reddy, AIR 1963 AP 252.

COMMENTS

1. GENERAL

The examination of witnesses is viva voce (Order XVIII, R. 4). It is always in the form of questions and answers. The deposition is usually taken down in the form of a narrative out of the answers (Order XVIII, R. 5). Where a question is objected to and yet allowed by the Court to be put, the question and its answer are taken down verbatim (Order XVIII, R. 10). At the end of the deposition, it is read out to the witness and signed by the Presiding Officer (Order XVII, R. 5).

The viva voce examination consists generally of three stages: first of all, the witness is examined by the party who calls him; this is called examination-in-chief (S. 137). He is next examined by the adverse party; this is called cross-examination (S. 137). Finally he is examined again by the party who called him; this is called re-examination (S. 137).

Section 246 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 giving the accused a right in a warrant case to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution after a charge has been framed, is an exception to the general rule. In the exercise of the inherent power of the Court, the Magistrate in an inquiry under Chapter XIX of the Code of Criminal Procedure may allow the accused to reserve cross-examination for a future occasion in the special circumstances of a case.[41]

Section 138 states that a witness must first be examined in-chief; then the opposite party cross-examines him and, if the party calling him so desires, may re-examine him. It also states that the examination and cross-examination must relate to relevant facts only. But, in the cross-examination, the opposite party has a right to put other questions and need not be confined to the facts stated by the witness in the examination-in-chief. The third paragraph in Section 138 states that re-examination should be confined only to explain matters referred to in the cross-examination. If any new matter is brought out during the re-examination then, with the permission of the court, the opposite party may further cross-examine the witness.

Section 138 deals only with the order in which the proceedings of the court are to be conducted.[42]

Dealing with Section 137 and 154 of the Evidence Act, the Supreme Court, in Dahyabhai v. State of Gujarat[43], observed: "Section 137 gives only the three stages in the examination of a witness, namely, examination-in-chief, cross-examination and re-examination. This is a routine sequence in the examination of a witness. This has no relevance to the question when a party calling a witness can be permitted to put to him questions under Section 154 of the Evidence Act which confers a discretionary power on the court to permit a person who calls a witness to put any question to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party.

The examination of a witness means, as laid down in Section 137, his examination-in-chief and his cross-examination. No examination of a witness is complete if the adverse party is illegally refused permission to cross-examine him, or the party calling him is refused permission to re-examine him. Section 138 also regulates the order in which a witness can be examined in-chief, cross-examined and re-examined. This is because the rights of the parties to examine in-chief, cross-examine, and re-examine a witness accrue in a certain order and a provision conferring the rights must, at the same time, regulate the order in which they are to be exercised.[44]

The examination of the witness has to be done in accordance with Section 137, unless the statute otherwise provides. Placing carbon copies of testimony of a witness recorded in another case is no examination of the witness.[45]

The provisions of Section 137 and 138 are applicable to proceedings under Section 145, Cr. P.C. in the absence of any provision to the contrary.[46]

---

41. G.V. Raman v. Emperor, (1929) 57 Cal 44.
42. R. v. Mathews, AIR 1929 Cal 822.
43. AIR 1964 SC 1563.
44. Banwarilal v. State, AIR 1956 All 385; Sawatan Daw v. Dasarathi Tah, AIR 1959 Cal 677.
45. Mohinder Singh v. Judicial Magistrate1st Class Ludhiana, (1976) 78 Punj LR 904.
46. Dwarka Dass v. State of J&K, 1979 Cr LJ 550 (J&K).

2. EXAMINATION-IN-CHIEF

This will ordinarily be in the form of a connected narrative, brought out by questions put to the witness by the party calling him. It must relate to relevant facts (S. 138). No leading questions can be asked (S. 142).

"Unless evidence of reputation be admissible, witnesses, must, in general merely speak to facts within their own knowledge, and they will not be permitted...to express their own belief or opinion...Though a witness, in general, must depose to such facts only as are within his own knowledge, the law does not require him to speak with such expression of certainty as to exclude all doubt. For, whatever may be the nature of the subject, if the witness has any personal recollection of the fact under investigation, he may state what he remembers concerning it, and leave the jury to judge the weight of his testimony. If the impression on his mind be so slight as to justify the belief that it may have been derived from others, or may be some unwarrantable deduction of his own dull understanding or lively imagination, it will be rejected."[47]

On some particular subjects, positive and direct testimony may often be unattainable, and, in such cases, a witness is allowed to testify to his belief or opinion, or even to draw inferences respecting the fact in question from other facts, provided these last facts be within his personal knowledge.[48] This mode of examination, however, chiefly prevails on questions of science or trade, where, from the difficulty, and occasional impossibility, of obtaining more direct and positive evidence, persons of skill, sometimes called experts, are allowed, not only to testify to facts, but to give their opinions in evidence.[49]

"On the other hand...the opinions of skilled witnesses cannot be received when the inquiry relates to a subject which does not require any peculiar habits or course of study to qualify a man to understand it. Thus, evidence is inadmissible to prove that one name, or one trade mark, so nearly resembles another as to be calculated to deceive, or that the make-up of one tin of coffee is so like another as to be calculated to deceive purchasers. Witnesses are not permitted to state their views on matters of moral or legal obligation, or on the manner in which other persons would probably have been influenced had the parties acted in one way rather than another...To put it briefly, a witness may not, on other than scientific subjects, be asked to state his opinion upon a question of fact which is the very issue for the jury, as, for instance, whether a driver is careful; a road dangerous; or an assault or homicide justifiable. Nor may be asked whether a clause in a contract restricting trade is reasonable or unreasonable, for this is a question for the Judge."[50]

"The opinions of scientific witness are admissible in evidence, not only where they rest on the personal observation of the witness himself, and on facts within his own knowledge, but even where they are merely founded on the case as proved by other witnesses at the trial. But here the witness cannot in strictness be asked his opinion respecting the very point which the jury are to determine."[51]

It is the duty of counsel to bring out clearly and in proper chronological order every relevant fact in support of his client's case to which the witness can depose. This task is more difficult than may at first sight appear. The timid witness must be encouraged; the talkative witness repressed; the witness who is too strong a partisan must be kept in check. And yet counsel must not suggest to the witness what he is to say. An honest witness, however, should be left to tell his tale in his own way with as little interruption from counsel as possible.[52]

However, the statements made in examination-in-chief, lose much of their credibility and weight unless they are put into the crucible of cross-examination and emerge unscathed from the test.

All the witnesses named in the complaint need not be examined. The complainant may examine the witnesses he chooses to examine.[53]

---

47. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., Ss. 1414-15, pp. 898-99.
48. Ibid., S. 1416, p. 899.
49. Ibid., S. 1417, p. 900.
50. Ibid., S. 1419, pp. 902, 903.
51. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 1421, p. 904.
52. POWELL, 10th Edn., p. 458.
53. Sk. Siraj v. State of Orissa, 1994 Cr LJ 2410 (para 3) (Ori).

3. CROSS-EXAMINATION

"The exercise of this right cross-examination is justly regarded as one of the most efficacious tests which the law has devised for the discovery of truth. By means of it, the situation of the witness with respect to the parties and to the subject of litigation, his interest, his motives, his inclination and prejudices, his character, his means of obtaining a correct and certain knowledge of the facts to which he bears testimony, the manner in which he has used those means, his powers of discernment, memory, and description, are all fully investigated, ascertained, and submitted to the consideration of the jury, who have an opportunity of observing his demeanour, and of determining the just value of his testimony. It is not easy for a witness, subjected to this test, to impose on a Court or jury, for however artful the fabrication of falsehood may be, it cannot embrace all the circumstances to which cross-examination may be extended."[54]

The right of cross-examination is a statutory right which vests in a party to the proceedings. There may be circumstances where one of the parties himself is being examined as a witness, as is seen in this case. Then a question will arise as to what are the contentions of the parties to the main dispute involved in the case, in order to find out the interest of the parties as to whether it is adverse to the party who is examined in-chief or not. In such context pleadings of the parties can be made use to find out the adversity between the witness and other parties. But another question also may arise. Apart from the pleadings there may be stages during the trial that a party may become adverse to the interest of the other. Even a witness in his answer may speak adversely to a party who was always sailing with the party, going by the pleadings, is liable to be cross-examined. The scheme of the Evidence Act sufficiently amplifies this principle. A right to cross-examine a witness even can arise when a witness speaks against one's interest who calls him. The provisions of the Evidence Act to declare a witness hostile i.e. Section 154 will clearly signify the intention of the Legislature that whenever a party pleads or whenever a party speaks against the interest of another party, the party against whom he speaks will get an opportunity to cross-examine him. Even the tone and tenor of the deposition of the witness sometimes may decide the right of the party to cross-examine a witness. It is a right given to a party to a legal proceedings in consonance with the principles of natural justice and cannot be decided merely on pleadings.[55]

The objects of cross-examination are to impeach the accuracy, credibility, and general value of the evidence given in-chief; to shift the facts already stated by the witness, to detect and expose discrepancies, or to elicit suppressed facts which will support the case of the cross-examining party.[56]

PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE (15th Ed. (2000), para 11-17, page 249) its states: "The object of cross-examination is two fold—to weaken, qualify, or destroy the case of the opponent; and to establish the party's own case by means of his opponent's witnesses."

In HALSBURY (4th Ed., Vol. 17, para 278, page: 194) it is stated: "Cross-examination is directed to:— (1) The credibility of the witness: (2) The facts to which he had deposed in-chief, including the cross-examiner's version thereof; and (3) The facts which the witness had not deposed but to which the cross-examiner thinks he is able to depose."

The right of cross-examination not only is referable to Section 138 but is one of the principles of natural justice that evidence may not be read against a party until the same has not been subjected to cross-examination, or at least an opportunity has not been given for cross-examination. Section 138 impliedly lays down that the statement of a witness would be read as evidence against a party only if it had been tested on the anvil of cross-examination or opportunity was afforded for the purpose.[57] The Privy Council, observed: "Cross-examination is one of the most important processes for the elucidation of the facts of a case."[58] The provision for cross-examination is not merely a technical rule of evidence; it is a rule of essential justice. It serves to prevent surprise at the trial and miscarriage of justice, because it gives notice to the other side of the actual case that is going to be made when the turn of the party, on

---

54. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 1428, p. 910.

55. Shrikant R. Shirdokar v. Xabirabi Shaik Kadar, 1997 AIHC 1363 (para 3) (Bom), relying on Des Raj Chopra v. Puran Maol, AIR 1975 Del 109.

56. POWELL, 10th Edn., p. 463.

57. Dwaraka Dass v. State of J&K, 1979 Cr LJ 550 (j&K).

58. Vassiliades v. Vassiliades, AIR 1945 PC 38.

whose behalf the cross-examination is being made, comes to give and lead evidence by producing witnesses.[59] The party must be given a fair chance to cross-examine the witness. Here the tenant was allowed to cross-examine the original landlady, who was very old, provided he made suitable arrangement for conveyance.[60] Failure to give an opportunity to cross-examine a witness would amount to an illegal assumption of jurisdiction not vested in the court, besides being an error of procedure in the course of the trial. Such evidence must be excluded from consideration.[61] No evidence affecting a party is admissible against that party unless the latter has had an opportunity of testing its truthfulness by cross-examination.[62] The testimony of a witness is not legal evidence unless it is subject to cross-examination; and where no opportunity has been given to the appellant's counsel to test the veracity of the principal prosecution witness or where owing to the refractory attitude of the witness, the Court is constrained to terminate all of a sudden and prematurely the cross-examination of the witness, the evidence of such a witness is not legal testimony and cannot be the basis of a judicial pronouncement.[63] If a witness has been interrogated during the course of investigation and if his evidence is material in judging the innocence or guilt of the accused, the accused is entitled to examine him as a defence witness, even though the prosecution decides to drop him or not to examine him as a prosecution witness. Such an opportunity cannot be denied by giving a lame excuse of inability to summon the said witness.[64]

Where the cross-examination of a witness before a committing Magistrate was deferred to the next date as the Court's time was over at the conclusion of the examination-in-chief of the witness but the witness breathed his last before the date fixed in the case and could not be cross-examined, it was held that it could not be said that the accused was given the opportunity to cross-examine the witness and had failed to avail of the opportunity, therefore the statement of such a witness could not be received in evidence at the trial.[65] It is the duty of the court to frame issues in a suit. Where the defendant's counsel fails to take part while framing the issues, the right to cross-examine cannot be denied on the ground of his failure to take part in framing the issues.[66] Under Section 540, (old) Cr. P.C. (now Section 313), the court has discretion to call any witness. When the court calls a witness, both parties will have the right to cross-examine the witness.[67] In the proceedings under Section 145, Cr. P.C., when the witness was allowed to prove documents, the opposite party is entitled to cross-examine the witness, as to relevant matters, even if they were not covered in the examination-in-chief.[68]

Accused has a right to cross-examine prosecution witnesses before any charge is framed in warrant cases not instituted on police report.[69]

4. WHO CAN CROSS-EXAMINE ?

The party who has a right to take part in any enquiry or trial, can cross-examine the witness or witnesses.[70] Where one of the Managing Directors of a firm had borrowed money on behalf of the firm in that capacity without the consent of the other Managing Director, the later, being an adverse party, had the right to cross-examine the former.[71]

---

59. A.E.G. Carapiet v. Derderian, AIR 1961 Cal 359; following the observations of LORD HERSCHELL in Browne v. Dunn, (1894) 6 R 67, and also the observations of LORD HALSBURY in the same case, at P. 76.
60. Pyarelal Sakseria v. Devishankar Parashar, AIR 1994 MP 115 (paras 9 and 11).
61. Neminath Appayya v. Jamboorao, AIR 1966 Mys 154; Onkar Bhikaram v. Balmukund Javerchand, AIR 1957 MB 135; Chandra Mani Naik v. Binapani Dei, AIR 1968 Ori 17.
62. Manganlal v. King-Emperor, ILR (1946) Nag 126 : AIR 1946 Nag 173.
63. Ram Kumar v. King-Emperor, ILR (1936) 12 Luck 553.
64. Ikrar Ahmad v. State of Madhya Pradesh, 1999 Cr LJ 429, at p. 430 (MP).
65. State v. Huzura Singh, ILR (1952) Patiala 48. Contra : Nandram Khemraj v. State of M.P., 1995 Cr LJ 1270 (paras 16 and 17) (MP).
66. Haridas Mundhra v. Indian Cable Co., Ltd., AIR 1965 Cal 369.
67. Mohammad Shafi v. State, AIR 1953 All 667.
68. Chandra Mani Naik v. Binapani Dei, AIR 1968 Ori 17.
69. State of Sikkim v. Pemba Sherpa, 1981 Cr LJ 856 (SK)(DB).
70. Kishori Lal v. State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cr LJ 840 (para 9) (Raj).
71. B.S. Balaji v. T. Govindaraju, 1996 AIHC 2484 (para 8) (Kant).

5. NO OPPORTUNITY TO CROSS-EXAMINE—EFFECT

From the fact that it was not recorded in the depositions of the witnesses that there was no cross-examination, it can be said that, in fact, there was no cross-examination, or that the request of the party to cross-examin was disallowed.[72]

If the pleaders do not turn up in court at the right moment to cross-examine the opposite party's witnesses, it cannot be made a ground of attack against the orders passed as the court is not bound to wait for any length of time and waste public time waiting for the pleader's arrival.[73]

When the accused was denied the opportunity to cross-examine the witness; the conviction based on the statement of the witness cannot be upheld; and such evidence must be excluded from consideration.[74] Refusal of permission to cross-examine the prosecution witness is not proper and against all principles of justice.[75]

Summary procedure cannot take away the right to cross-examine.[76] The direction by the Land Tribunal to the petitioner-tenants to cross-examine the respondent-owners on their written statement and that too without administering them oath, was a procedure prima facie illegal.[77]

6. RANGE OF CROSS-EXAMINATION

The range of cross-examination is unlimited, the only circumscribing limits being that it must 'relate to relevant facts' (S. 138).

By Ss. 146 to 150 the Legislature has tried to give very wide powers to the cross-examiner to help him in finding out the truth in oral depositions laid out before the Court. But the Legislature protects the witness (i) from consequences which he might incur from speaking the truth; and (ii) from needless questions, for the cross-examiner has to see that the imputations he makes against the witness are well-founded.

In the course of cross-examination, a witness may be asked questions:

(1) to test his veracity;

(2) to discover who he is and what his position in life is;

(3) to shake his credit by injuring his character, although his answer might criminate him or expose him to penalty or forfeiture (S. 146).

The cross-examiner is treading on safe ground so far as (1) and (2) are concerned. As regards (3), complex set of considerations present themselves.

If the questions refer to a relevant matter the provisions of S. 132 are applicable (S. 147). If, however, the questions refer to an irrelevant matter, they are proper—> if the truth or imputation coveyed by them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness.

They are improper—

(1) if the imputatiuon conveyed by them relates to matters so remote in time or of such a character that they would not affect the credibility of the witness;

(2) if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence (S. 148).

Before such questions are asked, the person putting them must have reasonable grounds for thinking that the imputation was well-founded (S. 149). If any lawyer asks such questions without reasonable

---

72. Union of India v. T.R. Verma, AIR 1957 SC 882.
73. Dwarkabai v. Ukharda Ganpat, AIR 1954 Nag 252.
74. Nami Nath Appayya v. Jamboorao, AIR 1966 Mys 154.
75. Janakdhari Sharma v. Jhapsi Singh, ILR (1958) 37 Pat 1006.
76. Kalpanaben M. Shah v. Navinchandra Jeevanlal Acharya, AIR 1995 Guj 176 (para 2).
77. Yallappa v. Murahari, 1998 AIHC 1652 (paras 7 and 8) (Kant).

grounds, the Court may report the case to the High Court or other authority to which he is subject (S. 150).

All questions or inquiries which are indecent or scandalous, unless they relate to facts in issue, are to be avoided (S. 151); so also all questions which are calculated to insult or annoy or couched in a needlessly offensive form (S. 152).

Cross-examination is in almost all cases undertaken by the adverse party; but the Court may permit a party to cross-examine his own witness if he proves to be a hostile witness (S. 154).

In criminal cases (warrant cases) tried by Magistrates, the accused person can, after the charge has been framed and he has given his plea, re-call and cross-examine any witness for the prosecution [Criminal Procedure Code, S. 246(5)].

In cross-examination, a party can ask questions on every issue to establish his case. There is no rule of procedure which deproves a party of his right to cross-examine a witness in respect of the whole case, on the ground that evidence with regard to some issues has already been tendered. The questions, however, must relate to relevant facts.[78] General and vague questions shall not be put in the cross-examination as they would serve no purpose.[79] Suggestions in the cross-examination can be put to indicate the case put forward by the party on whose behalf the cross-examination is being conducted. But suggestions cannot be a substitute for evidence, if it is repudiated by the witness to whom it is made.[80] It is open to any cross-examiner to put questions with a view to extract the real truth in regard to the accusation levelled against the accused person. While putting questions, the cross-examiner should keep certain standard of decency and decorum. Without any proof or cogent reason the cross-examiner would not be justified in putting a suggestion which is not relevant, like a question to the daughter of the deceased that the deceased was having illicit intimacy with one person.[81]

Irrelevant topics sometimes pursued at great length, and persistence shown in going over the same ground again and again in the hope of making the witnesses give discrepant statements must not be endured or permitted. Exercise of great vigilance and control over the court proceedings by judges and magistrates will save waste of public time and money.[82]

Once a party, even by mistake comes to the witness box and takes the oath and is examined about a document, he would become a witness and would be liable to be cross-examined by his opponent. Under Section 138 cross-examination need not be confined to the facts to which the witness testifies in his examination-in-chief; he can be cross-examined as to the whole of the case.[83] Hearsay evidence is not admissible in cross-examination, unless it be admissible under the provisions of Section 146.[84] Mere suggestions during cross-examination, not supported by specific statements by the accused and defence evidence, have no evidentiary value in a criminal trial.[85] A defendant admitting the plaintiff's claim cannot be permitted to cross-examine the plaintiff.[86]

Opportunity of cross-examination involves two elements:—(1) Notice to the opponent that the deposition is to be taken at the time and place specified; and (2) A sufficient interval of time to reach the place.[87]

7. CROSS-EXAMINATION—GENERAL

When the examination-in-chief has resulted in clear, conclusive or unimpeachable evidence, it may be prudent for the adverse party not to cross-examine; for, in such a case, he may be so doing, instead of weakening the evidence, merely strengthen and confirm it. So, too, he will generally not cross-examine a

---

78. Cambier v. Fr. E. Vanni Archbishop, AIR 1951 MB 86.
79. Baga Bharti v. Sarkar, AIR 1950 Raj 10.
80. 1969 All WR (HC) 369.
81. Patel Jasmat Virji v. State of Gujarat, (1980) 21 Guj LR 684.
82. Public Prosecutor v. R. Ramadoss, (1977) 2 An WR 195.
83. Onkar Bhikaram v. Balmukund Javerchand, AIR 1957 MB 135.
84. Ganauri Laldas v. Queen Empress, ILR 16 Cal 211.
85. State v. Md. Misir Ali, AIR 1963 Assam 151.
86. K. Subba Rao v. Y. Venkatappayya, AIR 1978 AP 193.
87. 1985 Mad LW (Cri) 186.

witness, whose evidence he admits or which cannot possibly injure his case. Reckless cross-examination, moreover, often lets in evidence which before was not admissible.[88]

Cross-examination, though a very powerful, is also a very dangerous engine. It is a double edged weapon and as often wounds him who wields it, as him at whom it is aimed. To wield it to advantage requires great practice and natural tact. In the hands of the raw and inexperienced advocate, we frequently see it do more injury than good to his cause. Yet it is in this branch of forensic practice that the youthful advocate is most eager for display. The old and wary pleader remembers that the witness is hostile to him, and is perhaps on the watch to inflict damage on his cause. Every question is likely to give such a witness an opportunity of clinching the nail he has driven before, if not of starting new matter, which the examination-in-chief may not have elicited, but which may be further pursued on re-examination. Therefore unless there is some very good ground for believing that the witness can be broken down, or convicted of falsehood, it is rarely good policy to submit him to a severe cross-examination. Sometimes a cross-examination is little more than affectation, in order that the pleader may not seem to let the witness go without question, as if he were totally impregnable; and a few questions are asked to shake his credit, or show the weakness of his memory. Sometimes too, a cross-examination may have the fishing object of eliciting some haphazard reply, which will open up matter favourable to the examiner on further pursuit. But generally speaking, cross-examination is to be warily approached, and the way carefully felt. Its use should be sparing; yet in mofussil practice the cross-examinations are scarcely less remarkable for their length than the utter irrelevancy and futility of their character.[89]

The trend of the cross-examination is in most cases determined by the line of narrative unfolded in the examination-in-chief. It is usual to take each important item so deposed to and to cross-examine the witness upon it. Its purpose is two-fold. First of all, the cross-examiner tries to discover if the story told by the witness in examination-in-chief is tainted by exaggerations or falsehoods. Secondly, the adverse party can in some cases construct his line of defence from out of the mouth of the witness.

The essence of cross-examination is, that it is the interrogation by the advocate of one party of a witness called by his adversary with the object either to obtain from such witness admissions favourable to his cause, or to discredit him. Cross-examina-tion is the most effective of all means for extracting truth and exposing falsehood.[90]

A skilful cross-examination is the highest attainment of an advocate's art. It is, difficult to frame any rules governing it; its technique can be acquired only by natural instinct or by long practice. The Act has, however, laid down some rules of guidance.

8. CROSS-EXAMINATION WHERE THERE ARE SEVERAL ACCUSED-DEFENDANTS

The accused is entitled in law to put further questions to a prosecution witness by way of cross-examination in respect of what he had stated in reply to questions put to him in cross-examination by the other accused. Each accused is entitled in law to test the evidence given against him by a prosecution witness, by cross-examination. And such cross-examination need not be limited only to what has been stated by him in examination in chief. Though Section 137 and Section 138 do not in words speak of a further round of cross-examination, there is neither in theses sections nor any where else in the Evidence Act anything to bar the accused from exercising his right of cross-examination afresh if and when the prosecution witness makes a further statement of facts prejudicial to him.[91]

An accused person may cross-examine a witness called by a co-accused for his defence when the case of the second accused is adverse to that of the first.[92]

---

88. POWELL, 10th Edn., p. 463.
89. NORTON ON EVIDENCE, 3rd Edn., S. 418, p. 222.
90. Sajad Ali v. Kashenath Doss, (1866) 6 WR (Civil) 181, 182. See P v. P., AIR 1982 Bom 498 which explains the range of cross-examination. The Court permitted questions as to the social conditions of family life and the degree to which mixing with other people would give rise to inference of adultery.
91. Muniappan v. State of Madras, AIR 1961 SC 175.
92. Ram Chand Chatterjee v. Hanif Sheikh, ILR (1893) 21 Cal 401.

9. CROSS-EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES OF CO-ACCUSED OR CO-DEFENDANTS

Where two prisoners are tried together and one gives evidence affecting the other, the other prisoner has a right to cross-examine.[1] Evidence of witnesses examined in defence on behalf of one accused and cross-examined on behalf of another accused is admissible as against the latter. It may be otherwise where that other accused had no opportunity of cross-examining them or where he has not been given an opportunity by the Magistrate or the Judge to explain the circumstances appearing in such evidence.[2] Where the parties arrayed as defendants in a suit have taken contradictory stands on a relevant and material issue, they shall be adversary to each other and are entitled to exercise their right of cross-examination against each other.[3] Where evidence produced by a partner defendant was found admissible against other co-defendant partners, it was held that the co-defendants have a right of cross-examination of such defendant partner.[4] A defendant who is not interested in an issue between the plaintiff and his co-defendant, is not entitled to cross-examine such co-defendants.[5] But if the co-defendant gave evidence against him then he may cross-examine the co-defendant though there is no issue connecting both of them[6] and also if the conflict of interest between the two is apparent.[7] Where the defences of a co-respondent or a co-defendant and the respondnet or the defendant are identical, neither is entitled to cross-examine the other. It is only where the evidence of a co-defendant or a co-respondent is adverse to the defendant or the respondent that the defendant or respondent has the right to cross-examine.[8]

It was held that when the evidence of a witness produced by an alleged sub-tenant would be inadmissible in evidence, the other alleged sub-tenant could be refused permission to cross-examine such a witness. But, when such evidence is admissible, the other alleged sub-tenant cannot be refused permission to cross-examine such witness solely on the ground that both the sub-tenants had a common defence.[9]

10. CROSS-EXAMINATION OF WITNESS CALLED BY COURT

If the witness called by the Court gives evidence against the complainant, he would have right to cross-examine such a witness.[10]

11. OMISSION TO CROSS-EXAMINE

In HALSBURY 4th Ed., Vol. 17, Para 278, Page 194 it is observed: "Failure to cross-examine a witness on some material part of his evidence, or at all, may be treated as an acceptance of the truth of that part or the whole of his evidence."[11]

It is a well-established rule of evidence that a party should put to each of his opponents' witnesses so much of his case as concerns that particular witness; if no such questions are put, the courts presume that the witnesses' account has been accepted. If it is intended to suggest that a witness was not speaking the truth upon a particular point, his attention must first be directed to the fact by cross-examination so that the witness may have an opportunity of giving an explanation.[12]

---

1. R. v. Hawden, (1902) 1 K.B. 882.
2. Nandgopal v. State, ILR (1951) Nag 172.
3. Sadhu Singh v. Sant Narain Singh, AIR 1978 Punj 319.
4. Sohanlal v. Gulabchand, AIR 1966 Raj 229.
5. Re, Wagstaff, 96 LT 605 : (1907) 2 Ch 35.
6. Dryden v. Surrey C.C., (1936) 2 All ER 535.
7. Mohamed Ziaulla v. Sorgra Begum, 1997 AIHC 2628 (paras 8-10) (Kant).
8. Ghadiali v. Ghadiali, (1946) 48 Bom LR 36.
9. Des Raj Chopra (Mrs.) v. Puran Mal, AIR 1975 Del 109.
10. Pradeep Kumar Agarwal v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 76 (para 4) (Ori).
11. Browne v. Dunn, (1894) 6 R 67 (HL); R. v. Hart, (1932) 23 Cr App Rep 202 (CCA).
12. Chunilal v. Hartford Fire Insurance Co., Ltd., AIR 1958 Punj 440; Chithalan v. C. Ammo Amma, 1968 Ker LJ 123; Ibadat Ali v. Baldia Co-op. Bank, (1968) 2 An LT 124; Commissioner of I.T. and C.T. v. M. Avvavaravva, (1966) 2 An LT 280; Babulall v. Caltex India Ltd., AIR 1967 Cal 205; Bansilal Madanlal v. East Bengal River Steam Service, ILR (1972) 2 Cal 380; Carapiet v. Derderian, AIR 1961 Cal 359; Atul Chandra v. Sonatan Daw, AIR 1962 Cal 78; Balkishan v. State, 1977 Cr LJ 410 (Del); Jayalakshmi Devamma v. Janardhan Reddy, AIR 1959 AP 272; Karmdan

When a party has declined to avail himself of the opportunity to put his essential and material case in cross-examination, it must follow that he believed that the testimony given could not be disputed. This is not merely a technical rule of evidence. It is a rule of essential justice.[13] Where the first informant was not cross-examined on his explanation about delay in lodging the F.I.R., his evidence remained unchallenged and must be believed.[14] Where witnesses are not tested by cross-examination, their evidence may be accepted unless there are any inherent improbabilities, affecting the credibility.[15] It was however held by the Supreme Court that the failure to cross-examine a witness would not mean that the testimony of the witness is true and acceptable, and it may be discarded if his testimony is on the fall of it unacceptable.[16] When the accused did not suggest to prosecution witnesses in cross-examination indicating his defence, it was held that the defence version may be rejected as an after thought.[17] When an accused declined to cross-examine the witness it was held that he having foregone his right to cross-examine the witnesses, cannot subsequently make a grivance about it.[18] When the doctor gave evidence that death was due to poisoning and the accused did not cross-examine him or the investigating officer, as to the safe and proper custody of the poison which was said to have been administered to the deceased, it was held that the evidence of the doctor must be accepted.[19]

12. TENDERING WITNESS FOR CROSS-EXAMINATION

The practice of tendering witnesses for cross-examination is inconsistent with this section. It ought never to be employed in the case of a witness whose evidence is not merely formal. The practice leads only to confusion and does not induce to the discovery of the truth.[20] The Punjab High Court held that, when a witness has not given statement in examination-in-chief, there is nothing in relation to which he is to be cross-examined. Tendering a witness for the cross-examination only is tantamount to giving up a witness. There is nothing in law that justifies such a course.[21]

The practice of tendering a witness for cross-examination at the Sessions Trial, without examination-in-chief, on the ground that he was declared hostile by the prosecution in the commital court, is inconsistent with the provisions of Section 138. Inference of hostility is a matter for the court to decide, and can only be drawn from the answers given by the witness. Where neither the answers of the witness given before the commital court have been transferred under Section 288, (old) Cr PC (now omitted), nor does the prosecution examine him with the permission of the court under Section 154 of the Evidence Act, there would be nothing before the Sessions Court from which it could draw an inference as to the hostility of the witness. The hostility of a witness can not be presumed merely on the word of the prosecution.[22]

Sarda v. Sailaja Kanta, AIR 1940 Pat 683; State of Rajasthan v. Bhola Singh, AIR 1969 Raj 219; Shyamsingh v. Deputy Inspector General of Police, AIR 1965 Raj 140.

13. Carapiet v. Derderian, AIR 1961 Cal 359; State of Rajasthan v. Bhola Singh, AIR 1969 Raj 219; Ramanand v. State, ILR 1974 HP 509; State of H.P. v. Thakurdas, 1983 Cr LJ 1694.
14. State of U.P. v. Nahar Singh, AIR 1998 SC 1328 : 1998 Cr LJ 2006, approving Browne v. Dunn, (1893) 6 R 67.
15. Kanst Ram v. Jai Ram, AIR 1956 HP 4; Bijai Ram v. Jai Ram Ganga Ram, AIR 1955 HP 57; Ganpat Ram Khosla v. Kishenlal, (1958) 60 Punj LR 349; Karnidan Sarda v. Sailaja Kanta, AIR 1940 Pat 683; Vellupillai v. Paramanandam, AIR 1954 Tra. Co. 152; Ramanand v. State, ILR 1974 HP 509; Sachindranath v. Nilima Chetterji, AIR 1970 Cal 38; Rani Bala v. Ram Krishna, (1969) 73 Cal WN 751; Sukharji Bhuj v. Calcutta State Road Transport Corpn., AIR 1966 Cal 620; Kanika Bewa v. State, (1975) 41 Cut LT 798; Kanika Bewa v. State of Orissa, 1976 Cr LJ 418 (Ori); Dulari Kuer v. Shivanandan Prasad Singh, 1977 BLJR 280; Mahant Mela Ram Chela v. SGP Committee, AIR 1992 P&H 252 (Amritsar).
16. Juwar Singh* v. *State of M.P., AIR 1981 SC 373.
17. Mehra v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1957 SC 369; Yusuff Ali v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 147.
18. Shyam Singh* v. *Dy. Inspector General of Police, AIR 1965 Raj 140.
19. State of Orissa* v. *Kaushalya Dei, AIR 1965 Ori 38.
20. Emperor v. Kasamalli Murzalli, (1941) 44 Bom LR 27 : ILR (1942) Bom 384 (FB) : AIR 1942 Bom 71; Emperor v. Sadeppa Gireppa Mutgi, (1941) 43 Bom LR 946 : ILR (1942) Bom 115; Veera Koravan, In re, (1929) 53 Mad 69; Jogindra Singh* v. *State of Haryana, 194 Cr LJ 117
21. Kesar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 Punj 286; Chhota Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 Punj 120; Sukhwant Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 1601 : 1995 AIR SCW 2521 : 1995 (2) Scale 482 (paras 9, 17 and 19 of AIR), distinguishing State of U.P. v. Jaggo alias Jagdish, AIR 1971 SC 1586; Tej Prakash v. State of Haryana, 1996 Cr LJ 394 (para 18) (SC).
22. Shailendra Kumar* v. *Territory of Tripura, AIR 1959 Tri 11.

13. TENDERING A WITNESS WHO WAS DECLARED HOSTILE IN THE COMMITAL COURT FOR CROSS-EXAMINATION

A witness declared hostile in the commital court, must be examined in the Sessions Court. The practice of tendering such witness only for purpose of cross-examination was deprecated.[23]

When a witness has been tendered by the prosecution, and oath has been administered to him, it is the prosecution which should technically be deemed to have called him, although it did not put a single question to him; therefore it would not be improper for the court to allow the opposite party to cross-examine him under Section 154 of the Act. It would be more proper for the prosecution, while tendering the witness, to ask atleast whether his evidence in the lower court was true and, if the witness gave a general answer as to the truth of his evidence in the lower court, he could then be cross-examined by the opposite party.[24]

Where the prosecution declines to call in the Court of Session a witness for the Crown who has been examined in the Magistrate's Court, and such witness is thereupon placed in the witness-box by counsel for the defence, the counsel for the defence is not entitled to commence his examination of the witness by questioning him as to what he had deposed in the Magistrate's Court. Questions as to his previous deposition are, under the circumstances, only admissible by way of cross-examination, with the permission of the Court, if the witness proves himself a hostile witness.[25]

14. NO RIGHT TO CROSS-EXAMINATION

In a case instituted on a private complaint, the accused have no right to cross-examine the witnesses before the framing of the charge.[26]

15. RE-EXAMINATION

The third para of Section 337 means, "where a witness has been cross-examined, and is then examined by the party who called him, such subsequent examination shall be called his re-examination."[27]

The object of re-examination is to afford the party calling a witness an opportunity of filling in the lacuna or explaining the inconsistencies which the cross-examination has discovered in the examination-in-chief of the witness. It is accordingly limited to the explanation of matters referred to in cross-examination (S. 138). It partakes of the nature of examination-in-chief inasmuch as no leading questions can be asked (S. 142).

The party who calls a witness has the right to re-examine him on all matters arising out of the cross-examination for the purpose of reconciling any discrepancies that may exist between the evidence in examination-in-chief and that which has been given in cross-examination; or for the purpose of removing or diminishing any suspicion that the cross-examination may have cast on the evidence-in-chief; or to enable the witness to state the whole truth as to matters which have only been partially dealt with in cross-examination.[28]

In re-examination the party has a right to ask all questions which may be proper to draw forth an explanation of the meaning of the expressions used by the witness on cross-examination, if they be in themselves doubtful, and also of the motive, or provocation, which induced the witness to those expressions, but he has not right to go further, and to introduce matter new in itself and not suited to explain either the expressions or the motives of the witness. If the counsel chooses to cross-examine the witness as to facts which were not admissible in evidence, the other party has a right to re-examine him as to the evidence so given. If a question has been omitted in the examination-in-chief, and cannot, in

---

23. 1956 M.B.L.J. (Bhopal) 159; Thazhathethil Hamsa v. State of Kerala, AIR 1967 Ker 16; Velayudhan v. State, ILR (1966) 2 Ker 361; Veera Koravan v. Emperor, AIR 1929 Mad 906; Queen Empress v. Ram Sahai Lall, ILR (1885) 10 Cal 1070.
24. Manzurul Haque v. State of Bihar, AIR 1958 Pat 422.
25. Queen-Empress v. Zawar Husen, ILR (1897) 20 All 155.
26. Nandram Khemraj v. State of M.P., 1995 Cr LJ 1270 (para 15) (MP).
27. STOKES, Vol. II p. 925 f.n. 1.
28. POWELL, 10 Edn., p. 469.

strictness, be asked on re-examination as not arising out of the cross-examination. it is usual for counsel to request the Judge to make inquiry and such a request is generally granted.[29]

The purpose of re-examination is to give an opportunity to the party who called the witness, to explain any part of the cross-examination which is capable of being construed unfavourably to the party who called him. However, new matters cannot be allowed to be introduced in evidence, in re-examination, without taking the court's permission.[30] Where applicant sought re-examination of a witness, rejection of the application merely on the ground that the question that would be put to the witness during such re-examination was not precisely specified, was held to be improper.[31]

16. SCOPE OF RE-EXAMINATION

SUBBARAO J., observed: "A clever witness in his examination-in-chief faithfully conforms to what he stated earlier to the police or in the committing court; but, in the cross-examination, introduces statements in a subtle way contradicting in effect what he stated in the examination-in-chief. If his design is obvious, the court can, during the course of his re-examination, permit the person calling him as a witness to put questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party. It cannot be said that, if a party calling a witness is permitted to put such questions to the witness after he has been cross-examined by the adverse party, the adverse party will not have any opportunity to further cross-examine the witness on the answers elicited by putting such questions. In such an event the court certainly, in exercise of its discretion, will permit the adverse party to cross-examine the witness on the answers elicited by such questions."[32]

The questions cannot be confined to ambiguities alone which arose in cross-examination. Questions can be put to obtain explanation required for any matter referred in the cross-examination.[33]

17. RECALLING A WITNESS

Re-calling of a witness already cross-examined by defence counsel, can be done for the purpose of a just decision, but the prosecution cannot have such a witness recalled for the purpose of examining him in-chief.[34]

Where the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses was adjourned and the counsel for the accused failed to appear on the adjourned date, the accused was entitled to recall of the witnesses.[35] In a case of murder the accused engaged no private counsel and Amicus Curiae was provided to him at a later stage. Thereafter, he engaged a private counsel and wanted to recall the already cross-examined witnesses for further cross-examination. It was held that in a case like this where it was a question of life and death for the accused, he should be given abundant opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses and recall should have been allowed in the interest of justice.[36] Right of the Court to recall the plaintiff for re-cross-examination can be exercised by it on the application of the defendant and is not restricted to action of its own motion.[37] However, this section does not restrict the powers of the Court to recall the witness for further examination for non-fulfilment of the condition of re-examination as mentioned in it.[38]

18. EXAMINATION BY COURT

It is not the province of the Court to examine the witnesses, unless the pleaders on either side have omitted to put some material question or questions; and the Court should, as a general rule, leave the

---

29. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., Ss. 1474, 1475, 1477, pp. 939, 940, 942.
30. Charan Singh v. State, AIR 1971 SC (Cr) 714.
31. State of W.B. v. Arunesh Pathak, 2000 Cr LJ 1039 (para 7) (Cal).
32. Dahya Bhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1964 SC 1563. See also Daulat Ram v. Bharat Insurance Co., AIR 1973 Del 180.
33. Rammi v. State of M.P., 1999 Cr LJ 4561 (paras 16-19) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3544.
34. (1985) 3 A.P.L.J. 72.
35. Hazari Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ 3758 (para 5) (Raj).
36. Ramshanker v. State of U.P., 1997 Cr LJ 1102 (All).
37. S.S.S. Durai Pandian v. S.A. Samuthira Pandian, AIR 1998 Mad 323 (para 24).
38. Laxmi Kant Upadhyaya v. Deo Narain Misra, 2001 AIHC 3059 (para 3) (All).

witnesses to the pleaders to be dealt with as laid down in this section.[39] The Court can put questions to a witness to elicit truth during cross-examination even if he is a bit confused.[40]

19. POWER OF THE COURT TO PUT QUESTIONS

The court has however power to put questions at any stage during the trial. When the court finds that the witnesses were not sticking to the statement made by them under Section 161 or 164, Cr. P.C., and were probably giving false evidence, they should not be rebuked and threatened that they would be prosecuted for perjury; the Judges should always adopt the principle of fair trial.[41] Where a witness is asked certain questions about a matter, and he is not a person who could say anything about it, such questions should be disallowed by the Court.[42] The judge's right to question is circumscribed by the adversary system. Where the judge rebuked a witness and threatened him with prosecution for perjury, the whole trial was held to be vitiated.[43]

The practice of Judges and Magistrates questioning the witnesses as if they were cross-examining counsel must be deprecated. It is opposed to the provisions of Section 138, and is not fair to the prisoners. It is not the province of the court to examine the witnesses unless the pleaders on either side have omitted to put some material questions. And, as a general rule, the witnesses must be left to the pleaders to be dealt with, as laid down in Section 138. It would be embarrassing to the counsel examining a witness when the judge interferes during the course of either examination-in-chief or of cross-examination and it would take away the trend of the examining counsel.[44] No doubt it is true that the court can put any question to the witness at any stage of the examination, but this power should not be carried to the extent of the court itself examining the witness.[45] Propriety demands that the court should only put questions at the end of the deposition, after the examination-in-chief, cross-examination and re-examination, if any, is over though the questions can be put by the court at any stage of recording evidence of the witness.[46] If any ambiguity has arisen during cross-examination of a witness, a judge cannot sit as a mere spectator of the scene and mechanically record the evidence; he should get the ambiguity clarified by putting necessary questions to a witness.[47]

WIGMORE (3rd Vol. Section 781, P. 137) states: "An intimidating manner in putting questions may so coerce or disconcert the witness that his answers do not represent his actual knowledge on the subject. So also questions which in form or subject cause embrassment, shame or anger in the witness, may unfairly lead him to such demeanour and utterance that the impression produced by his statements does not do justice to his real testimonial value."

20. TIME FOR EXAMINATION—POWER OF COURT TO LIMIT THE TIME FOR EXAMINATION

The Privy Council held that the Judge has always a discretion as to how far the cross-examination may go and how long it may continue; a fair and reasonable exercise of his discretion will not generally be questioned by an appellate court.[48]

It was held by LORD SANKEY: "A protracted and irrelevant cross-examination not only adds to the cost of litigation but it is a waste of public time. The court has to check irrelevant cross-examination."[49]

In another case, the Privy Council has gone to the extent of stating that the High Courts are to direct an enquiry with a view to disciplinary action against the lawyers indulging flagrant abuse of that court's time. It observed: "Abuse in the matter of cross-examination which enormously increases the costs of litigation, without any corresponding benefits to the parties, should be checked and it would appear to be

---

39. Per GARTH, C.J. in Noor Bux Kazi v. Empress, ILR (1880) 6 Cal 279, 283.
40. State of Rajasthan v. Ani, AIR 1997 SC 1023 : 1997 Cr LJ 1529, following Chander v. State of Haryana, AIR 1981 SC 1036 : 1981 Cr LJ 609.
41. Ram Chander v. State of Haryana, AIR 1981 SC 1036.
42. Tan Bug Taim v. Collector of Bombay, AIR 1946 Bom 216.
43. Ram Chander v. Haryana, AIR 1981 SC 1036.
44. Nanjappa v. Periakkal, AIR 1951 Mad 772.
45. State of Basudeb Senapati, (1957) 23 Cut LT 449.
46. Noormohmed v. State, (1970) 11 Guj LR 846.
47. State v. Beda Digal, ILR (1977) 1 Cut 111, 116.
48. Vassiliades v. Vassiliades, AIR 1945 PC 38.
49. Mechanical & G.I. Co. Ltd. v. Austin and Austin Motor Co. Ltd., (1935) AC 346.

clearly within the powers of the High Courts to direct an enquiry with a view to disciplinary action about the lawyers in flagrant cases."[50]

The court has undoubted control and discretion in the matter of controlling the cross-examination of a party by the counsel of the opposite party. It is true that neither the Evidence Act nor the Code of Criminal Procedure contains anything which would justify a court of law in imposing a particular time limit, but if the court has the discretion and has control over the proceedings, surely the court must be presumed to have such a power apart from the Evidence Act or the Code of Criminal Procedure.[51]

It is no doubt true that cross-examination is one of the most important processes for the elucidation of facts and testing the veracity of a witness and accuracy of the story unfolded by him. So, all reasonable lattitude must be shown. But, the judge has the discretion in regard to how far and how long the cross-examination can go. Prolix examination and cross-examination must be checked. Irrelevant topics sometime pursued at great length, and persistence shown in going over the same ground again and again in the hope of making the witness discrepant, must not be endured or permitted. Exercise of great vigilence and control over the court proceedings by judges and magistrates will not only save waste of public time and money but also help clear the backlog of arrears.[52]

21. DELAYED CROSS-EXAMINATION

Delayed cross-examination does not affect the credibility of the witnesses when earlier version of such witnesses was found to be consistent with other evidence and conviction could be based on such evidence.[53]

22. S. 138 OF EVIDENCE ACT AND S. 311 OF Cr.P.C.

Provisions of Section 138 of the Evidence Act and Section 311 that of the Cr.P.C. are complementary and not conflicting with one another.[54]

Cross-examination of person called to produce a document.

S. 139. A person summoned to produce a document does not become a witness by the mere fact that he produces it, and cannot be cross-examined unless and until he is called as a witness.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

According to this section, a person who has been summoned to produce a document will not become a witness by the mere fact that he produces it, and he cannot be cross-examined unless and until he is called as a witness.

Order XVI, Rules 6 and 15, Civil Procedure Code, and Section 94 (old) Cr. P.C., (corresponding to Section 91(1)(2) New Cr. P.C.) provide for the summoning of a person to produce a document.

Where a lady was summoned to produce a document under Section 94 (old) Cr. P.C., expressed that she was not having the document in question and, as she was a pardanashin lady, she need not be summoned to the Court, the Supreme Court held that Section 94(2) states that a person required merely to produce a document shall be deemed to have complied with the order if he causes that such document to be produced, instead of attending personally to produce the same; that there is nothing in the Chapter to provide that the person who appears in the Court, in pursuance of its summons under Section 94(1) of Cr. P.C., thereby becomes a witness and can be examined and cross-examined by the Court, although he has not been cited as a witness in the proceedings; and that even if a person produces a document for which a summons has been issued to him, Section 139 clearly provides that he does not thereby become

---

50. Rajkumar Sen v. Ramasunder, AIR 1932 PC 69. See also Emperor v. Rahimatalli, AIR 1920 Bom 402.
51. Yeshpal v. Rasiklal, AIR 1955 Bom 318: referring to AIR 1945 SC 38; 1935 AC 346; AIR 1932 PC 69; Supra.
52. Public Prosecutor v. R. Ramdoss, (1977) 2 An WR 195.
53. P. Satyanarayana v. State of A.P., 1995 Cr LJ 1738 (paras 6 and 7) (AP).
54. G.H. Iyer v. State, 1998 Cr LJ 1821 (para 4) (Ori).

a witness by the mere fact that he produces it and he cannot therefore be cross-examined unless and until he is called as a witness.[55]

The rule contained in this section is in accordance with the practice under the English Law, namely, that a person who merely produces a document need not be sworn and, unless sworn, he cannot be cross-examined.

The summons to produce a document is in English law called a subpoena duces tecum.

This section has to be read along with Section 162 of this Act, which says, that, when a witness is summoned to produce a document, he shall bring it to the Court, if it is in his possession or power, notwithstanding any objection to its production or to its admissibility. If once summons are issued and the person fail to produce the document, it would be an offence under Section 175, I.P.C., or Section 480, Cr. P.C. (old) corresponding to Section 345 (New Cr.P.C. of 1973).

2. WITNESS SWORN BY MISTAKE

The expression "unless and until he is called as a witness" means until he is summoned to depose, and he is sworn. When a witness is sworn, it gives the opponent a right of cross-examination, although he may not be examined in-chief after administration of oath. But, a witness called and sworn under a mistake, and whose evidence is not substantially begun, is not liable to be cross-examined. However, the mistake must arise from an erroneous belief that the witness knew something of the transaction when, as a matter of fact, he knew nothing about it.[56]

WIGMORE ON EVIDENCE (1940) 3rd Ed., Vol. 6, Art. 1893, P. 563 observed "I. A person who has been sworn by mistake, as sometimes happens under the practice of swearing in a group, and has not yet been put on the stand, is not yet the witness of the party for whom he has sworn.

II. A person sworn, but not yet asked any question, is not the witness of the party swearing him: morever, he cannot be cross-examined even to discredit him, for there is as yet no testimonial assertion to be discredited.

III. A person sworn and asked questions, where he gives no answer or where the facts in his answer are irrelevant to the case, has not yet become his party's witness.

IV. A person who is questioned and answers merely to prove a document does become a witness of the party thus using him." ..... "A person producing a document and answering questions tending to prove it does become the questioner's witness." (p. 565).

Where a witness denies, that he has the possession or means of producing a particular document, he can, if he has been guilty of falsehood, be prosecuted for giving false evidence in a judicial proceeding.[57]

3. TO BE A WITNESS

It was held by the Supreme Court that this section is only to regulate the right of cross-examination, and it is not a guide to the word 'witness', which must be understood in its material sense, i.e., as a referring to a person who furnishes evidence.[58] The Supreme Court observed by the majority, that "to be a witness" in its ordinary grammatical sense means giving oral testimony in court, and the case law has gone beyond the strict literal interpretation of the expression, which may now bear a wider meaning viz. bearing testimony in court, or out of court, by a person accused of an offence orally or in writing.[59]

Section 139, has nothing to do with the proper custody mentioned in Section 90 of the Evidence Act. The former provides a machinary for the production of the documents summoned, whereas the latter section deals with proper custody of the document, which has to be decided on the evidence adduced.[60]

---

55. Parmeshwari Devi (Smt.) v. State, AIR 1977 SC 403.
56. Wood v. Mackinson, (1940) 2 M&R 273.
57. PER WEST J., in In re, Premchand Dowlatram, ILR (1887) 12 Bom 63, 65.
58. M.P. Sharma v. Satish Chandra, AIR 1954 SC 300.
59. State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu, AIR 1961 SC 1808.
60. Ravjappa v. Nilakanta Rao, AIR 1962 Mys 53.

Mere production of documents or giving some information about the document by the accused cannot be interpreted as "to be a witness" within Art. 20 of the Constitution.[61]

Witnesses to character.

S. 140. Witnesses to character may be cross-examined and re-examined.

COMMENTS

1. SCOPE AND PRINCIPLE

This section states that witnesses who give evidence as to character may be cross-examined and re-examined.

Sections 53 and 54, Section 146(3) of the Evidence Act would be relevant in this connection. In Section 53, it is said that, in criminal proceedings, the fact that the person accused is of good character is relevant, whereas Section 54 says that in criminal proceedings, the fact that the accused person has a bad character is irrelevant, unless evidence has been given that he has a good character, in which case it becomes relevant. Section 146 Cl. (3) states that, when a witness is cross-examined to shake his credit, questioning about his character is permissible.

BEST ON EVIDENCE (8th Ed., Section 262, ps. 248, 249) has observed: "Witnesses to the character of parties are in general treated with great indulgence,—perhaps too much. Thus, it is not the practice of the bar to cross-examine such witnesses, unless there is some specific charge on which to found a cross-examination, or at least without giving notice of an intention to cross-examine them, if they are put in the box. The Judges also discourage the exercise of the undoubted right of prosecuting counsel to rely on their testimony, and the most obvious perjury in giving false characters for honesty etc., is everyday either overlooked or dismissed with a slight reprimand. But surely this is mercy out of place. If mendacity in this shape is not discouraged, a tribunal will naturally be induced either to look on all character evidence with suspicion, or to attach little weight to it. Now, there are many cases in which the most innocent man has no answer to oppose to a criminal charge but his reputation; and to deprive this of any portion of the weight legitimately due to it, is to rob the honest and upright citizen of the rightful reward of his good character.....The use of character evidence is to assist the jury in estimating the value of the evidence brought against the accused and we cannot dismiss this subject without directing attention to the shrewd observations of HOLT C.J.[62]; "A man is not born a knave, there must be time to make him so, nor is he presently discovered after he become one. A man may be reputed an able man this year, yet be a beggar the next."

Character lies in the man; it is the mark of what he is; it shows itself on all occasions. Reputation depends upon others; and it is what they think of him. According to Oxford Dictionary, 'character' means: "collective peculiarities, sort, style, reputation, good-reputation, description of person's qualities, testimonial, status." The Model Code of Evidence defines 'character' as the "aggregate of person's traits including those relating to care and skill and their opposites." Just as cause of action means a bundle of facts, character is an expression of very wide import, which takes in all the traits, special and particular qualities impressed by nature or habit which serve as an index to the essential intrinsic nature of a person. Character and reputation are not synonymous.[63]

Leading questions.

S. 141. Any question suggesting the answer which the person putting it wishes or expects to receive, is called a leading question.

When they must not be asked.

S. 142. Leading questions must not, if objected to by the adverse party, be asked in an examination-in-chief, or in a re-examination, except with the permission of the Court.

---

61. State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu, AIR 1961 SC 1808; reversing Farid Ahmed v. State, AIR 1960 Cal 32 and overruling; State of Kerala v. Sankaran Nair, AIR 1960 Ker 392 FB; State of Gujarat v. Shyamlal Mohanlal, AIR 1963 Guj 178.
62. R. v. Swendson, (1702) 14 How St Tr 496.
63. See Ramasubba Reddy v. P.V.S. Rama Das, 1970 Cr LJ 83 (AP).

The Court shall permit leading questions as to matters which are introductory or undisputed, or which have, in its opinion, been already sufficiently proved.

When they may be asked.

S. 143. Leading question may be asked in cross-examination.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1266
2. Prohibition not absolute ... 1267
3. Criminal Cases ... 1268
4. Sections 142 & 154 of the Evidence Act ... 1268

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Section 141 defines a leading question. Section 142 says that leading questions must not be asked in examination-in-chief, if objected to by adverse party. Section 143, permits leading questions in cross-examination of a witness.

STEPHEN in his DIGEST OF LAW OF EVIDENCE (12th Ed., art. 140) states: "A leading question is one which either (a) suggests the answer desired, or (b) assumes the existence of disputed facts as to which the witness is to testify."

BEST ON EVIDENCE (8th Ed., Section 641, p. 591) observes: that the exclusion of leading questions at the stage of Examination-in-Chief is based on two reasons:—"First, and principally, on the supposition that the witness has a bias in favour of the party bringing him forward, and hostile to his opponent. Secondly, the party calling a witness has an advantage over his adversary, in knowing before hand what the witness will prove, or at least is expected to prove; and that, consequently, if he were allowed to lead, he might interrogate in such a manner as to extract only so much of the knowledge of the witness as would be favourable to his side or even put a false gloss upon the whole."

"A question is objectionable as leading when it suggests the answers, not when it merely directs the attention of the witness to the subject respecting which he is questioned. e.g., on a question whether A and B were partners, it has been held not a leading question to ask if A has interfered in the business of B.....It should never be forgotten that leading is a relative not an absolute term. There is no such thing as "leading" in the abstract, for the identical form of questions which would be leading of the grossest kind in one case or state of facts, might not only be unobjectionable, but the very fittest mode of interrogation in another."[64]

"'Is your name so and so? Do you not reside in such a place? Are you not in the service of such and such a person? Have you not lived so many years with him?—' Under this form every sort of information may be conveyed to the witness in disguise. It may be used to prepare him to give the desired answers to the questions about to be put to him; the examiner, while he pretends ignorance and is asking for information which is in reality giving instead of receiving it. This kind of leading question has been otherwise described as a question which embodies material fact which may or may not have been before known to the witness, and admits of a conclusive answer by a simple negative or affirmative."[65]

"A question depends for its suggestion more in the tone of voice than in the form of words. The particle 'not' as in, 'then, did you not say that you refused the offer?' does indeed convey in itself the suggestion that an affirmative answer is desired; but the opposite form 'did you say that you refused the offer? by no means betrays in form such a suggestion, and depends almost wholly upon the intonation for suggestion; in other words it may or may not be leading.[66]

LORD ELLEN-BOROUGH observed that a leading question is a question framed in such a manner that it throws a hint as to, or suggests directly or indirectly, the answer which the examiner desires to elicit from the witness, e.g., when a witness called to testify to an alleged assault on A by B was asked: "did you see B take a stick and strike A?" or "Did you not hear him say this?", they would be leading

---

64. BEST ON EVIDENCE, 8th Edition p. 592.
65. BENTHAM ON RATIONALE OF JUDICIAL EVIDENCE.
66. FIELD ON EVIDENCE, 1967 Ed., Vol. 6, P. 4820.

questions which suggest the witness the answer desired or which, embodying a material fact, admit of a conclusive answer by a simple negative or affirmative. But a question that calls for a simple 'yes' or 'no' answer is not leading....Where 'yes' or 'no' would be conclusive on any part of the issue, it would be equally objectionable: a question is objectionable as leading when it suggests the answer, not when it merely directs the attention of the witness to the subject; respecting which he is questioned.[67]

BELL C.J., observed: "A question is leading where the question assumes any fact which is in controversy, so that the answer may really or apparently admit that fact. Such are the forked questions habitually put by some counsel if unchecked; as, 'what was the plaintiff doing when the defendant struck him?', the controversy being whether the defendant did strike. A dull or a forward witness may answer the first part of the question and neglect the last."[68]

2. PROHIBITION NOT ABSOLUTE

The prohibition of putting leading questions in-chief examination and re-examination is not absolute; the court may allow such questions under Order XVIII, Rule 11, C.P.C., though objected to as leading question. Discretion of the court largely rests with the trial court and depends on the circumstances, as demeanour of witnesses, the tenor of the preceding questions etc.[69]

PHIPSON states that the rule is relaxed in the following cases:

"As the rule is merely intended to prevent the examination from being conducted unfairly, the judge has a discretion, which is not open to review, to relax it when he considers it necessary in the interests of justice.[70] It is always relaxed in three cases : introductory or undisputed matter; assisting memory; contradiction.

To shorten proceedings, and bring the witness as quickly as possible to the material points of the case, it is not only permissible, but proper, to lead him as to matters which are introductory, or not really in dispute. Frequently one counsel will indicate to opposing counsel that the witness may be led up to a particular point.

A question which merely directs the attention of the witness to a particular topic, without suggesting the answer required, is not objectionable. An old example from a civil case of slander that "A was a bankrupt whose name was on the Bankruptcy List, and would appear in the next Gazette", a witness who had spoken of only the first two statements was allowed to be asked "Was anything said about the Gazette?"[71]

Where one witness is called to contradict another as to expressions used by the other, the witness may be asked not merely what was said, but whether the particular expressions were used, since otherwise a contradiction might never be arrived at.[72] Where, however, the conversation is not proved merely for the purpose of contradiction, the latter question is improper.[73] It is sometimes appropriate to ask the witness for their version of a conversation before asking whether particular expressions were used."[74]

Prof. CROSS says that such exceptions are not exhaustive and there are bound to be cases which do not fall within the list of exceptions.[75]

BEST ON EVIDENCE (10th Edn. Section 642) observes: "The rule will be relaxed where the inability of a witness to answer questions put in the regular way, obviously arises from defective memory, on account of illness, illiteracy, old age or failing memory." "..... The object of putting leading questions to such a witness is to revive or refresh his memory by drawing his attention to a particular topic, without suggesting any answer."[76]

---

67. Nicholas v. Dowding, (1815) 1 Stark 81.
68. Steer v. Little, 44 NH 616.
69. Howrah Trading Co. (P) Ltd. v. 4th Industrial Tribunal, (1966) 2 Lab LJ 282; Exp. Bottomley, (1909) 2 KB 14.
70. Ex p. Bottomley, (1909) 2 KB 14 at 16; Lawder v. Lawder, (1855) 5 Ir CL R 27.
71. Rivers v. Hague, (1837) MS cited Best, S. 641.
72. Edmonds v. Walter, (1920) 3 Stark 7; Courteen v. Touse, (1807) 1 Camp 43.
73. Hallett v. Cousens, (1839) 2 M & M 238.
74. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), P. 247 (para 11-12).
75. CROSS EVIDENCE, 6th Edn., page 247.
76. Lord ELLENBOROUGH in Acerro v. Petroni, 1 Stark 100.

The objection to leading questions is not that they are absolutely illegal, but only that they are unfair. The court may, in its discretion, allow leading questions in proper cases.[77]

The court has to determine, and not the counsel, whether a leading question should be permitted, and the responsibility for the permission rests with the court.[78]

The answers to a leading question are not inadmissible though the method by which they were obtained may rob them of all or most of their significance.[79]

3. CRIMINAL CASES

In a criminal case, leading questions to prosecution witnesses, in order to elicit suitable answers, should not be allowed.[80] The prosecutor cannot put leading questions on the material part of the evidence which he intends that the witness should give against the accused. Such leading questions offend the right of the accused to fair trial enshrined under Article 21 of the Constitution. It is not a curable irregularity.[81]

An answer in the affirmative to a leading question put by a person in authority renders the confession unacceptable, as such confession was given out of fear and threat, and so inadmissible in view of Section 24 of the Evidence Act. [82]

When an objection is taken, it would be advisable for the court to note the objection and the opinion of the court in disallowing the objection and permitting the leading question, so that the higher courts can appreciate the evidence recorded on such leading questions.

4. SECTIONS 142 & 154 OF THE EVIDENCE ACT

In considering whether the person calling a witness can cross-examine his own witness by putting leading questions, Sections 142 and 154 will have to be read together. The question would be whether such a witness should be treated as hostile, before permission is granted to put leading questions to or cross-examine his own witness. Section 142, simply states that leading questions must not be put in the examination-in-chief, except with the permission of the court. Section 154 states that the court may, in its discretion, permit the person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party.

A question put in a leading form would not necessarily amount to cross-examination. But most of the questions in cross-examination would be leading questions.[83]

The Calcutta High Court held that, even without granting permission under Section 154 to cross-examine the witness, the court can permit leading questions to be put under Section 142 to his witness who turns hostile.[84]

To put leading questions and to get a witness declared as hostile are two different things. The concept of the basic requirement for putting a leading question is to lead him to an undisputed point with the permission of the court and, if need be, with the permission of the adversary. This is just to save the time, or not to repeat what has been already conceded to, or to skip over the undisputed facts. But while declaring a witness hostile the object is to impress upon the court that the witness either from his demeanour or from his previous statement is suppressing the truth.[85]

Leading questions can be freely asked in cross-examination: "First, and principally, on the supposition that the witness has a bias in favour of the party bringing him forward, and hostile to his

---

77. R v. Abdulla, ILR 7 All 385, 397; see also Exparte Bottemley, (1909) 2 K.B. 14, 16.
78. Barindra v. R, ILR 37 Cal 467.
79. Moor v. Moor, (1954) 2 All ER 458.
80. Kesavan v. State of Kerala, 1960 Ker LJ 546; Chakrapani v. Chandoo, AIR 1959 MP 84.
81. Varkey Joseph v. State of Kerala, 1993 Cr LJ 2010 (para 11) : AIR 1993 SC 1892.
82. Ismail Ibrahim v. State of Goa, 1975 Cr LJ 1335 (Goa, Daman & Diu).
83. Ammathayarammal v. Official Assignee H.C., Madras, AIR 1933 Mad 137.
84. Profulla Kumar v. Emperor, AIR 1931 Cal 401 (FB), disagreeing with the view expressed in Bikram Ali v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Cal 139. See also Shivha Murthy Swamy v. Agodi Songanno, AIR 1969 Mys 12 and Dadabuddappa Gouli v. Kalu Kanu Gouli, AIR 2000 Kant 158 (paras 5-8 and 14).
85. Prabhu v. State of Maharashtra, ILR 1977 Bom 1505.

opponent. Secondly, that the party calling a witness has an advantage over his adversary, in knowing before hand what the witness will prove, or at least is expected to prove, and that, consequently, if he were allowed to lead, he might interrogate in such a manner as to extract only so much of the knowledge of the witness as would be favourable to his side, or even put a false gloss upon the whole."[86]

The reason why leading questions are allowed to be put to an adverse witness in cross-examination is that the purpose of a cross-examination being to test the accuracy, credibility and general value of the evidence given, and to shift the facts already stated by the witness, it sometimes becomes necessary for a party to put leading questions in order to elicit facts in support of his case, even though the facts so elicited may be entirely unconnected with facts testified to in an examination-in-chief. Where a general order is made that no leading questions shall be allowed in cross-examination, the order is illegal and vitiates the trial.[87]

With respect to the mode of conducting a cross-examination, it is admitted on all hands that leading questions may in general be asked, but this does not mean that the counsel may go to the length of putting the very words into the mouth of the witness which he is to echo back again. Neither does it sanction the putting of a question assuming that facts have been proved which have not been proved, or that particular answers have been given contrary to the fact. The rule ought also to receive some further qualification where the witness is evidently hostile to the party calling him, for although it appears in one case to have been laid down that leading questions may always be put in cross-examination, whether a witness be unwilling or not, some restriction should surely be imposed where the witness betrays a vehement desire to serve the cross-examination party. It is no answer to say that the party, who originally called the witness, has brought the evil on his own head, for a fraudulent witness might purposely conceal his bias in favour of one party, and thus induce the other to call him, or he might be an attesting witness, or other person whom it was necessary to examine to establish some technical part of the case. To allow such a witness to have the most favourable answers suggested to him through the medium of leading questions would be obviously unjust.[88]

WIGMORE (3rd Ed., Vol. 3, Section 773) observes: "As the purpose of the cross-examination is to sift testimony and weaken its force, in short to weaken the direct testimony, it is well-settled that, on cross-examination of oponent's witness, ordinarily no question can be improper as leading. Yet, where the reason ceases, the rule ceases also; thus, where an opponent's witness proves to be in fact biased in favour of the cross-examiner, the danger of leading questions arises and they may be forbidden."

The Supreme Court has held that questions in cross-examination, which would appear to the court vexatious, or misleading and not relevant, can be disallowed by the court; the cross-examination in the garb of putting leading questions shall not actually mislead the witness. It would be travesty of justice if the presiding judge remains a silent spectator or a mere recording machine; when occasion arises he should evince active interest, by putting questions to witnesses who could not understand the question, or is misled in such a way that it has become difficult to follow the question, so that he may answer properly if he understands it in a proper way, but the judge should not unduly trespass upon the functions of a cross-examiner.[89]

Evidence as to matters in writing.

S. 144. Any witness may be asked, whilst under examination, whether any contract, grant or other disposition of property, as to which he is giving evidence, was not contained in a document, and if he says that it was, or if he is about to make any statement as to the contents of any document, which, in the opinion of the Court, ought to be produced, the adverse party may object to such evidence being given until such document is produced, or until facts have been proved which entitle the party who called the witness to give secondary evidence of it.

---

86. BEST, 12th Edn., S. 641, p. 561.
87. Sri L.P. v. Inspector General of Police, (1954) All LJ 316.
88. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 1431, pp. 912-913.
89. Ram Chandra v. State of Haryana, AIR 1981 SC 1036.

Explanation.*—A witness may give oral evidence of statements made by other persons about the contents of documents if such statements are in themselves relevant facts.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section is meant to enable parties to carry out the provisions of Ss. 91 and 92. It should be read along with those sections. It refes both to the examination-in-chief and cross-examination. A party can compel the opposite party to produce a document (or to make out a case for letting in its secondary evidence)—

(1) When a witness is about to give evidence as to any (a) contract, (b) grant, or (c) other disposition of property, which is contained in a document; or

(2) When he is about to make any statement as to the contents of any document.

This rule does not forbid a witness to give oral evidence of statements as to relevant facts, made by other persons, about the contents of documents.

Cross-examination as to previous statements in writing.

S. 145. A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing or reduced into writing, and relevant to matters in question, without such writing being shown to him, or being proved; but, if it is intended to contradict him by the writing, his attention must, before the writing can be proved, be called to those parts of it which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him.

SYNOPSIS

1.	Principle and scope ...	1270	12.	Police Diaries ...	1277
2.	Previous statements ...	1271	13.	Statements to police ...	1278
3.	Made by him ...	1272	14.	Statement can be used only to contradict ...	1279
4.	In writing or reduced to writing ...	1272	15.	Statements under Section 162, CrPC ...	1280
5.	Oral statements ...	1273	16.	Statements under Section 164, CrPC ...	1281
6.	Relevant matters in question ...	1273	17.	Committing court statements ...	1281
7.	To contradict ...	1273	18.	Pleadings—Depositions ...	1283
8.	Opportunity to explain contradiction ...	1274	19.	Other statements ...	1283
9.	Party's admission ...	1276	20.	Section 145, 146, 155 and 157 ...	1283
10.	Inquest report ...	1276	21.	Recalling a witness ...	1284
11.	F.I.R. ...	1276

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section indicates one of the modes in which the credit of a witness may be impeached.[1]

A witness may be cross-examined as to any statements as to relevant facts made by him on a former occasion, in writing or reduced to writing, without showing the writing to him or proving the same. But if it is intended to contradict him by the writing, his attention must be called to the writing. The object of this provision is either to test the memory of a witness or to contradict him by previous statements in writing. Such writing may be documents, letters, depositions, police diaries, etc. It must be noted that the previous record should be in writing. The witness may also be contradicted by his previous verbal statements (S. 153, Exception 2).

---

1. Queen Empress v. Mannu, ILR (1897) 19 All 390, 421 (FB).

The Privy Council observed: "On general principle it would appear to be sound that, if a witness is under cross-examination on oath, he should be given the opportunity, if documents are to be used against him, to tender his explanation and to clear up the particular point of ambiguity or dispute. This is a general, salutary and intelligible rule. Fortunately, the law of India pronounces no uncertain sound upon the same matter."[2]

HALSBURY'S LAW OF ENGLAND (4th Ed., Vol. 17, Para 284, Page 198): "A witness may also be cross-examined as to a previous statement made by him in writing, without the writing being shown to him.[3] But if it is intended to contradict him by such writing, his attention must be called to those parts of the writing which are to be used for that purpose,[4] and the judge may, at any time during the trial, require production of the writing for his own inspection, and he may thereupon make use of it for the purposes of the trial as he thinks fit."

A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing, or reduced to writing and relevant to the matter in question, without such writing being shown to him or being proved; but, if it is intended to contradict him by the writing, his attention must before the writing can be proved, be called to those parts of it which are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him. A witness cannot be allowed to refresh his memory with his prior statement recorded under S. 161, Cr.P.C.[5] Section 145 applies also to a hostile witness examined by the party who calls him under Section 154.[6] One of the modes in which, according to the Evidence Act, the credit of a witness may be impeached, is by proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted; and Section 145 gives the right to cross-examine a witness on previous statements made by him and reduced to writing, when these previous statements are relevant to the matter in issue.[7]

In a way this section is an exception to the general rule forbidding all use of the contents of a written document until the document itself be produced.

Resort to this section is necessary only if a witness denies that he made the former statement.[8] A witness can be contradicted only when the denies his statement and not when he admits it.[9]

It is clear that the first part of this section deals with cross-examination other than by way of contradiction, and the second part by way of contradiction only. It is not possible to invoke the second part without putting questions under the first.[10]

A witness may be questioned as to his previous written statements for two purposes; it may be to test his memory; and the very object would be defeated if the writing were placed in his hand before the questions were asked, or it may be to contradict him; and here it would be obviously unfair not to give him every opportunity of seeing how the matter really stands.

The question whether there has been a compliance with the provisions of Section 145, is not one of form but of substance. If there has been substantial compliance, that is sufficient in law.[11]

2. PREVIOUS STATEMENTS

Previous statement of a witness cannot be used as substantive evidence. It can only be used by the defence to contradict or discredit any witness.[12] Statements which are not fully recorded or statements which are recorded in the form of memorandum are statements falling within the ambit of this section. The statement may be either written by the witness himself or which was reduced into writing by

---

2. Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Srinivas Pandit, AIR 1915 PC 75 : 42 IA 135. See also Venkatlal v. Kanhayalal, AIR 1963 MP 155.
3. North Australian Co. v. Goldsborough & Co., (1893) 2 Ch 381 CA.
4. See R. v. Yousry, (1914) 11 Cr App R 13, 18.
5. Simon v. State of Kerala, 1996 Cr LJ 3368 (paras 11 and 12) (Ker).
6. WHITLEY STOKES Vol. 2, Page 926.
7. Queen-Empress v. Mannu, ILR (1897) 19 All 390 (42 1-2) (FB).
8. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, (1952) SCR 812 : AIR 1952 SC 214.
9. Dhanabal v. State of T.N., AIR 1980 SC 628; State of Rajasthan v. Kartar Singh, (1971) 1 SCR 56 : AIR 1970 SC 1305.
10. Kanu Ambu Vish v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 2256.
11. Kalluri Vema Reddy v. Reddi Gangi Reddi, AIR 1958 AP 571 (DB); Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 214.
12. Chinnammal v. State of T.N., (1997) 1 SCC 145 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 51.

someone else.[13] The word 'statement' is used in its primary meaning as something that is stated. A witness may be contradicted by statements in a diary kept by him, though there is no question of any communication of those statements to another person.[14] Where the previous statement was recorded by an order of a court having no jurisdiction, it was held that such a statement can be made use for the purpose of Section 145, 155 and 157.[15] Former statement of witness to a person not legally competent to investigate, though not admissible under Section 157 of the Evidence Act can be used for contradiction under Section 145.[16] Statement of a prosecution witness, recorded by a doctor as a dying declaration, is a 'previous statement' of the prosecution witness, and the accused has a right under Section 145 to cross-examine the prosecution witness with regard to it.[17] Where a person making a dying declaration survived, his declaration can be used as a previous statement, either to corroborate or to contradict his subsequent version.[18] Statement though not admissible as a dying declaration under Section 32, can be used for contradiction under Section 145 and for impeaching credit of witness under Section 155.[19]

In a suit for ejectment alleging monthly tenancy, it was held that the defendant, in support of his plea that the tenancy was for a fixed period of 20 years, can use the previous statement in a document, though unregistered and unstamped, for the purpose of the first part of Section 145 without bringing into play Section 91 of Evidence Act and Section 49 of the Registration Act, as under the first part, it is not necessary to show the document to him. If the second part of Section 145, is to be used, Section 49 of the Registration Act would come into play as the document has to be shown to the witness.[20]

3. MADE BY HIM

The section is attracted only when two contradictory statements are made by the same witness and not when the statement of one is contradicted by the other.[21]

A and M gave two separate complaints in respect of the same incident, with divergent versions, and those complaints were registered as two F.I.R.s. B was questioned during investigation: Police prosecuted B and M; it was held that no portion of B's statement could be used to contradict the statement of M in his complaint either under Section 157 or Section 145; and B not being examined as a witness in the case, his previous statement could not be used either to contradict his evidence or corroborate it.[22]

A witness can be confronted with the statements made in writing in his account-books; but a clerk who writes the accounts at the mere dictation of his employer cannot be so confronted. In a case, A was employed by B, at intervals of a week or fortnight, to write up B's account-books. B furnishing him with the necessary information either orally or from loose memoranda. It was held that the entries so made could not be given in evidence to contradict A under this section, as previous statements made by him in writing. The statements were really made, not by A but by B, under whose instructions A had written them.[23]

4. IN WRITING OR REDUCED TO WRITING

Section 145 in express terms applies to previous statements in writing, or reduced to writing only. Where the Magistrate, who exhibited the former statement of the witness, admitted that the exhibit bore no signature or seal of his office, the said exhibit thus was not proved to be the former statement of the witness.[24]

---

13. President, S.V.B. Mandal v. Yellaiah, AIR 1969 AP 148; Emperor v. Najibudin, AIR 1933 Pat 589.
14. Bhogilal Chunilal Pandya v. State of Bombay, AIR 1959 SC 356.
15. State of Punjab v. Vishwajit Singh, AIR 1987 P&H 126; Ram Krishun v. R., 1946 Pat 82.
16. State v. Pareswar Ghasi, AIR 1968 Ori 20.
17. Ranjit Singh v. State, 1971 Cr LJ 1225 (All).
18. Siddu v. State of M.P., 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 255 (DB) (MP).
19. King Behara v. State, ILR (1968) Cut 660.
20. Remington R. v. Lilawati, 1974 Punj 350.
21. Mohanlal Gangaram Gehani v. Maharashtra, AIR 1982 SC 839; Biswanath Prasad v. Dwarka Prasad, AIR 1974 SC 117; B. Bhavamma v. B. Ramamma, AIR 1924 Mad 537; Mahar Rai, Bharat Rai v. State of Bihar, AIR 1968 SC 128.
22. Mahar Rai, Bharat Rai v. State of Bihar, AIR 1968 SC 128.
23. Munchershaw Bezonji v. New Dhurumsey S. & W. Company, ILR (1880) 4 Bom 576.
24. Rajendra Singh v. State of Bihar, 2000 Cr LJ 2199 (para 4) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 1779.

The English Law places statements in writing and oral statements at par when such statements are used for the purpose of contradicting a witness in cross-examination. The law as laid down by the Indian Evidence Act, is different from the English Law on this point and the principles of English Law cannot be followed when they are inconsistent with the express text of the law as contained in the Indian Evidence Act.[25]

Statements recorded on tape recorder are statements within Section 145.[26]

There is nothing in the Evidence Act to show that the document with reference to which a witness is going to be contradicted should come from proper custody.[27]

5. ORAL STATEMENTS

There is no provision in the Evidence Act regarding the procedure to be adopted for contradicting a witness by his previous oral statement. Though the Evidence Act was intended to be a complete code of the law of evidence in respect of matters expressly provided for in it, there are some matters in respect of which, in the absence of any provisions in the Act, the wholesome principle in the English Law of Evidence, as enacted in Section 145 of that Act, may be applied.[28]

6. RELEVANT MATTERS IN QUESTION

It is no part of the court's duty to enter upon a roving enquiry in the middle of a trial on matters which are collateral to the main issue, such as whether a statement is made under threats and duress of the police. If the previous statements are alleged to have been made under police threats and duress, then court is not bound to make an enquiry.[29]

7. TO CONTRADICT

Section 145 of the Evidence Act applies only to contradiction, but if there are omissions in previous statements, which do not amount to contradictions but throw some doubt on the veracity of what was omitted, the uncertainity or doubt may be capable of removal by questions in re-examination.[30] In order to see when there is a contradiction by omission, it is necessary to find out whether the two statements cannot stand together. It is also necessary to see whether the statement which the witness has made in the witness box should have been made by him while reporting the matter soon after the incident.[31] Every omission does not amount to a contradiction; omissions which by necessary implication lead to conflicting versions between the statements made before the police and the court would amount to contradiction.[32]

The witness in their statements before the police attributed a clear intention to the accused to commit murder but before the Court they stated that the accused was insane and, therefore, he committed the murder. It was held that in the circumstances it was necessarily implied in the previous statements of the witness before the police that the accused was not insane at the time he committed the murder. In this view, the previous statements of the witnesses before the police could be used to contradict their version in the court.[33]

All omissions found in the statements made to the police are not contradictions; hence it is not open to the court to make use of such omissions to show that the witness has said in the court something which

---

25. Ram Ratan v. State, AIR 1956 Raj 196 relying on Muktawandas Ajab Das v. Emperor, AIR 1939 Nag 13.
26. Pratap v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 SC 72; Rama Reddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 162.
27. R. v. Raja Ram, AIR 1934 Nag 35.
28. State v. Minaketan, AIR 1952 Ori 267; explaining Muktawandas Ajab Das v. Emperor, AIR 1939 Nag 13; See CONTRA Ram Ratan v. State, AIR 1956 Raj 196.
29. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 214.
30. Laxman v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1974 SC 308.
31. Dasu v. State of Maharashtra, 1985 Cr LJ 1933.
32. State of Hadibanelu, ILR (1973) Cut 601 (DB); Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012; State of Assam v. Rameshwar Sarma, ILR (1963) 15 Assam 552; Dandapani Samanta Rai v. Duryodhan Pradhan, AIR 1968 Ori 167; Dharam Vir v. State of U.P., 1990 Cr LJ 839; See also State v. Md. Misor Ali, 1965 Assam 151; Dama alias Damodar Jena v. State, ILR (1969) Cut 265.
33. Dahyabhai Chhaganbhai Thakkar v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1964 SC 1563.

he did not say before the police.[34] Variations or omissions in the evidence of a witness of trivial details, would not amount to contradicting and cannot make any dent in the testimony of the witness.[35] Omission in police statements, or statements not recorded by police officer could not be used to contradict witnesses.[36]

The purpose of contradicting a witness is only to attack his veracity. The duty of the court is to find out if a witness, who had made a contradictory statement earlier, is telling the truth in court. It is not the duty of the court to find out whether the previous statement made by the witness was true or not.[37]

Merely by putting suggestions to the witness and the witness denying the same, will not amount to putting contradiction to the witness.[38]

8. OPPORTUNITY TO EXPLAIN CONTRADICTION

There can be no hard and fast rule as regards compliance with the requirements of Section 145. All that is required is that the witness must be treated fairly and be afforded a reasonable opportunity of explaining his contradictions, after his attention has been drawn to them in a fair and reasonable manner. The matter is one of substance and not of mere form.[39]

There is a cardinal distinction between a party to the proceeding who is the author of a prior statement and a witness who is examined and is sought to be discredited by use of his prior statement. In the former case, an admission by a party is substantive evidence, if it fulfils the requirements of Section 21; in the latter case a prior statement is used to discredit a witness, and it does not become substance evidence. In the former case, there is no requirement that the statement containing the admission has to be put to the party, because it is evidence proprio vigore, whereas in the latter case, the court cannot be invited to disbelieve a witness on the strength of a prior contradictory statement made by him, unless it has been put to him as required by Section 145.[40]

A witness cannot be disbelieved without his attention being drawn to the documents inconsistent with his deposition, even if the documents are produced after the examination. In such a case, he should be recalled for further cross-examination.[41] A previous statement recorded under Section 164, Cr.P.C. should be put to the witness during his cross-examination before the tribunal or Magistrate, giving him an opportunity to explain contradiction between his evidence and statement.[42] Where A stated that he was told something by B who was examined earlier, the statement of A is not admissible as it is hearsay, unless B is recalled and given an opportunity to explain it.[43] In an application by the husband under Section 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act, the statements of the wife in proceedings under Section 100, (old) Cr.P.C. (now Section 99) before a Magistrate, are inadmissible unless those statements are put to the wife to contradict her under Section 145.[44]

Where statements of witnesses recorded were brought on record on admission of the witness in cross-examination that they had made those statements, but in a subsequent trial, they were not put to the

---

34. Vema Reddy v. Gangireddi, AIR 1958 AP 571 (DB); Dukhi Dei v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 33 (DB).
35. Kishan Chand v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1982 SC 1511.
36. Krushna Chandra Pail v. State, AIR 1968 Ori 172.
37. State v. Harish Kumar, ILR (1975) 1 Delhi 182.
38. Shaik Subhani v. State of A.P., 2000 Cr LJ 321 (para 24) (AP).
39. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 214; Kavuri Vbrtaateswarlu v. State of A.P., 1981 Cr LJ (NOC) 133 (AP)(DB); Poolyani Joga v. State of M.P., 1964 (1) Cr LJ 455 (DB).
40. Tapan Dass v. Sosti Dass, AIR 1986 Cal 390; Biswanath Prasad v. Dwarka Prasad, AIR 1974 SC 117; Bhagrat Singh v. Bhairathi, AIR 1966 Sc 405; Shrilal v. State, AIR 1963 M.P. 155; Kali Pada Das v. State, AIR 1058 Cal 186; Ganakanta Das v. State of Assam, 1990 Cr LJ 219 (Gau)(DB); Chanhoo Mahto v. Jang Bahadur Singh, AIR 1957 Pat 293 (DB); Arjun Mahto v. Monda Mahatan, AIR 1971 Pat 215; Veeraiah v. Sonde Mall, ILR 1963 AP 754; Lal Singh v. Guru Granth Saheb, AIR 1957 Pepsu 101 (DB); Veerbasavaadhya v. Devotees of Lingadagudi Mutt, AIR 1973 Mys 280; Durga Prasad v. Anandi Kuer, ILR (1960) 2 All 277; University of Punjab v. P.C. Handa, 1971 Punj 177; Abdul Majid v. King, AIR 1950 Cal 165; Bejoy Chand Patra v. State, AIR 1950 Cal 363.
41. Naba Kumar Das v. Rudra Narayan, AIR 1923 PC 95; Goli Ramaswami v. Narla Jagnnadha Rao, AIR 1962 A.P. 94.
42. Bidya Bhushan Moha Patra v. State of Orissa, AIR 1960 Ori 68 (DB); State of Orissa v. Bidya Bhushan Mohapatra, AIR 1963 SC 779; In re, Saibanna Tippanna, AIR 1966 Mys 248; Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012 : 1959 Cr LJ 1231; K.K. Sharma v. State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 2609 (para 16) (Raj).
43. Avadh Behari Sharma v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 738.
44. Gurdev Kaur v. Sarwan Singh, AIR 1959 Punj 162.

witnesses and no opportunity was given to explain them, these statements are not to be relied on for contradiction as the provisions of Section 145 are not complied with.[45] Where the witness, having more than one opportunity to explain his statement in a previous suit, does not avail himself of it, his deposition in the previous suit is admissible to prove an admission made by him.[46]

Where a witness is not contradicted by his attention being called to particular parts of his previous report, it cannot be said that the statement made by him on matters other than those which were put to him was unreliable merely because the details referred to by him in court are different from those mentioned by him in his previous report.[47] Where documents are used for the purpose of contradicting a witness, without calling his attention to the portions of the documents so used, no reliance can be placed on such documents.[48] Statement of a witness made in a previous case can be used in subsequent case, to contradict him or to impeach his character; but the witness's attention should be drawn to his previous statements.[49] It is necessary to call the attention of the witness to those parts of the two statements separately to point out the omissions when they are sought to be used for contradiction.[50]

Where the purpose of the production of the document at the time of cross-examination of a witness seemed to have been well understood by him, and from the record of his deposition it was manifest that after being shown the document, he was directly asked whether it was not a fact that he was not at a particular place on the alleged date as was clear from the document, and where on re-examination no attempt was made to elicit any explanation, it was held the witness was properly contradicted.[51]

When the witness is contradicted by his previous statement, then that part of the statement which has been put to the witness will be considered along with the evidence to assess the veracity of the witness. The whole of the previous statement, however, cannot be treated as substantive evidence.[52]

In order to attract the applicability of Section 145, it is essential that the attention of the witness is invited to only those passages in his previous statement which clearly contradict some portions of the testimony of the witness before the court.[53] When the witness in the Sessions Court who was confronted with his earlier statement in the committal court, admitted that his earlier statement was false, as it was made under police pressure, it was held that there was sufficient compliance with Section 145 though earlier statement was read over in extenso and his attention was not drawn to each sentence.[54] When the prosecution cross-examines a witness and asks him, if he made certain statements before the police during investigation or before a Magistrate under Section 164, Cr.P.C. and the witness denies it, it is the duty of the prosecution to confront him with those statements or get them marked as exhibits, so that the witness might be afforded an opportunity either to explain the contradiction or deny them.[55] Under Section 145 of Evidence Act, it is necessary that witness should be confronted if his evidence is to be attacked by a previous statement, but it is not necessary where a person is prosecuted under Section 193, I.P.C. for perjury; the fact that in the judicial proceeding in which he is alleged to have given his false evidence he was not confronted with the previous statement, will not vitiate his prosecution.[56] Where a complainant examined in court, was not confronted with his previous inconsistent statements, the defence cannot take advantage of the inconsistency, if any, in revision, as he had no opportunity to explain at the trial.[57]

---

45. Salig Ram v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 All 138. See also Rajendra Singh v. State of Bihar, 2000 Cr LJ 2199 (para 4) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 1779.
46. Venkat Lal v. Kanhiyalal, AIR 1963 MP 155; Pannalal v. Union of India, AIR 1956 VP 26.
47. Baga Bharti v. Sarkar, AIR 1950 Raj 10.
48. Veeraiah v. Sonde Mall, ILR 1963 AP 754; Chunilal v. Hartford Fire Insurance Co. Ltd., AIR 1958 Punj 440; Jayalakshmi Devamma v. Janardhan Reddy, AIR 1959 AP 272; Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Srinivas Pandit, AIR 1915 PC 7; Ajodhia Prasad Bhargava v. Bhawani Shankar Bhargava, AIR 1957 All 1.
49. Doman Mahton v. Surajdeo Prasad, AIR 1970 Pat 95.
50. Ghanshyam v. State of M.P., 1990 Cr LJ 1017 (MP).
51. Baikuntha Nath Chattoraj v. Prasanna Moyi Debya, AIR 1922 PC 409.
52. Som Nath v. Union of India, AIR 1971 SC 1910; Kanu, Ambu Vish v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 2256; Melappa v. Guramma, AIR 1956 Bom 129.
53. 1975 (2) Cr LT 285 (HP); Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 214; Emperor v. Zawar Rahman, ILR 31 Cal 142 (FB); Emperor v. Rahenudda Mondal, AIR 1944 Cal 323.
54. State of Rajasthan v. Kartar Singh, AIR 1970 SC 1305.
55. In re, Saibanna Tippanna, AIR 1968 Mys 248.
56. Ishar Chand v. State, AIR 1951 Punj 131.
57. Narasingo Maharana v. Chaitanya Sahu, AIR 1969 Ori 59.

If the statement of the witness is too long and only one or two statements in it are to be used for contradiction, mere reading the whole lengthy statement may confuse the witness and it would not be a fair method of drawing attention of the witness. So, it would be proper to put fact by fact in such statement so as to give a fair opportunity to the witness to explain.[58]

Where copies of the approver's statement and confession recorded, were not supplied to the accused for cross-examination, it was held that, though the trial could not be said to be illegal the accused had been considerably prejudiced by being deprived of valuable materials for cross-examination of the approver, for the purpose of testing his reliability.[59]

9. PARTY'S ADMISSION

Where a party appearing as defendant in a suit who had made an admission in a plaint in a prior suit was not examined as witness, Section 145 cannot be invoked but previous statement can be proved as admission against such party under Section 21.[60]

Where the party had referred to some of the documents in his examination-in-chief, it could not be said that his attention was not drawn to the contradictions contained in those documents.[61]

Document contrary to previous admission cannot be used against the party unless opportunity to explain is given.[62] When a document is admitted by the opponent's counsel to question the opponent on the admission, when the opponent is in the witness box, the admission need not be put to him before using it against him for contradiction.[63]

10. INQUEST REPORT

An inquest report is admissible except under Section 145 of the Evidence Act for contradiction.[64] It is not a substantive piece of evidence and can be used only for corroboration for evidence of the panch witness and not for convicting the accused.[65] Inquest report cannot be used to contradict the prosecution witnesses to whom the dying declaration was made.[66]

Statement in panchanama can be used in evidence only for contradicting witness whose statement is contained in the panchanama. But his attention must, before if can be so used, be called to parts sought to be used for contradicting him.[67]

11. F.I.R.

The first information report (FIR) is not substantive evidence. It is an information of a cognizable offence given under Section 154, Cr.P.C. statements made in it can be used for contradicting and discrediting a witness under Section 145.[68] Where the person who lodged the F.I.R. was not examined as he had died during the trial, the contents of the F.I.R. could not be used as substantive piece of evidence.

---

58. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 214; Ramaswami v. Jagannadha Rao, 1962 AP 94; Jatindra v. Sushilendra, AIR 1965 Cal 328; Inder Deo v. State, AIR 1959 All 238.
59. State of Kerala v. Thomas Cherian, 1982 Cr LJ 2303 (DB) Ker.
60. Harihar v. Nabakishore, AIR 1963 Ori 45 (DB).
61. Shiv Ram v. Shiv Charan Singh, AIR 1964 Raj 126 (DB); Lal Singh v. Guru Granth Saheb, AIR 1951 Pepsu 101; Ram Kishun v. Kausal Kishore, AIR 1958 Pat 294; Narayan v. Gopal, AIR 1960 SC 100; Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Srinivas Pandit, AIR 1915 PC 7.
62. Jatindra Nath v. Sushilendra Nath, AIR 1965 Cal 328; A H. Abdulla v. State of Kerala, 1981 Cr LJ (NOC) 55 (Ker).
63. Ajodya Prasad v. Bhavani Shankar, AIR 1957 All 1 (FB); Makhea Kumbhar v. Jaguli Kumbhar, ILR 1966 Cut 483.
64. Pandurang v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1955 SC 216; See also Ramanand v. State of H.P., ILR 1974 HP 509 (DB).
65. Guggillasanthosh Reddy v. State of A.P., 2001 Cr LJ NOC 110 (AP) : (2001) 1 Andh LT (Cri) 76.
66. George* v. State of Kerala, AIR 1998 SC 1376 : 1998 Cr LJ 2034.
67. Kanu Ambu Vish* v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 2256.
68. Nankhu Singh v. Bihar, AIR 1973 SC 491; Shankar v. State of U.P., AIR 1975 SC 757; Hasib v. State of Bihar, AIR 1972 SC 283; Gunandhi Sundara v. State of Orissa, 1984 Cr LJ 1215 (Ori); Pundalik v. State, AIR 1957 MB 72; Bhagirathi Burhia v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 99 (DB); In re. Kalu Singh Motisingh, AIR 1964 MP 30 (DB); Bir Singh v. State of H.P., ILR 1974 HP 948; Chaat Ram v. State of Haryana, ILR (1975) 1 Punj 327; State v. B.K. Mishra Commissioner of Hindu Relation Endoments, Orissa, ILR 1970 Cut 1130.

it could only be used to corroborate or contradict the maker, if he had been examined.[69] The first information report recorded under Section 154, Criminal Procedure Code, may be used to contradict the informant under this section.[70] It is essential that the attention of the witness should be drawn to those parts of the document, which it is intended to use for the purpose of contradicting him, in order that he may be given an opportunity to furnish a suitable explanation with regard to the alleged contradictions. Statements in the first information report cannot be used for the purpose of discrediting any witness, other than the first informant, for such use is in effect to treat the first information report as substantive evidence in the case.[71]

F.I.R. in case of dacoity has little value.[72]

12. POLICE DIARIES

"It is the absolute duty of Judges and Magistrates to entirely disregard all statements and entries in special diaries as being in any sense legal evidence for any purpose, except for one solitary purpose of contradicting the Police Officer who made the special diary when they do afford such a contradiction; and even in that case they are not evidence of anything except that such Police Officer made the particular entry which is at variance with his subsequently given evidence, they are not evidence that what is stated in the entry was true or correctly represents what was said or done.[73]

"Where the Police Officer who made the special diary is allowed to refresh his memory and does look at an entry in the diary for the purpose of refreshing his memory, the provisions of Section 161 of the Indian Evidence Act ... apply, and the accused or his agent is entitled to see such entry in the special diary and to cross-examine such Police Officer thereupon. There is no provision in Section 172 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 enabling any person other than the Police Officer who made the special diary to refresh his memory by looking at the special diary and the necessary implication is that a special diary cannot be used to enable any witness other than the Police Officer who made the special diary to refresh his memory by looking at it. This is in truth a general principle of law. The Criminal Court, but not an accused person or his agent unless the Police Officer has been allowed to look at the diary in order to refresh his memory, can use the special diary for the purpose of contradicting the Police Officer who made it, but before doing so the Court must comply with the specific enactment of Section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act.....and call the attention of the Police Officer to such parts of the special diary as are to be used for the purpose of contradicting him, otherwise such a use of the special diary would be illegal. There is no provison in Section 172 of the Code of Criminal Procedure enabling the Court, the prosecution or the accused to use the special diary for the purpose of contradicting any witness other than the Police Officer who made it, and the necessary implication is that the special diary cannot be used to contradict any witness other than the Police Officer who made it. Section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act ..... does not either extend or control the provisons of Section 172 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is only if the Court uses the special diary for the purpose of contradicting the Police Officer who made it that S. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act.....applies, and in such case it applies for that purpose only, and not for the purpose of enabling the Court or a party to contradict any other witness in the case, or to show it or any part of its contents to any other witness. No reading of S. 172 of the Code of Criminal Procedure consistent with the rules construction and a knowledge of the English language is possible by which the special diary is to be used to contradict any person except the Police Officer who made it. It is not enacted in S. 172 of the Code of Criminal Procedure by reference to S. 145 of the Indian Evidence Act..... or otherwise that if the special diary is used by the Court to contradict the Police Officer who made it, it may thereupon or thereafter be used to contradict any other witness in the case.[74] The Privy Council has approved of this ruling in a criminal appeal from the judgment of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of the Central Provinces. The Judicial Commissioner admitted in a murder trial statements made by witnesses to the police and entered in the police diary. The Judicial Committee observed that the Judicial Commissioner went wrong in doing so and held that a diary made by the Police Officer, under S. 172 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, might be used under that section to

---

69. Harkirat Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1997 SC 3231.
70. Mani Mohan Ghose v. Emperor, ILR (1931) 58 Cal 1312.
71. Emperor v. Rahemuddin Mondal, ILR (1943) 2 Cal 381; Visar Ali v. State, (1957) 1 All 361 (SC) : AIR 1957 SC 366.
72. Ram Rao Ekoba v. Crown, AIR 1957 Nag 237.
73. PER EDGE, C.J., in Queen-Empress v. Mannu, ILR (1897) 19 All 390, 412 (FB); Dadan Gazi v. Emperor, (1906) 33 Cal 1023, 1026, 1027.
74. PER EDGE, C.J. in Queen-Empress v. Mannu, ILR (1897) 19 All 390, 393, 394 (FB).

assist the Court which tried the case by suggesting means of further elucidating points which need clearing up, and which were material for the purpose of doing justice between the Crown and the accused, but not containing entries which would by themselves be taken to be evidence of any date, fact, or statement contained in the diary, and that the Police Officer who made the diary entry might be confronted with it, but not any other witness.[75]

Once the diary is used, where statements under Section 161 were recorded, the accused will have a right to inspect and obtain copies of such portions of the diary, for using under Section 145 and 159 of this Act.[76]

The only use to which any part of the statement made by the witness to the police and recorded in the police diary can be put, is to contradict the witness.[77] It was held by the Allahabad High Court that the entries of a case diary could not be relied upon by the prosecution as substantive evidence. It can only be used for contradicting prosecution witnesses.[78]

In trials arising within the then Presidency Town of Calcutta, it was held that the accused cannot get copies of statements of witnesses recorded in police diaries as a matter of course; but in suitable cases the Magistrate can order the granting of such copies under the provisions of Section 145 read with Section 165 of the Evidence Act, without making the accused go through the formalities of Section 163 of the Act. In this view of the matter, the practice referred to in the order of the Presidency Magistrate that, in the Presidency Town of Calcutta, applications for copies of statements in police diaries were rejected were held not to be a correct practice and that the practice required modifications.[79]

13. STATEMENTS TO POLICE

As regards the contradiction of a witness by a previous statement, S. 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 sanctions a very extraordinary procedure. This section in its ordinary application is intended for the purpose of such contradiction by a written previous statement for which the witness is responsible. This cannot in terms apply to a statement recorded under S. 161 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, for the record of which he cannot be held to be directly responsible and which he does not sign. The Legislature, however, intended that the principle of this section should apply and that attention of the witness should be called to those parts of diary entries by which it is intended to contradict him by proving that they represent the actual statement of the witness to the police. In many cases the investigating officer may be able to prove that the writing is an accurate record or at any rate, a correct summary of the statements made to him by the witness during the course of the investigation. In that event, the writing comes on the record as proof of the statement of the witness.[80]

This section, which has to be read with S. 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, quite clearly indicates that the attention of a witness is to be called to the previous statement before the writing can be proved. If the witness admits the previous statement, or explains any discrepancy or contradiction, it becomes unnecessary for the statement thereafter to be proved. On the other hand, if the statement still requires to be proved that can be done by calling the person before whom the statement was made[81] A statement made by a witness to a Police Officer in the course of an investigation can be used only to contradict him in the manner provided by this section and for no other purpose.[82] The attention of the witness must be drawn to those parts of his statement before the police by which it is sought to contradict him and he must be given a clear opportunity to explain the inconsistency. The whole of his statement

---

75. Dal Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1917 PC 25 : (1917) 19 Bom LR 510 : 44 IA 137 : 44 Cal 876; King-Emperor v. Ngu Lun Thoung, ILR (1935) 13 Ran 570 (FB); Ahmed Miya v. Emperor, ILR (1944) 1 Cal 133.
76. See Commentary under Section 159 and 160 of this Act.
77. State of M.P. v. Kalu, AIR 1959 MP 391; Ram Bali v. State, AIR 1952 All 289; Sakha Wat Imami v. Emperor, AIR 1937 Nag 50.
78. Bandhu v. State of U.P., 1997 Cr LJ 3010 (All), distinguishing Kanu Ambu Vish v. State of Maharashtra, 1971 SCC (Cri) 211 : AIR 1971 SC 2256 and Malkiyat Singh v. State of Punjab, 1991 SCC (Cri) 976. See also State of Kerala v. Babu, 1999 Cr LJ 3491 (paras 5 and 12) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 2161.
79. Natabar Jana v. State, AIR 1955 Cal 138 (DB).
80. Heramba Lal Ghosh v. Emperor, ILR (1945) 1 Cal 326.
81. Muzaffar Khan v. Crown, ILR (1939) 20 Lah 509 : AIR 1939 Lah 268.
82. Prakash Chand v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1979 Cr LJ 329 : AIR 1979 SC 400; Santha Veerappa Aradhya v. State, ILR (1966) Mys. 1222; Punjab State v. Ramji Dass, (1969) 72 Punj LR 137.

before the police does not become admissible in evidence, but only that part of it to which his attention has been called and, therefore, that part alone should be exhibited or admitted into evidence.[83]

Section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 provides that the accused may be furnished with a copy of the statement of a witness, "in order that any part of such statement, if duly proved, may be used to contradict such witness in the manner provided by Section 145 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872." The words "if duly proved" clearly show that the record of the statement cannot be admitted in evidence straightway but that the officer before whom the statement was made should ordinarily be examined as to any alleged statement or omitted statement that is relied upon by the accused for the purpose of contradicting the witness. The provisions of Section 67 of the Evidence Act apply to this case, as well as to any other similar case. Under S. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code it is not permissible for statements to the police, whether oral or written, to be put in evidence, except with leave of the Court in order to corroborate a prosecution witness, or to contradict a defence witness. A statement to the police can only be used for one purpose, and that is, by the accused to contradict a prosecution witness in the manner provided by this section.[84] The only way a witness can be contradicted by a statement made to the police, under the provisions of S. 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is to prove that portion of his statement to the police which contradicts his evidence and to put it to him under this section so that the witness may be given an opportunity of explaining the contradiction; statements made to the police cannot be used at a trial in any other way.[85]

When a witness admits having signed his previous statements that is enough to prove that some statement of his was recorded and he had appended his signature thereto. Such statements can at best be used to contradict him in the cross-examination of such a witness under Section 145 when he gives evidence at the trial of the accused. When the witness is contradicted by his previous statement, then that part of the statement which has been put to the witness will be considered along with the evidence to determine his veracity. The whole of the previous statement, however, cannot be treated as substantive evidence.[86]

14. STATEMENT CAN BE USED ONLY TO CONTRADICT

Statements of witness made during investigation can be used only for contradicting witness and cannot be used for seeking assurance for prosecution story.[87]

When the court did not allow cross-examination of witness by defence, with reference to the statement made by the witness to the police, then such statement cannot be accepted as corroborating the evidence of another witness.[88]

The witnesses, in their statements before the police, attributed a clear intention to the accused to commit murder, but before the Court they stated that the accused was insane and therefore, he committed the murder. It has held that in the circumstances, it was necessarily implied in the previous statements of the witnesses before the police that the accused was not insane at the time he committed the murder. In this view, the previous statements of the witnesses before the police could be used to contradict their version in the Court.[89]

Cross-examination of defence witness on his previous statement to the police is not permissible. It is unfortunate that our laws do not admit of cross-examination of such a witness in respect of statements made before the police.[90]

---

83. Balak Ram v. State, ILR (1953) 1 All 197.

84. Emperor v. Vithu Balu, (1924) 26 Bom LR 965 : AIR 1924 Bom 510; Emperor v. Shaikh Usman, (1927) 52 Bom 195 : 29 Bom LR 1581 : AIR 1928 Bom 23; Azimuddy v. Emperor, (1926) 34 Cal 237 : AIR 1927 Cal 17; Emperor v. Nga Tha Din, AIR 1926 Rangoon 166; dissented from Venkatasubbaiah v. King Emperor, AIR 1925 Mad 579; State v. Rajendra Singh, ILR (1971) Cut 752; Bai Nanda v. Patel Shivabhai, ILR (1966) Guj 500; Madhav Rao v. Md Abdul Matin, ILR (1977) 2 Kant 1403 : 1978 Cr LJ 295; In re, Kalu Singh Moti Singh, AIR 1964 MP 30 (DB); State of Hyderabad v. Annantha Reddy, AIR 1953 Hyd 133 (DB); Satish Kumar v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 265 (paras 21 and 22) (Del).

85. Crown v. Ibrahim, ILR 8 Lah 605; Gopi Chand v. Crown, ILR (1930) 11 Lah 460; Narayana v. King-Emperor, ILR (1932) 56 mad 231.

86. Som Nath v. Union of India, AIR 1971 SC 1910.

87. Sat Paul v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1976 SC 294.

88. Badri v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1976 SC 560; Sagar Chandra Saha v. State, AIR 1962 Cal 85 (DB).

89. Dahyabhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1964 SC 1563; relying on Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012.

90. Laxman Kalu Nikalje v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 1390; Iqbal Singh v. State, 1981 Cr LJ 512 (Del); Narayanan v. Krishnan, 1981 Cr LJ 563 (Ker).

15. STATEMENTS UNDER SECTION 162, Cr.P.C.

Statement of court witnesses made to the police under Section 162, Cr. P.C. cannot be used by the prosecution to contradict them even though they were cited as prosecution witnesses.[1] In view of the special mention in the proviso to Section 162(1), Cr. P.C. a statement under that section cannot be used for corroboration of a prosecution or defence witness or even a court witness.[2]

A statement under Section 162, Cr. P.C. can be used by the accused and, with the permission of the court, by the prosecution only for the purpose of contradicting the witness who has made such a statement in the manner provided by Section 145 of the Evidence Act; when any part of such statement is so used, any part thereof may also be used in the re-examination of such a witness, but only for the purpose of explaining any matter referred to in the cross-examination. The question whether the statements were honestly and faithfully recorded by the Police Officer is entirely irrelevant.[3] It is permissible to use the statements made under Section 162(1), Cr. P.C. to the police, when the prosecution witness turns hostile, for the purpose of contradicting the witness with reference to the statements.[4]

Marking of the whole statement given to the police by the hostile witness, is not contemplated by Section 145. It is only such statements as are proved to be contradictory to his evidence are to be marked as provided by the proviso to Section 162(1), Cr.P.C.[5] Witness need not be declared hostile when the prosecution seeks permission to cross-examine its own witness. The prosecution can be allowed to contradict him under Section 162(1), Cr.P.C.[6] The contradiction found in the evidence of hostile witness shall not be used for corroborating the evidence of other witnesses.[7]

The statement recorded by a Police Officer under Section 162, Cr.P.C. could be used in a Civil Proceeding under Section 145 of the Act. The witnesses can be confronted with the statements and if need be, the officers who took down the statements may be summoned to prove those statements.[8] Notes on which site plan was prepared by Investigating Officer in accordane with the various situations pointed out to him by witnesses can be used only to contradict a witness under Section 162, Cr.P.C.[9] Statement made during investigation may be used to contradict the maker thereof.[10] The portions of unsigned statement recorded by the investigating agency under Section 162, Cr.P.C. can be used during the course of examination of the witness either for the purpose of contradiction or for corroboration.[11] Cross complaint by accused to police can be used to corroborate or contradict the accused, if the accused gives evidence in court.[12]

There is no presumption in law that a statement recorded by the Investigating Officer under Section 161, Cr.P.C. is truthful. The purpose of contradictions between the evidence of a witness before the court and the statement recorded under Section 161, Cr.P.C. is primarily to shake the credit of the witness, it is only to put the court on guard, to scrutinise the evidence with greater care.[13]

Section 145 does not help the accused to obtain copies of the statements of witnesses made during investigation of an offence, though it enables him to make use of the statements if he happens to be in possession of them.[14] After a final report by police finding no case against accused, there was trial on the

---

1. In re, Vajrala Kota Reddi, AIR 1960 AP 76. See also Kemparaju v. State, 2000 Cr LJ 4734 (para 25) (Kant).
2. Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012; See also Surya Rao v. Janakamma, AIR 1964 AP 198. In re, Jogindham, (1962) 2 Cr LJ 523.
3. Prakash Sen v. State, 1988 Cr LJ 1275.
4. Prakash Chand v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1979 SC 400.
5. Annasab Malappa v. State of Karnataka, 1982 Cr LJ 1 553 (Karn)(DB); Koli Nana Bhama v. State of Gujarat, 1986 Cr. L. J. 571 (DB); Punya Prasad v. Balvadra Daeal, 1985 Cr LJ 159; Velayudhan Pillai v. State of Kerala, ILR (1970) 2 Ker 175; Aheibam Ningol v. State of Manipur, AIR 1967 Mani 11.
6. State v. Mohan Hira, AIR 1960 Guj 9; See contra In Re, Kalu Singh Moti Singh, AIR 1964 MP 30.
7. Karuppanna Thevar v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1976 SC 980.
8. Surya Rao v. Janakamma, AIR 1964 AP 198.
9. Jit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 1421.
10. Vijender v. State of Delhi, (1997) 6 SCC 171 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 857.
11. Peethambaran Prasad v. State of Kerala, 1998 Cr LJ 2122 (para 9) (Ker).
12. Lal Pratap Sing v. State, 1963 (1) Cr LJ 355 (Guj).
13. Koli Nana Bhama v. State of Gujarat, 1986 Cr LJ 571 (Guj) relying on: State of Gujarat v. Raghunath, 1985 Cr LJ 1357 (SC) : AIR 1985 SC 1092.
14. Purshottam v. State of Kutch, AIR 1954 SC 700; Jhumarlal v. State, AIR 1957 Raj 185.

basis of a subsequent private complaint. It was held that Section 162, Cr.P.C. still applies and the accused can get copies of statement made to police by prosecution witness for contradicting them.[15] If the evidence of the witness is liable to be contradicted by the statement made by him to the Police Officer, it is the duty of the Police Officer to provide such a statement for the proper administration of justice.[16] If the previous statements of prosecution witnesses, which are reduced into writing are not in the possession of prosecution but are with a third party, the accused has right to summon them from the third party.[17]

In view of the provisions of Section 162, Cr.P.C. and Section 145 of the Evidence Act, it is absolutely clear that the Court should faithfully record the contradictions brought out in the evidence of the witnesses, and there is no question of recording the gist of the statement.[18]

Any other procedure is not countenanced by the Evidence Act, more so as this rule of confronting a witness with a portion of the proved statement recorded by the Police Officer finds special mention in the proviso to sub-Section 1 of Section 162, Cr.P.C.[19] Contradictions and omissions, which were not proved in the manner laid down in Section 145, cannot be made use of by the defence. Any other construction on the express language of Section 162, Cr.P.C. and Section 145, Evidence Act, is not permissible and would be fraught with a risk of miscarriage of justice.[20] Written report made by the witness to police was read out to him during his examination-in-chief. Parts of the report which are relied upon by defence should be duly proved, as required under proviso to Section 162(1), Cr.P.C. before they could be used for contradicting the witness.[21] If it is brought out that the statement which is given in the court is totally absurd, having regard to his police statement, a person is required to be given a chance of explaining as to what he wanted to say or what was his explanation is regard to the contradiction. Section 162 of the Cr.P.C. requires that the contradiction is to be elicited in the manner laid down by Section 145 of Evidence Act.[22] When the statement of a witness made to police under Section 161, Cr.P.C. is not put to him according to the provisions of Section 145 Evidence Act during the trial, it cannot be taken into consideration.[23] Contradictions and omissions which are not proved in the manner laid down in Section 145 cannot be permitted to be made use of by the defence.[24]

16. STATEMENTS UNDER SECTION 164, Cr.P.C.

A previous statement of a witness recorded under Section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code can be used as provided for by this section and Section 155, but it cannot be used as substantive evidence of the facts deposed to therein.[25]

17. COMMITTING COURT STATEMENTS

Evidence recorded in criminal proceeding was transferred to the sessions trial for the purpose of contradicting a witness. That becomes substantive evidence.[26] Where such statements have not been transferred to the Sessions Judge, they cannot be used as substantive evidence.[27] Admissions should be tested by cross-examination.[28]

---

15. Daitari Das v. Kulamani Panda, AIR 1965 Ori 21.
16. State of Bombay v. Seikh Kadar, AIR 1960 Bom 476.
17. Manilal Sahu v. State, AIR 1969 Ori 176.
18. Malik Abdul Salem v. State of Orissa, 1985 Cr LJ 1871 (DB).
19. In Re, Joginadham, 1962 (2) Cr LJ 523 (AP); Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012; In Re, Sambasiva Rao, (1958) 2 An WR 627.
20. Abdul Hamid v. State of Tripura, AIR 1958 Tri 1.
21. Pangi Jogi Naik v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 205 (DB).
22. N.K. Tandel v. State of Gujarat, 1986 Cr LJ 457 (Guj)(DB); Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012.
23. State v. Hadibandhu, ILR 1973 Cut 601.
24. Abdul Hamid v. State of Tripura, AIR 1958 Tri 1; Bombay Agarwal Co. Akola v. Ram Chand Diwan Chand, AIR 1953 Nag 154 (DB).
25. Emperor v. Bishun Datt, ILR (1927) 50 All 242; Bisipati Padhan v. State, AIR 1969 Ori 289. See also Guggillasanthosh Reddy v. State of A.P., 2001 Cr LJ NOC 110 (AP) : (2001) 1 Andh LJ (Cri) 76.
26. Ashok Kumar v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1977 SC 1304.
27. Jit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 1421.
28. Sita Ram v. Ram Chandra, AIR 1977 SC 1712.

In a trial before a Court of Session, counsel for the accused is not entitled to refer to the depositions given before the committing Magistrate for the purpose of contradicting the witnesses before the Sessions Court, without drawing their attention to the alleged contradictions in their previous depositions and giving them an opportunity of explaining the same.[29]

The previous contradictory statements of a witness can be used only to contradict and discredit him. It cannot be used to impeach or undermine the credit of other witnesses. Further, where the previous statement of such a witness made in the committal court had not been transferred to the sessions record under Section 288, it could not be used as substantive evidence in the case.[30]

A witness in Sessions Court, when confronted with his statement in committed court, while admitting that the record was true, deposed that the statement was false, having been made under police pressure, there is sufficient compliance with Section 145, and it would be pointless to draw his attention to each sentence and ask for his explanation.[31]

It is highly desirable that the court should, before the transfer of the earlier statement to be record of the sessions case under Section 288, (old Cr.P.C., now omitted), indicate in a brief order why the earlier deposition was being transferred to the record of the sessions trial. This will make quite clear to the accused that this earlier statement is likely to be used as substantive evidence against him. Although the technical requirement of the session namely, that an order should be passed to indicate that the statement is transferred so as to be read as substantive evidence is not complied with, there is no substantive departure from the requirements of the law. There is no likelihood of any prejudice to the accused, since he is informed, while he is being examined that the statement is being used under Section 288, (old) Cr.P.C. (now omitted) and he is invited to say what he wished to say in defence.[32] If the prosecution witnesses turned hostile in the Sessions Court, and their evidence in the committal court was not put to them and their attention has not drawn to those parts, evidence in the committal court is not admissible as the proceedure followed will be contrary to the general principle of fair play and to the specific provisions of Section 145.[33]

Section 288 of (old) Cr. P.C. (now omitted) stated that the previous statements were to be subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act. Section 145 falls fairly and squarely within the plain meaning of these words. More than that, this is a fair and proper provision and is in accord with the sense of fairplay to which courts are accustomed. If the prosecution wished to use the previous testimony to the contrary as substantive evidence, then it must confront the witness with those parts of it which were to be used for the purpose of contradicting him. Then only it could be brought in as substantive evidence under Section 288 of (old) Cr.P.C. (now omitted).[34] Where some of the statements were admitted by witnesses but they hastened to point out that the facts stated therein were not correct, those statements have to be treated as denials and not admissions. When parts of statements were not put to the witnesses at all, they cannot be said to have been contradicted by their prior statements.[35]

The subject dealing with the statements recorded by the committing court under Section 288 of (old) Cr.P.C. (now omitted) with reference to Section 145 has become of academic interest, as the present Cr.P.C. of 1973 has dispensed with the recording of evidence by the committing court.

---

29. Emperor v. Zawar Rahman, ILR (1902) 31 Cal 142 (FB); Queen-Empress v. Dan Sahai, ILR (1885) 7 All 862; Reg. v. Arjun Megha, (1874) 10 Bom HCR 281; Emperor v. Lakshman, (1915) 17 Bom LR 590; Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shriniwas Pandit, (1915) 17 Bom LR 527 : 42 IA 135 : ILR 39 Bom 441 : AIR 1915 PC 7.
30. Jit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 1421; See also Ashok Kumar v. State, AIR 1977 SC 1304.
31. State of Rajasthan v. Kartar Singh, 1970 SC 1305; In re, Dhanabal, 1976 Cr LJ 1969 (Mad).
32. Periyasami v. State of Madras, AIR 1967 SC 1027.
33. Basappa Ramappa Naik v. State, 1963 (1) Cr LJ 698 (Mys) (DB); Tara Singh v. State, AIR 1957 SC 441; Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas Pandit, ILR 39 Bom 441; Upendra v. Bhupendra, 21 Cal WN 280; Muharram v. Barkat, AIR 1930 Lah 695; Pangi Jogi Naik v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 205; State v. Hotey Khan, AIR 1960 All 521.
34. Tara Singh v. State, AIR 1951 SC 441; S. Ibochouba Singh v. Manipur Administration, 1972 CR LJ 395 (Manipur); Anna v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1956 Hyd 99; Jagar Singh v. State, AIR 1954 Pepsu 6 (DB); Mer Kala Veman v. State, 1954 Sau 142 (DB); Jit v. State, (1960) 62 Punj LR 123; Nazar Md. v. Mehta Kirpa Ram, AIR 1946 Lah 64 (FB); Paramananda Mahakud v. State of Orissa, AIR 1970 Cr LJ 931 (Ori).
35. Narayana Pillai v. State, 1971 Cr LJ 168 (DB) Ker; relying on Tahsildar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 1012.

18. PLEADINGS—DEPOSITIONS

A witness can be confronted under Section 145 with statements made in previous suits, whether contained in pleadings, petitions, affidavits or evidence.[36]

Where a successor court orders a de novo trial, the statements of prosecution witnesses recorded by the predecessor court can be used for contradicting these witnesses. Their previous statements do not become inadmissible or non-existent on account of the de novo trial.[37] Where notes of evidence were recorded by a Presiding Officer of the Small Causes Court and the witness was again examined by a succeeding officer, the statement of the witnesses recorded by the earlier Presiding Officer falls under Section 145 and can be used in cross-examination for contradicting the witness.[38] Even if the evidence taken on commission is not read as evidence in a suit, it would be available as a previous statement for the purposes of Section 145.[39] The deposition in a prior criminal case between the same parties, is not admissible but the attention of plaintiff may be drawn to the deposition made by him as required by Section 145.[40]

Where a report was made by an official on the direction of the court in an earlier proceeding, the contents of the report cannot be used in subsequent suit, unless the official is produced and party against whom it is to be used is given opportunity to cross-examine him.[41] In the case of a departmental enquiry against a government servant, where statements were recorded during the preliminary inquiry, the petitioner can demand copies of the statements of only those witnesses who are examined in the departmental enquiry for the purpose of discrediting them. Section 145 Evidence Act, does not confine the right of contradiction only to previous statements recorded on oath.[42]

19. OTHER STATEMENTS

A post-mortem report is not substantive evidence. It can be used to corroborate under Section 157, or to contradict, under Section 145, the evidence of the doctor.[43] Where the writer of a letter appears as a witness in court, the contents of that letter would amount to a previous statement of a witness, and can be used for the purpose of corroborating his testimony in court under Section 157, or to discredit his evidence during cross-examination.[44]

20. SECTIONS 145, 146, 155 AND 157

A perusal of Sections 145, 155 and 157 of the Evidence Act clearly indicates that there are two purposes for which a previous statement can be used. One is for cross-examination and contradiction, and the other is for corroboration. When the defence wants to use the previous statement of a witness, it could be only to contradict and not to corroborate. However, considering the restrictions contained in Section 6 of the Commission of Enquiry Act, the statement made by a witness before a Commission could not be used in a criminal trial either for the purpose of cross-examination or to contradict the witness or to impeach his credit.[45]

Section 155, Evidence Act, lays down that the credit of a witness may be impeached inter alia by proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted, but it does not lay down the manner in which his former statement is to be proved. The mode of proof of such a statement in writing, when it is sought to be tendered in evidence for contradicting a witness, is provided in Section 145 and is not independent of it.[46] By virtue of Section 155 proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of the evidence given by a witness, can be given and it is not required by Section 155 that the attention of the witness must be drawn to such previous statements in the course of his examination. It is obvious, therefore, that Section 145 does not control the provisions of

---

36. Mahammed Seraj v. Adibar Rahaman Sheikh, AIR 1968 Cal 550.
37. Brahma Naik v. Ram Kumar Agarwal, 1974 Cr LJ 567; Rajindar Singh v. State, ILR (1974) 1 Delhi 277.
38. President, Sishu Bihar Bhabini Vihar Mandal, Hyderabad v. Yellaiah, AIR 1969 AP 148.
39. Mir Abdul Sovan v. Rafi Kan Bibi, AIR 1972 Cri 213; Sohanlal v. State, AIR 1965 Bom.
40. Venkatappa v. Brahmayya, AIR 1953 Mad 1000.
41. 1967 All WR (HC) 827.
42. Sharmanand v. Superintendent Gun Carriage Factory, Jabalpur, AIR 1960 MP 178 (DB).
43. Hadi Kirsani v. State, AIR 1966 Ori 21 (DB); State of Rajasthan v. Mathura Lal, 1971 Cr LJ 1816 (Raj).
44. Balabhadra Misra v. Nirmala Sundari Devi, AIR 1954 Ori 23.
45. Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn), AIR 1988 SC 1883.
46. 1958 Mad LJ (Cri) 942 (AP)

Section 155 which is much wider and the evidence of a witness 'A' cannot be regarded as inadmissible for the reason that the attention of witness 'B' was not drawn to the statement attributed to him by the witness 'A'.[47]

Sections 145, 146 and 155(3) are complementary to each other. When they are read together, a cross-examiner cannot be restricted from putting questions except to the extent indicated in Section 148 to 152.[48]

21. RECALLING A WITNESS

If the witnesses are recalled subsequent to the conclusion of their evidence in the Court at the behest of the accused on the basis of affidavits subsequently filed by them contradicting their previous statements made in the Court, it would be in violation of the provisions contained in S. 145 of the Evidence Act. If permitted, there shall be no end of trial.[49]

Questions lawful in cross-examination.

S. 146. When a witness is cross-examined, he may, in addition to the questions hereinbefore referred to, be asked any questions which tend—

(1) to test his veracity,

(2) to discover who he is and what is his position in life, or

(3) to shake his credit, by injuring his character, although the answer to such questions might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him or might expose or tend directly or indirectly to expose him to a penalty or forfeiture.

[Provided that in a prosecution for rape or attempt to commit rape, it shall not be permissible to put questions in the cross-examination of the prosecutirx as to her general immoral character.]

SYNOPSIS

1. General	... 1284	4. Shaking the credit by injuring the character	... 1286
2. To test his veracity	... 1284	5. Indecent and scandalous questions	... 1287
3. To discover who he is etc.	... 1285	6. Tape Record	... 1287

COMMENTS

1. GENERAL

This section enables the cross-examiner to put certain questions, in additions to the questions referred to in the earlier Sections, to test the veracity, discover who the witness is and what his position is in life, or to shake his credit by injuring his character, although the answer to such questions might tend directly or indirectly to criminate him. This section gives very wide powers to the cross-examiner in addition to those given by Section 138. This section extends the power of cross-examination far beyond the limits of Section 138, paragraph 2, which confines, the cross-examination to relevant facts, including of course the facts in issue.[50]

2. TO TEST HIS VERACITY

A witness may be examined not only as to the relevant facts but also as to all facts which reasonably tend to affect the credibility of his testimony. This is generally spoken of as cross-examination to credit, inasmuch as a large part at any rate of the facts which are relied on for the purpose are facts which touch the credit and good name of the witness. But no such cross-examination can be legitimate unless it has

---

47. Ram Ratan v. State, AIR 1956 Raj 196.
48. Surendran v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 464 (para 8) (Ker).
49. Tahir v. State of U.P., 2000 Cr LJ 1342 (paras 9 and 10) (All).

* Ins. by the Indian Evidence (Amendment) Act, 2002 (4 of 2003), s. 2, w.e.f. 31-12-2002.

50. MARKBY, p. 107.

some reasonable bearing on his credibility. Cross-examination to credit is necessarily irrelevant to any issue in an action, its relevancy consists in being addressed to the credit or discredit of the witness in the box so as to show that his evidence for or against the relevant issue is untrustworthy. It is most relevant in a case where everything depends on the judge's belief or disbelief in the witness's story.[51] A witness is compellable to answer questions relevant merely as affecting credit, but the judge has a discretion to excuse any answer when the truth of the matter suggested would not, in his opinion, affect the credibility of the witness as to the subject matter of his testimony.

Where the veracity of a witness is in question, Section 146 applies. And the witness can be cross-examined to shake his character, though it may not be an issue in a case. Sections 155 and 146 are not in conflict with each other. Sections 138, 140, 145,148 and 154 provide for impeaching the credit of a witness by cross-examination.[52]

The Supreme Court observed: "The statement that Section 146 must be read along with Section 153 cannot be accepted in its entirety. It may be that clause (3) of Section 146 may have to be read along with the main Section 153, but clause (1) of Section 146 and exception (2) to Section 153 deal with different aspects. Under Section 146(1), questions may be put to a witness in cross-examination, to test his veracity and under exception (2) to Section 153, a witness may be contradicted when he denies any question tending to impeach his impartiality."[53]

LORD HERSCHELL at page 70 observed: "My Lords, I have always understood that if you intend to impeach a witness, you are bound, whilst he is in the box, to give an opportunity to making any explanation which is open to him; and, as it seems to me, that is not only a rule of professional practice in the conduct of a case, but it is essential to fair play and fair dealing with witness." LORD HALSBURY at page 76 observed: "To my mind nothing would be more absolutely unjust than not to cross-examine witness upon evidence which they have given, so as to give them notice and to give them an opportunity of explanation and an opportunity very often to defend their own character."[54]

As a general rule, and in view of Section 145, whenever it is intended to impeach the evidence of a witness, his attention must be called to the discrediting facts, so that he may have an opportunity to explain them. In Carapeit v. Derderian[55], following the observations of LORD HERSCHELL and LORD HALSBURY, quoted above, it was held that the attention of the witness should be drawn to such facts as are intended to impeach the credit of his evidence.

Any question touching on the character and conduct of a witness should be asked only when there is some material to substantiate the same.[56]

The veracity of a witness is to be tested with reference to the answers given in the cross-examination which is aimed at obtaining some admissions favourable to the cross-examining party, or at discrediting the witness.[57]

Sections 133, 114, (Ill. b) and Section 146 are to be read together, in respect of evidence of an accomplice witness, as an accomplice is unworthy of credit, under Section 114, Illu. (b), as a rule of prudence corroboration in material particulars is required. Section 146 can properly be invoked to test his veracity and also discover who is and what is his position in life and shake his credit by injuring his character, as conduct of the accused may also be capable of supplying corroboration.[58]

3. TO DISCOVER WHO HE IS ETC.

As preliminary to the cross-examination of a witness as to facts in the case, it is common practice to make inquiry into his relations with the party on whose behalf he was called—business, social and family; also to enquire as to his feelings towards the party against whom his testimony has been given.

---

51. Bombay Cotton Co v. Raja Bahadur Shivlal Motilal, (1915) 17 Bom LR 455 : 42 IA 110 : ILR 39 Bom 386 : AIR 1915 PC 1.
52. G. Hussenaiah v. B. Yerraiah, AIR 1954 Andhra 39.
53. Rama Reddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 1162.
54. Browne v. Dunn, (1894) 6 R 67.
55. AIR 1961 Cal 359.
56. Jagtu v. Badri, AIR 1978 J&K 50.
57. Rajanna Rajulli v. State of A.P., (1979) 2 An LT 215.
58. Ibrahim Husen v. State of Goa, 1969 Cr LJ 739.

This is permissible in order to place his testimony in a proper light with reference to bias in favour of the one party or prejudice against the other.[59]

Credibility of a witness does not depend on the status of a witness. So questions relating to the low status of a witness would not be of any help to discredit a witness.[60]

Sections 145, 148 and 155 indicate that the credit of a witness can be said to have been shaken only if it can be shown that he is not a man of veracity, and not that he is a of bad moral character. A black-marketeer is not necessarily untruthful nor a non-black-marketeer necessarily a man of veracity. There is no reason for rejecting the evidence of a witness on the ground alone that he is a black-marketeer.[61]

4. SHAKING THE CREDIT BY INJURING THE CHARACTER

This clause enables the cross-examiner to put questions injuring the character of a witness, to shake his credit.

Sections 146 to 152 deal with questions which can be put to a witness with a view to shake his credit by damaging his character. These sections along with S. 132 embrace the entire range of questions which can possibly be put to a witness.

Section 152 of the Act, says that the court shall forbid any question which appears to it to be intended to insult or annoy, or which, though proper in itself, appears to the court needlessly offensive in form.

Section 153 states that questions can be put to shake the witness's credit by injuring his character. But, no evidence shall be given to contradict the answers given by the witness, if he answers falsely he may be charged with giving false evidence. This rule has got two exceptions, viz., where a witness denies his previous conviction, or denies the fact suggested to impeach his impartiality; then evidence may be given to contradict those denials of the witness.

STEPHEN in his digest (pp. 196-197) has observed: "I shall not believe, unless and until it is so decided upon solemn agreement, that by the law of England a person who is called to prove a minor fact not really disputed, in a case of little importance, thereby exposes himself to having every transaction in his past life, however, private, inquired into by persons who may wish to serve the basest purposes of fraud or revenge by doing so. Suppose for instance, a medical man were to prove the fact that a slight wound had been inflicted and been attended to by him, would it be lawful under pretence of testing his credit, to compel him to answer upon oath a series of questions as to his private affairs extending over many years and tending to expose transactions of the most delicate and secret kind, in which the fortune and character of other persons might be involved? If this is the law, it should be altered."

In Cl. (3) of Section 146, the expression "injuring his character" is used; in Sections 52, 53, 54 and 55 of this Act, it is stated when character would be relevant. Character includes both general reputation and disposition. (See Sections 52 to 55).

Generally, character evidence is not relevant to decide any issue in a case, except to the extent given in Sections 52 to 55. But under Section 146(3), the cross-examinor is entitled to put questions regarding character of the witness for the purpose of discrediting his evidence.[62]

As long as the cross-examiner confines his questions to the points of testing the veracity of a witness or discovering his status in life, there seem to be no limits to his power of putting questions. But when he undertakes the difficult vet delicate task of impeaching the character of witness, the following sections (Ss. 147 to 150) give ample protection to a witness in speaking the truth, and impose wholesome restraints upon groundless assertions levelled against him. If any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding....the provisions of S. 132 are by S. 147 declared applicable to it. If the question is as to a matter relevant only so far as affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character, the Court is by S. 148 directed to decide whether or not the witness is to be compelled to answer, and may ..... warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it....When there is a question asked to which

---

59. MAKELVEY, S. 259.
60. (1959) 2 An WR 375.
61. Chari v. State, AIR 1959 All 149.
62. G. Husseiaiah v. B. Yerraiah, AIR 1954 AP 39; Baburao Patel v. Bal Thackrey, 1977 Cr LJ 1637 (Bom).

the answer may tend to criminate a witness, he may object that it is not as to a matter relevant to a matter in issue, or that, if relevant, it is relevant only as affecting his credit by injuring his character.[63]

It is not permissible to have recourse to Section 146(3) to ask all sorts of questions which are not necessary to shake the credibility of the witness. The assault on the character of a witness, permitted by Section 146(3), must be directed only for the purpose of shaking the credit of the witness and not for any other purpose.[64]

5. INDECENT AND SCANDALOUS QUESTIONS

The provisions of Section 146(3) permit cross-examiner to put questions which will not only shake the credit of a witness, but which will also expose his ethical and moral behaviour, which may ultimately weigh with the court, while evaluating that testimonial evidence. By its every nature, questions on mala fides as opposed to bona fides, immorality, as opposed to good morality, dishonesty as against honesty, falsehood as against truthfulness, can all conceivably be put, provided there is necessity and foundation for the same. Section 155 expressly permits, by indicating the mode and manner, to bring in evidence upon the credit of a witness, so as to impeach such testimony. Indecent and scandalous questions can be put if they directly relate to the facts in issue and also if it is necessary in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed; these exceptions are vital; and, if in any given case, the court is satisfied that even an indecent and scandalous question may have a bearing upon a fact in issue, the same cannot be forbidden. If a question is merely intended to insult or annoy, and is offensive in form, the court has power to forbid the same.[65]

The Madras High Court held that where a witness is put questions per se defamatory, the remedies open to him in law are threefold, namely: (a) protection by the court; (b) self-help in the shape of setting the criminal law in motion; or (c) filing a suit for damages. The extensive powers which have been granted to the court for protecting witnesses from questions not lawful in cross-examination are set out in Sections 146 to 153 of the Evidence Act.[66]

In a case, the advocate put a question to the witness as to who supplied the bricks for the drain; the witness replied that he supplied them. When the court asked the lawyer about the relevancy of that question, he said that he is going to prove that the witness is an unscrupulous vice-chairman of the Municipality. When the lawyer was charged with defamation it was held that the question put by the lawyer fell within the purview of Section 146, to test the credit of the witness.[67]

6. TAPE RECORD

The Supreme Court observed: "The tape recorded statement itself is primary and direct evidence admissible as to what has been said and picked up by the recorder. A previous statement made by a witness and recorded on tape can be used not only to corroborate the evidence given by the witness in court, but also to contradict the evidence given before the court, as well as to test the veracity of the witness and also to impeach his impartiality. Thus, apart from being used for corroboration, the evidence is admissible in respect of other three matters, viz. (1) under Section 146(1) to test the veracity of the witness; (2) under exception (2) to Section 153, i.e., if a witness is asked any question tending to impeach his impartiality and answers it by denying the fact suggested, he may be contradicted; and (3) under Section 155(3), i.e., by giving proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted. The weight to be given to such evidence is however distinct and separate from the question of its admissibility."[68]

When witness to be compelled to answer.

S. 147. If any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding, the provisions of Section 132 shall apply thereto.

---

63. Per TURNER, C.J., in The Queen v. Gopal Doss, ILR (1881) 3 Mad 271, 278 (FB).
64. Babu Rao Patel v. Bal Thackrey, 1977 Cr LJ 1637 (Bom); Govardhansing v. Chandanmal, (1982) 1 Bom CR 591.
65. Prakash Raja Ram v. State of Maharashtra, 1975 Cr LJ 1297 (Bom).
66. Ayeasha Bi v. Peer Khan Sahib, AIR 1954 Mad 741.
67. Jyothish v. Haridas, 24 Cal WN 23.
68. Ramareddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 1162; Rupchand v. Mahabir Prasad, AIR 1956 Punj 173; Manindranath v. Bishwanath, 67 Cal WN 191; Malkani R.M. v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1973 SC 157; Partapsingh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 SC 72.

COMMENTS

This section says that, if any such question relates to a matter relevant to the suit or proceeding, the provisions of Section 132 shall apply thereto. "Such question" refers to a question referred to in clause (3) of Section 146, viz., a question which tends to shake the credit of a witness by injuring his character etc.

Section 132 states that the witness shall not be excused from giving the answer on the ground that any answer to such a question will criminate or may tend directly or indirectly to criminate such a witness, or expose him to any penalty or forfeiture of any kind. But, if the court compels him to give an answer to any such question he is protected from arrest or prosecution. In case he gives false evidence in answer to a question put to him, he can be charged with the offence of giving false evidence. All questions which would fall under Section 132 can be put under Section 146.

The witness cannot be compelled to give an answer if he can claim privilege under Sections 122, 126, 127, 128 or 131. Again under Sections 123 and 125 as a matter of public policy a witness referred to in these sections cannot be compelled to answer. Barring the above provisions whereunder he need not answer questions, in other circumstances, he has to answer questions under Section 132 of the Act.

Section 147 empowers a court to compel a witness to reply to a relevant question. If he refuses to answer a question, immediate action should be taken against him in the interest of fair trial. If the court fails in its duty, it hampers the course of justice and brings it into disrepute.[69]

A witness is compellable to answer every question put to him in cross-examination which is relevant to the issue, unless protected by public policy, or privilege, or unless the case is one in which oral evidence is excluded by documentary. All cross-examination must be relevant to the issues or to the witness's credit.[70]

Court to decide when question shall be asked and when witness compelled to answer.

S. 148. If any such question relates to a matter not relevant to the suit or proceeding, except in so far as it affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character, the Court shall decide whether or not the witness shall be compelled to answer it, and may, if it thinks fit, warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it. In exercising its discretion, the Court shall have regard to the following considerations:—

(1) such questions are proper if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by them would seriously affect the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies;

(2) such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relates to matters so remote in time, or of such a character, that the truth of the imputation would not affect, or would affect in a slight degree, the opinion of the Court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which he testifies;

(3) such questions are improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and the importance of his evidence;

(4) the Court may, if it sees fit, draw, from the witness's refusal to answer, the inference that the answer if given would be unfavourable.

---

69. Shive Sharnagat v. State of Bhopal, AIR 1953 Bhopal 21.
70. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), para 11-17, page 249.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1289
2. "Any such question" ... 1290
3. Proper questions [Clause (1)] ... 1290
4. Improper questions [Clauses (2) and (3)] ... 1290
5. Adverse inference [Clause (4)] ... 1291

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section deals mainly with the exercise of discretion by the court, while deciding whether a witness should be compelled to answer a question in cross-examination or not. It states that, if any such question relates to a matter not relevant to the suit or proceeding, except the questions put to discredit the witness by injuring his character, the court shall decide whether the witness is to be compelled to answer or not. If the court thinks that it is not relevant, then the court can warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer the question. Before exercising that discretion, the court must have regard to the considerations mentioned in clause 1 to 4 of the section.

The purpose of enacting Sections 149 to 153 is to prevent abuse of the right to cross-examination of a witness.

Sections 148-152 are intended to protect a witness against improper cross-examination—a protection which is often very much required. But the protection offered by Section 148 is not very effectual, because an innocent man will be eager to answer the question, and one who is guilty will by a claim for protection merely confess his guilt. Nor does the threat contained in Section 149 and this section carry the matter much further.[71]

The object of this section is to prevent the unnecessary raking up of the past history of a witness, when it throws no light whatsoever on the questions at issue in a case. It protects a witness from the evils of a reckless and unjustifiable cross-examination under the guise of impeaching his credit. In the course of cross-examination, the temptation is always too great to run down a witness's character; the Legislature has, therefore, wisely provided ample safeguards for the unfortunate witness and placed wholesome checks on the willy cross-examiner. It would seem that under this section a witness cannot be compelled to answer irrelevant questions; but if he chooses to answer them, he cannot be contradicted by other evidence (Section 153).

"In connection with this subject, we may refer to some provisions which we have inserted in order to prevent the abuse of the power of cross-examination to credit. We believe the existence of that power to be essential to the administration of justice, and we believe it to be liable to great abuse. The need for the power and danger of its abuse are proved by English experience, but in this country litigation of various kinds, and criminal prosecution in particular, are the great engines of malignity, and it is accordingly even more necessary here than in England, both to permit the exposure of corrupt motives and to prevent the use of the power of exposure as a means of gratifying malice. We have accordingly provided as follows:

"Such questions may relate either to matters relevant to the case, or to matters not relevant to the case. If they relate to matters relevant to the case, we think the witness ought to be compellable to answer, but that his answer should not afterwards be used against him.

"If they relate to matters not relevant to the case except insofar as they affect the credit of the witness, we think that the witness ought not to be compelled to answer. His refusal to do so would, in most cases, serve the purpose of discrediting him, as well as an express admission that the imputation conveyed by the question was true."[72]

---

71. MARK BY, 107.
72. Proceedings of the Legislative Council.

2. "ANY SUCH QUESTION"

When any such question, that is, the question referred to in Section 146, is not relevant to the suit or proceeding, the court must decide whether or not the witness should be compelled to answer it and may warn the witness that he is not obliged to answer it.

Such questions are proper—

(1) if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation made touches the credibility of the witness.

They are improper—

(1) if the imputation refers to matters (a) so remote in time, or (b) of such a character, that its truth does not affect the credibility of the witness; or

(2) If there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation and the importance of the evidence.

If the witness refuses to answer any question it is open to the court to draw the inference that the answer if given would be unfavourable. (cf. S. 114, ill. (b)).

3. PROPER QUESTIONS [CLAUSE (1)]

On an indictment for rape, or attempt to rape, or for an indecent assault, the prosecutrix cannot be asked in cross-examination whether she had had connection with another person not the accused; and if she denies it, evidence cannot be called to contradict her.[73] But she can be asked whether she had on previous occasions connection with the accused,[74] or whether she was a common prostitute.[75]

The considerations referred to in sub-sections 2 and 3 of Section 148, and Section 151 and 152 indicate, more distinctly, than is to be found in English law, the principle on which the court should proceed in protecting witnesses from reckless and unjustifiable interrogations. A witness is not to have his whole past life raked up and dragged into publicity, merely because he comes forward in obedience to the law, to give evidence in court. So serious an interference with ones private life can be justified only by a real necessity and cannot be justified when the injury to the witnesses' character is very serious, while the importance of the evidence is relatively insignificant.[76]

4. IMPROPER QUESTIONS [CLAUSES (2) AND (3)]

This second clause says that such questions are improper if the imputation which they convey relate to matters remote in time.

WIGMORE ON EVIDENCE (Section 928) observes: "The correct solution seems to be that prior character at any time may be admitted as being relevant to show present character, and therefore, indirectly, to whow the probability as to truth speaking. The only limitation to be applied is that the character must not be so distant in time as to be void of real probative value in showing present character, this limitation is to be applied in the discretion of the trial court."

SIR JAMES STEPHEN in his General View of the Criminal Law of England observes: "If a woman prosecuted a man for picking her pocket, it would be monstrous to inquire whether she had not had an illegitimate child 10 years before, though circumstances might exist which might render such an inquiry necessary. For instance, she might owe a grudge to the person against whom the charge was brought on account of circumstances connected with such a transaction, and have invented the charge for that reason."[77]

---

73. Per KELLY, C.B. in Queen v. Holmes, (1871) LR 1 CCR 334, 336; Hodgson's case, (1812) R&R CC 211; Rex v. Clarke, (1817) 2 Stark 41.
74. Rex v. Martin, (1834) 6 C&P 562; Reg v. Cockcroft, (1870) 11 Cox 410.
75. Rex v. Barker, (1829) 3 C&P 589.
76. Ayeasha Bi v. Peer Khan Sahib, AIR 1954 Mad 741.
77. See also Ayesha Bi v. Peer Khan Sahib, AIR 1954 Mad 741.

"No doubt, cases may arise, when the judge, in exercise of his discretion, would properly interpose to protect the witness from unnecessary and unbecoming annoyance, for instance, all inquiries into discreditable transactions of a remote date, might, in general, be rightly suppressed; for the interests of Justice can seldom require that the errors of a man's life, long since repented of, and forgiven by the community, should be recalled to re-rememberance at the pleasure of any future litigant. So, questions respecting alleged improprieties of conduct which furnish no real ground for assuming that a witness who could be guilty of them would not be a man of veracity, might very fairly be checked."[78]

The accused offered himself as a surety for a person who had been ordered to find security for good behaviour. The Magistrate examined him on oath with a view to ascertain his fitness as a surety. He was asked if he had ever been previously convicted of any offence; and he replied in the negative. A previous conviction which was thirty years old having been proved against him, he was tried for an offence under Section 193 of the Indian Penal Code. The High Court upheld the conviction but modified the sentence on the ground that the Magistrate should have refused to allow the question to be put on the ground that it related to a matter which had happened thirty years before and was so remote in time that it ought not to influence his decision as to the fitness of the surety.[79]

Under this clause, questions would be improper if there is a great disproportion between the importance of the imputation made against the witness's character and importance of his evidence.

5. ADVERSE INFERENCE [CLAUSE (4)]

This clause states that the court may presume or draw inference, when the witness refuses to answer, that the answer, if given, would be unfavourable to him. Section 114, Illus. (h), says that if a man refuses to answer questions which he is not compelled to answer by law, the Court may presume that the answer if given would be unfavourable to him. In cl. (4) of this section and also in Section 114, the expression "may" is used. So, the discretion is with the court whether to draw, or not, such an inference depending upon the facts of each case.

"The law, after much debate, is still somewhat unsettled as to whether a witness is bound to answer any question, the direct and immediate effect of answering which might be to degrade his character. It, however, seems clear that, where the transaction as to which the witness is interrogated, forms any material part of the issue, he will be obliged to give evidence, however strongly it may reflect on his own conduct. Indeed, it would be alike unjust and impolitic to protect a witness from answering a question, merely because it would have the effect of degrading him, when his testimony is required either for the due administration of public justice, or to protect the property, the reputation, the liberty, or the life of a fellow subject. Were such a protection to prevail, a man already convicted and punished for a crime, would, if called as a witness against an accomplice, be excused from testifying to any of the transactions in which he had participated with the accused, and thus the guilty might escape."[80]

"It has been stated more than once, that, if the witness declines to answer, no inference of the truth of the fact can be drawn from that circumstance; but the soundness of this rule is very questionable; and although it would be going too far to say that the guilt of the witness must be implied from his silence, it would seem that, in accordance with justice and reason, the jury should be at full liberty to consider that circumstance, as well as every other, when they come to decide on the credit due to the witness. A perfectly honourable but excitable man may occasionally repudiate a question which he regards as an insult, and to infer dishonour from his conduct would, of course, be unjust; but, generally speaking, an honest man will be eager to rescue his character from suspicion and will at once deny the imputation, rather than rely on his legal rights, and refuse to answer the offensive interrogatory."[81]

A reading of the provisions in Sections 146, 148 and 155 would disclose that the credit of a witness can be said to have been shaken only if it can be shown that he is not a man of veracity, and not that he is of bad immoral character. A black-marketeer is not necessarily untruthful nor a non-black-marketeer necessarily a man of veracity.[82]

---

78. FIELD ON EVIDENCE, 1967 Ed. Vol. 6, page 487.
79. Emperor v. Ghulam Mustafa, ILR (1904) 26 All 371, 374.
80. TAYLOR ON EVIDENCE, 10th Edn. Sections 146 to 148.
81. TAYLOR 8th Edn., Sections 1321 and 1467.
82. Chari v. State, AIR 1959 All 149.

Question not to be asked without reasonable grounds.

S. 149. No such question as is referred to in Section 148 ought to be asked, unless the person asking it has reasonable grounds for thinking that the imputation which it conveys is well-founded.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) A barrister is instructed by an attorney or vakil that an important witness is a dakait. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dakait.

(b) A pleader is informed by a person in Court that an important witness is a dakait. The informant, on being questioned by the pleader, gives satisfactory reasons for his statement. This is a reasonable ground for asking the witness whether he is a dakait.

(c) A witness, of whom nothing whatever is known, is asked at random whether he is a dakait. There are here no reasonable grounds for the question.

(d) A witness, of whom nothing whatever is known, being questioned as to his mode of life and means of living, gives unsatisfactory answers. This may be a reasonable ground for asking him if he is a dakait.

COMMENTS

This section states that questions which are contemplated under Section 148, ought not to be asked unless the person asking the question has reasonable ground for thinking that the imputation which it conveys is well-founded.

The cross-examiner must have reasonable grounds to believe that the imputation made against the witness is well-founded. As to what are reasonable grounds which justify such question, see the illustrations.

The trial judge has a duty not to permit questions which are scandalous, vexatious or even cantankerous, which elicit irrelevant or inadmissible answers, or even those which do not advance the trial but are calculated to hinder or delay its progress. Where the interest of justice clearly requires it, the trying judge himself has to put questions to clarify matters which are vague. But, beyond such and other clear situations, the trial judge does not himself enter the arena of combat.[83]

1. WHETHER THE CROSS-EXAMINER IS PROTECTED WHEN PUTTING DEFAMATORY QUESTIONS

Under Section 340(1) Cr.P.C. (old), there is a right of the accused to consult and to be defended by a legal practitioner of his own choice, to protect his interest. The same right is conferred by Art. 22(1) of the Constitution as a fundamental right. Section 499, I.P.C., deals with defamation and the 9th Exception to the section affords protection to the person making a defamatory statement, provided it was made in good faith.

While appearing for a party, the advocates have some responsibility and they shall not abuse their privileges. They should exercise their own discretion before putting any offensive question, and they shall not put questions in a manner without verifying the truth of the imputations, conveyed by such questions.[84]

There is a presumption that the advocate puts questions to the witness on the instruction of the client.[85] But when after raising the presumption in favour of the advocate the contrary is proved, the court can come to a finding that those questions were put by the advocate without instruction.[86] If the advocate puts questions which are defamatory on the instructions of the client he is protected under 9th Exception to Section 499, I.P.C.[87]

---

83. Mohinder Singh v. State, ILR, (1970) 2 Del 854; In re, Shanmugham, 1983 Mad LJ (Cri) 347.
84. M. Banarjee v. Emperor, AIR 1927 Cal 823; Fakir Prasad v. Kripa Sindhu, AIR 1927 Cal 303.
85. Anwaruddin v. Fathim Bai, AIR 1927 Mad 379; Seshagiri Rao v. Sadulla, 1937 Mad WN (Cri) 243.
86. Satish Chandra v. Ram Doyal, AIR 1921 Cal 1 (SB); Genden Lal v. R, AIR 1948 All 409; Md. Taqi v. M.A. Ghani, AIR 1945 Lah 97; U. Pike v. Ma Khien Thein, AIR 1940 Rang 77.
87. Narayan Chandra Ganguli v. Harish Chandra, AIR 1933 Cal 185; Tulsidas v. Billimoria, AIR 1932 Bom 490.

When defamatory questions were put by the lawyer to a witness in cross-examination, on his client's instructions, and the imputation conveyed by those questions was per se defamatory, and when there was no reasonable basis for putting those questions, it was held that the client was liable under Section 500 I.P.C., though the lawyer could take protection under the 9th Exception to Section 499, I.P.C.[88] Where a pleader is charged with the offence of defamation punishable under Section 500, I.P.C., alleging that, he unnecessarily in cross-examination put to the complainant who was a witness in a criminal case, certain questions which imputed immoral character and there is no allegation, and much less proof, that the pleader in putting the questions was actuated by any motive of private malice and was not acting in the interest of his client, the pleader is entitled to the benefit under Exception to Section 499, I.P.C., and the charge which imputes no ill faith but merely refers to the questions as having been put unnecessarily cannot stand.[89]

In the case of a party on whose behalf defamatory questions were put, he has to prove that he made the imputation in good faith when he claims benefit of Exception 9 to Section 499, I.P.C., and it would be determined by the circumstances in which the questions was put, the social status and the level of education of the person making the imputation.[90]

But the truth of the imputation need not be proved beyound doubt.[91]

2. REMEDIES OPEN TO THE WITNESS

Where a witness is put questions per se defamatory, the remedies open to him in law are threefold, viz.: (a) protection by court; (b) setting the criminal law in motion; or (c) filing a suit for damages.[92]

Procedure of Court in case of question being asked without reasonable grounds.

S. 150. If the Court is of opinion that any such question was asked without reasonable grounds, it may, if it was asked by any barrister, pleader, vakil or attorney, report the circumstances of the case to the High Court or other authority to which such barrister, pleader, vakil or attorney is subject in the exercise of his profession.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section provides the procedure to be followed by the court in regard to the advocate in cases where questions are asked by him without reasonable grounds. A report has to be sent by the court to the High Court, or other authority to which such barrister, pleader, or vakil or attorney is subject in the exercise of his profession, giving the circumstances of the case in which such questions (defamatory questions) were asked without reasonable grounds. The scope of the section is limited to such questions as were asked under the circumstances mentioned in Section 148.[93]

"The object of these sections [Sections 149, 150, 151, 152] is to lay down, in the most distinct manner, the duty of counsel of all grades in examining witnesses with a view to shaking their credit by damaging their character. I trust that this explicit statement of the principles, according to which such questions ought or ought not to be asked, will be found sufficient to prevent the growth, in this country, of that which in England has on many occasions been a grave scandal. I think that the sections, as far as their substance is concerned, speak for themselves, and that they will be admitted to be sound by all honourable advocates and by the public..."[94]

---

88. Deepchand v. Sampathraj, 1970 Cr LJ 26 0 : AIR 1970 Mys 34; Gajanan Laxman v. Rangarao Amrutr ao, 1980 Bom CR 675 (Bom)(DB).
89. Bhashyam Iyengar v. Andal Ammal, 1934 Mad WN (Cri) 81.
90. Per RAJAMANNAR J., Anthoni Udayar v. Velusami Thevar, AIR 1948 Mad 469.
91. Karuppanna Goundan v. Kuppuswamy Mudaliar, (1935) Mad WN (Cri) 69; Rebecca Mondal v. R, AIR 1947 Cal 278.
92. Ayeasha Bi v. Peer Khan Sahib, 1954 Cr LJ 1239 : AIR 1954 Mad 741.
93. Sullivan v. Norton, ILR 10 Mad 28 (FB).
94. Abstract of Proceedings of the Council of the Governor General of India, Vol. XI (1872) p. 133.

"In order to protect witnesses against needless questions of this kind, we enact that any advocate who asks such questions without written instructions (which the Court may call upon him to produce, and may impound when produced) shall be guilty of Contempt of Court, and that the court may record any such question, if asked by a party to the proceedings. The records of the question in the written instructions are to be admissible as evidence of the publication of an imputation intended to harm the reputation of the person affected, and such imputations are not to be regarded as privileged communications, or as falling under any of the exceptions to Section 499 of the Indian Penal Code, merely because they were made in the manner stated. Upon a trial for defamation, it would, of course, be open to the person accused to show, either that the imputation was true, and that it was for the public good that the imputation should be made (Exception 1, Section 499, Indian Penal Code), or that it was made in good faith for the protection of the interest of the person making it or of any other person (Exception 9). This is the only method which occurs to us of providing at once for the interests of a bona fide questioner and an innocent witness."[1]

In PHIPSON'S EVIDENCE 13th Edn. para 33.71 at page 807 reference is made to the code of conduct for the Bar of England and Wales which came into force on 1-1-1981. Though applicable to barristers the principles apply to all advocates. Some of them are given below:

"In all cases it is the duty of a barrister to guard against being made the channel for questions or statements which are only intended to insult or annoy either the witness or any other person or otherwise are in abuse of the counsel's function, and to exercise his own judgement both as to the substance and the form of the questions put or statements made."

"In cross-examination which goes to a matter in issue, a barrister may put questions suggesting fraud, misconduct or the commission of a crime if he is satisfied that the matters suggested are part of his client's case and he has no reason to believe that they are only put forward for the purpose of impugning the witness's character."

"(a) Questions which affect the credibility of a witness attacking his character, but which are otherwise not relevant to the actual inquiry, may not be put in cross-examination unless there are reasonable grounds to support the imputation conveyed by the questions.

(b) A barrister may regard instructions from his solicitor that the imputation is well-founded as reasonable grounds to support an imputation conveyed by such questions; but he may not rely on a statement from any other person unless he has ascertained so far as is practicable that the person can give satisfactory reasons for his statement."

"A protracted and irrelevant cross-examination not only adds to the cost of litigation but is a waste of public time. Cross-examination becomes indefensible when it is conducted without restraint and without the courtesy and consideration which a witness is entitled to except in a court of law."

"The Court may disallow cross-examination used simply to oppress and not for the purposes of justice. The Code of Conduct of the Bar affirms similar principles.[2] In particular suggestions of crime, fraud or misconduct may not be made unless they are both material and supported on reasonable grounds.[3] Moreover, protracted and irrelevant cross-examination adds to the cost of litigation and wastes public time. Cross-examination becomes indefensible when it is conduct without restraint and without the courtesy and consideration which a witness is entitled to expect in a Court of law."[4] (PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), page 250 (para 11-21)).

2. RIGHT AND RESPONSIBILITY OF COUNSEL

LORD ESHER in Munster v. Lamb[5] observed: "The advocate speaks from instruction; he reasons from facts, sometimes true, sometimes false. He does not express his own inferences, his own opinion or his own sentiments, but those which he desires the Tribunal before which he appears, to adopt. This duty the law allows, almost compels him to perform." Where express malice is absent (and it ought not to be

---

1. Proceedings of the Supreme Legislative Council, Gazette of India, pp. 237, 238, of the Supplement, dated March 30, 1872.
2. (5th ed., 1990) (paras 610(e), (g)).
3. Ibid., (para 610(h)). See also R. v. Neil & Ackers, (1950) 34 Cr App R 108.
4. R. v. Flynn, (1972) Crim LR 428.
5. 11 QBD 588, 603.

presumed), the court having due regard to public policy would be extremely cautious before it deprived the advocate of his protection of Exception 9 to Section 499, I.P.C."[6]

When the legal practitioner, by way of suggestions in the cross-examination, puts questions attacking the public prosecutor, or a witness, involving dishonourable conduct, he would be guilty of professional misconduct unless he assures that he has good ground for making those suggestions, if he does not give such assurance, the cross-examination on those lines should be stopped promptly. If it is found, at the termination of the trial, that no such ground has existed, for his assurance, then the tribunal (court) should bring the conduct of the advocate to the notice of the High Court.[7]

It is not sufficient for a lawyer to plead instructions from the client, as the lawyers have a responsibility in the matter and are not justified in making charges of fraud and crime unless they are personally satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for putting them forward.[8]

The counsel pleading is entitled to present the evidence on the record in the best light possible and for that purpose to argue that the complainant and the witnesses are unreliable. He will not be justified in making a personal attack upon the complainant or witnesses on matters not borne out by the record, nor in using language which is abusive or obscene or in making obscene or vulgar gestures in Court. Initiation of contempt proceeding against an advocate arguing the case of a person charged with committing a serious offence will not be justified merely because he said something during the hearing which appears to overstep the limits of fair advocacy.[9]

Indecent and scandalous questions.

S. 151. The Court may forbid any questions or inquiries which it regards as indecent or scandalous, although such questions or inquiries may have some bearing on the questions before the Court, unless they relate to facts in issue, or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section empowers the court to forbid any questions which are indecent or scandalous, unless they relate to the fact in issue, or to matters necessary to be known, in order to determine whether or nor the facts in issue existed, though such questions may have some bearing on the questions before the court. What is relevant cannot be said to be scandalous.[10] Where the fact is issue was not concerning the paternity of a child rather it was concerned with the issue whether the child/son was kidnapped by the accused and murdered, the Court should not have allowed indecent and scandalous imputations on the moral character of the witness, the mother of the victim.[11] Under Section 151, the court has discretion to forbid any question which it regards as indecent and scandalous, although such questions may have some bearing on the question before the court. But, such a discretion cannot be exercised if such questions relate to the facts in issue, or to matters necessary to be known in order to determine whether or not the facts in issue existed.[12] A trial judge shall not permit questions which are scandalous, vexations or even cantankerous, which elicit irrelevant or inadmissible answers, or even those which do not advane the trial, but are calculated to hinder or delay its progress. He can put questions in the interest of justice, to clarify matters which are left vague, by either of the parties.[13] Questions touching upon a witness's moral character should not be put to him/her in cross-examination, without any material to substantiate the suggestions.[14]

In a proceeding to recover maintenance by a married woman for her illegitimate children, under Section 125 of the Criminal Procedure Code, she "can be examined to prove non-access of her husband

---

6. In re, Nagraj Trikumji, ILR 19 Bom 340; Upendranath v. Emperor, ILR 36 Cal 375.
7. Bans Lochan Lal v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Pat 195; Ayeasha Bi v. Peer Khan Sahib, AIR 1954 Mad 741.
8. Lveston v. Peary Mohan Dass, ILR 40 Cal 898 : AIR 1914 Cal 396.
9. Harbans Kaur v. P.C. Chaturvedi, (1969) 3 SCC 712.
10. Zamindhar of Tuni v. Bennayya, ILR 22 Mad 155, 159; In re G. Vasantha Pai, AIR 1960 Mad 73.
11. State of U.P. v. Raghubir Singh, (1997) 3 SCC 775 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 499, approving Mohd. Mian v. Emperor, 52 IC 54 : (1919) 20 Cr LJ 566 (Pat) and Subala Dasi v. Indra Kumar Hazzva, AIR 1923 Cal 315.
12. K. Saraswati Alias R. Kalpana v. P.S.S. Somasundaram Chettiar, (1970) 2 MLJ 119.
13. Mohinder Singh v. State, ILR (1970) 2 Del 854.
14. 1984 Guj LH 1055; 1984 Guj LH 473.

during their married life, without independent evidence being first offered to prove the illegitimacy of the children."[15]

A counsel is entitled to present the evidence on the record in the best light possible and, to argue, that the complainant and the witnesses are unreliable; he should not however make a personal attack upon the complainant or witnesses on matters not borne out by the record, nor use langauge which is abusive or obscene.[16]

TAYLOR ON LAW OF EVIDENCE (10th Edn., Section 949, p. 675) observes: "There is a fifth kind of evidence which the law excludes, on public grounds, namely, that which involves the unnecessary disclosure of matter that is indecent, or offensive to public morals, or injurious to the feelings of third persons. A disclosure is for this purpose "unnecessary" whenever the parties themselves have no interest in the matter, except what they have impertinently created. The mere indecency of disclosures will not exclude them, where the evidence is necessary for the purpose of civil or criminal justice, as on an indictment for a rape; or on a question upon the sex of one claiming an estate tail, as heir male or for female; or upon the legitimacy of one claiming as lawful heir; or on a petition for dissolution of marriage, for judicial separation, or for damages on the ground of adultery."

RAMASWAMY J., of the Madras High Court, in his book "Magesterial and Police Guide" mentioned the opinions of Indian Lawyers, Mahatma Gandhiji, Motilal Nehru and President Rajendra Prasad which is as follows: "It is unfortunate, however, in this country, owing very often to the timidity of courts and a desire not to become unpopular with the Bar, cross-examination is allowed to be carried on to the extent which can only be described as scandalous, with the result that the courts are avoided by respectable people and the administration of justice suffers thereby, and the Bar gets into greater and greater disrepute and becomes unpopular with the public and the judges become objects of contempt."

Indecent and scandalous questions can be allowed if they are of such a nature that the truth of the imputation conveyed by them would seriously affect the opinion of the court as to the credibility of the witness on the matter to which the witness testifies, but there must be necessity and foundation for such questions.[17]

There may be cases in which the counsel can put questions which may appear to be scandalous.[18]

A counsel should not act to the dictates or wishes of his client in putting defamatory questions to a witness. He must consider whether there was material to substantiate such imputations; otherwise he takes the risk of being run down for defamation.[19]

Questions intended to insult or annoy

S. 152. The Court shall forbid any question which appears to it to be intended to insult or annoy, or which, though proper in itself, appears to the Court needlessly offensive in form.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section empowers the court to forbid questions intended to insult, or annoy or which, proper in itself, appears to the court needlessly offensive in form. It may be noted that under Section 151, the court may forbid any question which is indecent or scandalous, whereas this section says the court shall forbid questions intended to insult, or annoy, or are offensive in form.

Under Section 151, the court cannot forbid indecent and scandalous questions if they relate to the facts in issue. But under Section 152, though it appears to the court that the question is proper in itself. but if it is offensive in form, the court shall have to forbid it.

In a suit for dissolution of marriage by the husband on the ground of desertion by the wife, a letter written by his wife to a friend of his was relied as a good ground for suspecting her fidelity. The counsel for the plaintiff in the cross-examination put questions suggesting sexual intercourse of the wife with the plaintiff's friend. The contents of the letter justified the husband of her suspecting his wife's fidelity.

---

15. Roxario v. Ingles, ILR (1893) 18 Bom 468, 472.
16. Harbans Kaur (Smt.) v. P.C. Chaturvedi, (1969) 3 SCC 712; Bans Lochan Lal v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Pat 195.
17. Prakash Raja Ram v. State of Maharashtra, 1975 Cr LJ 1297 (Bom).
18. In Re, Vasantha Pai, AIR 1960 Mad 73.
19. 1969 Kesh LJ 27.

The High Court castigated the counsel for putting these questions. The Supreme Court held that as the discovery of the letter containing some mysterious sentences was the occasion for the wife to desert her husband, the questions to the defendant in cross-examination were not unjustified.[20]

Exclusion of evidence to contradict answers to questions testing veracity.

S. 153. When a witness has been asked and has answered any question which is relevant to the inquiry only in so far as it tends to shake his credit by injuring his character, no evidence shall be given to contradict him; but, if he answers falsely, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

Exception 1.*—If a witness is asked whether he has been previously convicted of any crime and denies it, evidence may be given of his previous conviction.

Exception 2.*—If a witness is asked any question tending to impeach his impartiality, and answers it by denying the facts suggested, he may be contradicted.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) A claim against an underwriter is resisted on the ground of fraud.

The claimant is asked whether, in a former transaction, he had not made a fraudulent claim. He denies it.

Evidence is offered to show that he did make such a claim.

The evidence is inadmissible.

(b) A witness is asked whether he was not dismissed from a situation for dishonesty. He denies it.

Evidence is offered to show that he was dismissed for dishonesty.

The evidence is not admissible.

(c) A affirms that on a certain day he saw B at Lahore.

A is asked whether he himself was not on that day at Calcutta. He denies it.

Evidence is offered to show that A was on that day at Calcutta.

The evidence is admissible, not as contradicting A on a fact which affects his credit, but as contradicting the alleged fact that B was seen on the day in question in Lahore.

In each of these cases the witness might, if his denial was false, be charged with giving false evidence.

(d) A is asked whether his family has not had a bloodfeud with the family of B against whom he gives evidence.

He denies it. He may be contradicted on the ground that the question tends to impeach his impartiality.

SYNOPSIS

1. Object, Principle, Scope ... 1297
2. If he answers falsely, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence ... 1299
3. Witness denying his previous conviction [Exception (1)] ... 1299
4. Witness denying suggestions to impeach his impartiality [Exception (2)] ... 1299

COMMENTS

1. OBJECT, PRINCIPLE, SCOPE

This section states that, when a witness is asked a question which is relevant to the enquiry, insofar as it tends to shake his credit by injuring his character, no evidence shall be given to contradict him, whether he denies or gives any reply. It follows that whatever answer is given by the witness, it will be conclusive. The illustrations (a) & (b) explain the above rule. If he answers falsely, he may be charged with giving false evidence.

---

20. Bipin Chandra Shaw v. Prabhavati, AIR 1957 SC 176.

The object of the section is to prevent trials being spun out to an unreasonable length. If every answer given by a witness upon the additional facts mentioned in S. 146 could be made the subject of fresh inquiry, a trial might never end. These matters are after all not of the first importance, beyond what is comprised in the exceptions.[21]

The section provides two exceptions, when evidence can be given to contradict the denial, when a question is denied by the witness. Exception (1) states that when a witness is asked whether he was convicted previously and he denies it, evidence may be given of his previous conviction. Exception (2) says that when a question is put tending to impeach his impartiality and it is denied, then evidence can be given to contradict that denial.

Illus. (c) and (d) explain Exception No. (2).

This is a salutary rule and is meant to curtail every inquiry. If contradictory evidence be allowed on side issues for instance, as shaking the witness's credit by injuring his character, there can be no limit to an enquiry. The main issue in the case is almost always likely to be fogged by subsidiary inquiries which are profitless as well as perplexing. The two exceptions engrafted on the section are capable of easy proof and are material in assessing the weight to be attached to the testimony of an individual witness.

When a question affects only the credit of the witness and is not relevant to the matters in issue the answer of the witness cannot be contradicted by other evidence except in exceptional cases.[22] The evidence of a witness cannot be contradicted by citing other witness saying anything relating to him.[23]

If the credit of the witness is sought to be impeached under Section 153, then whatever answers given by the witness have to be taken, and further evidence cannot be allowed. The credit of the witness can also be impeached under Section 155; but, Section 155 does not allow evidence of general bad character of the witness.[24]

The Privy Council observed: "Sections 153 and 155, Indian Evidence Act, must be strictly construed and narrowly interpreted if the courts governed by that statute ought to be spared the task in many suits of prosecuting, on most imperfect material, issues which have no bearing upon that really in contest between the parties. Section 153 does not go far beyond, if it goes at all beyond, the case of A.G. v. Hitchocock, (1847) 1 Ex. 91".[25]

The Supreme Court also held that Section 153 and 155 must be strictly construed; that Section 146 shall not be read with Section 153 in its entirety; that under exception (2) of Section 153, a witness may be contradicted by evidence when he denies any question tending to impeach his impartiality.[26]

It was observed: "The rule is founded on two reasons:—first, that a witness cannot be expected to come prepared to defend, by independent proof, all the actions of his life; and next, that to admit contradictory evidence on such points would of necessity lead to inextricable confusion, by raising an almost endless series of collateral issues. The rejection of the contradictory testimony may indeed sometimes exclude the truth; but this evil, acknowledged though it be, is nothing compared with the inconveniences that must arise were a contrary rule is to prevail."[27]

POLLOCK, C.B., said that a witness may be contradicted as to anything he denies having said, provided it be "connected with the issue as a matter capable of being distinctly given in evidence, or it must be so far connected with it as to be a matter which, if answered in a particular way, would contradict a part of the witness's testimony; and if it is neither the one nor the other of these, it is collateral to, though in some sense it may be considered as connected with, the subject of inquiry. A distinction should be observed between those matters which may be given in evidence by way of contradiction, as directly affecting the story of the witness touching the issue before the jury, and those matters which affect the motives, temper, and character of the witness, not with respect to his credit but with reference to his feelings towards one party or the other."

---

21. MARKBY, 108.
22. Ram Bali v. State, AIR 1952 All 289, 292.
23. State of Karnataka v. K. Yarappa Reddy, 2000 Cr LJ 400 (paras 31-33) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 185.
24. Maung San Myin v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Rang 49.
25. Bhogilal Bhikachand v. Royal Insurance Co., AIR 1928 PC 54, 63.
26. Ramareddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 1162.
27. Attorney General v. Hitchcock, (1847) 1 Ex. 91.

TAYLOR (8th Ed., Section 1295 & 1438) states: "With respect to all questions put to a witness on cross-examination for the purpose of directly testing his credit, it may be broadly laid down, that if the questions relate to relevant facts, the answers may be contradicted by independent evidence, if not irrelevant, they cannot."

In FIELD ON EVIDENCE (11th Edn., Vol. 5, P. 4854) it is observed: "The Indian Evidence Act adopts the same principle. The exceptions to the rule are taken from English law — the first from the 25th section of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, the second, being in accordance with a strongly intimated opinion of the Baron of the Exchequer in the case of the Attorney-General v. Hitchcock.[28]

Except in the case of exceptions mentioned in Section 153, a witness's answer to the questions tending to shake his credit cannot be contradicted, nor by Section 153 can former contradictory statements be proved, unless that part of the witness's evidence, which they contradicted, was itself liable to be contradicted.[29]

Where the prosecution and the defence side gave divergent versions of the incident of murder and the defence witness deposed that the prosecution witness was along with him at a different place in connection with the sale of a lorry, it was held that the evidence of the defence witness was admissible and the sale receipt bearing the signature of the prosecution witness was not unreliable merely because the prosecution witness was noted as present in the inquest report. Hence the presence of the prosecution at the place of occurrence was doubtful.[30]

2. IF HE ANSWERS FALSELY, HE MAY AFTERWARDS BE CHARGED WITH GIVING FALSE EVIDENCE

These words were apparently inserted in forgetfulness of the fact that the Indian law as to false evidence differs from the English law as to perjury in not requiring that the matter charged as false should have been material to the issue.[31]

3. WITNESS DENYING HIS PREVIOUS CONVICTION [EXCEPTION (1)]

Under the first exception when a witness denies the suggestion that he was previously convicted of an offence, then evidence can be given of his previous conviction, by producing a certified copy of the order of conviction from the officer-in-charge of a jail or from the court, as per the provisions of Section 298 of (old) Cr.P.C. (now Section 294).

Where a witness who was questioned as to whether he was not an active criminal and whether he was not under police surveillance, denied the suggestions, the evidence given to contradict him had nothing to do with his previous conviction or with the impeachment of his impartiality, but was only intended to impeach his character. Therefore, the evidence to contradict the denial was held not admissible under Section 153. But proof of previous conviction is admissible.[32]

4. WITNESS DENYING SUGGESTIONS TO IMPEACH HIS IMPARTIALITY [EXCEPTION (2)]

The Supreme Court held that under Exception (2) to Section 153 a witness may be contradicted by evidence when he denies any question tending to impeach his impartiality.[33]

Questions by party to his own witness.

S. 154. The Court may, in its discretion, permit the person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party.

---

28. (1847) 1 Ex 91 100.
29. Ayeasha Bi v. Peer Khan Sahib, AIR 1954 Mad 741.
30. Vijayan v. State, AIR 1999 SC 1311.
31. STOKES, Vol. II, p. 929, f.n. 2.
32. Kamala Kanto Das v. State, AIR 1959 Cal 342.
33. Rama Reddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 1162.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1300
2. The court may in its discretion ... 1301
3. Hostile witness ... 1303
4. When a witness can be treated as hostile ... 1303
5. Procedure ... 1305
6. Evidentiary value ... 1306
7. Statements under Section 162 and 164, Cr.P.C. ... 1308

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that the court in its discretion can allow a party to put any questions to its own witness which might be put in cross-examination by the opposite party. The court is expected to find out the truth of the case put forward by both the parties. With that object this provision is made empowering the court to use its discretion to allow a party to put questions to his own witness which might be put in the cross-examination by the opposite party. The witness can be asked (1) leading questions u/Section 143, (2) questions relating to his previous statements in writing under Section 145, and (3) questions which tend to test his veracity under Section 146. Thus the ordinary rule that a party calling a witness is not to be allowed to ask such questions, is relaxed in this section. This relaxation is made with the sole purpose of finding out whether the witness is one of truth for the purpose of relying on his evidence.

Where a party calling a witness and examining him discovers that he is either hostile or unwilling to answer questions put to him, he can obtain permission of the Court to put questions to him which may be put to him by way of cross-examination. The section does not say that a person who calls a witness may cross-examine him in certain circumstances, but he might put questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party. That is not the same as cross-examination.[1]

Under this section, before a party calling a witness can cross-examine him, it is not necessary that the witness should first be declared to be hostile to the party calling him, and the Court has unfettered discretion to allow a counsel to put questions of a cross-examination nature to his own witness even though he did not show himself hostile to the party calling him, but the Court ought not to exercise its discretion unless during the examination-in-chief something happens which makes it necessary for the facts to be got from that witness by cross-examination; it is necessary before the procedure under this section can be adopted that leave of the Court should be asked for and obtained or permission given by the Court suo motu for the said purpose before such questions are put to a witness though the section may not make such a procedure imperative and the permission contemplated by the section should be signified, if not in words, by some other action of the Court indicating its permission during the cross-examination of the witness by the party calling him.[2]

It was held by the Madras High Court that the reason why courts in India are given a much wider discretion than that of in England is in all probability to avoid the conflict which had existed in England over the words "hostile" and "adverse".[3]

This section does not speak about declaring a witness as a hostile witness but allows the party with the permission of the court to cross-examine his own witness; in the same manner as the opposite party does.[4]

RANKIN C.J., in Profulla Kumar Sarkar v. Emperor[5] while considering the observations made in Bikram Ali v. Emperor,[6] observed: "Upon this I would make two observations: first, the reason why

---

1. Bikram Ali Pramanik v. Emperor, ILR (1929) 57 Cal 801; Luchi Ram Motilal Boid v. Radha Charan Poddar, ILR (1921) 49 Cal 93; Khijiruddin Sonar v. Emperor, ILR (1925) 53 Cal 372; Dadabuddappa Gouli v. Kalu Kanu Gouli, AIR 2000 Kant 158 (paras 5-8 and 14).
2. Ammathayarammal v. Official Assignee, Madras, ILR (1932) 56 Mad 7 : AIR 1933 Mad 137; Mohan Banjari v. King-Emperor, (1933) 30 NLR 55 : AIR 1933 Nag 384.
3. Ammathayarammal v. Official Assignee, High Court, AIR 1933 Mad 137.
4. Baikuntha v. Prasannamoyi, AIR 1922 PC 409; State v. Mohan Hira, AIR 1960 Guj 9; Tulasi Ram Shaw v. R C Pal Ltd., AIR 1953 Cal 160.
5. AIR 1931 Cal 401, 404 (FB).
6. AIR 1930 Cal 139.

Section 154 does not say that with the permission of the court a party may cross-examine his own witness is simply that this would in strictness be a contradiction in terms. Cross-examination means examination by the opposite party as distinct from the party who calls the witness (Section 137) this is I think the whole explanation of the use of the phrase "put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party". The second observation is that while the mere putting of a question in a leading form is not necessarily tantamount to cross-examination, there is no doubt as to the power of the judge to give leave to put a leading question to one's own witness. This is plain from Section 142, the second part of which goes further than English Law and requires the Judge to give permission in certain cases."

The utility of cross-examination under Section 154 is supposed to be that it is a means whereby the court can more readily get the truth out of the witness, as the party's own witness unexpectedly makes statements adverse to the party calling him.[7]

2. THE COURT MAY IN ITS DISCRETION

The law has advisedly left the matter entirely at the discretion of the trial judge who has the benefit of watching the witness in the box and hearing him giving the evidence. Such discretion vested in a court has to be exercised judicially. The appellate court can interfere with discretion exercised by the trial court in case of improper exercise on the material available.[8]

When the appellate court holds that permission to cross-examine the witness should have been given by the trial court, the proper thing to do would be to send back the case to the trial court to take the evidence of the said witness further after granting permission to the prosecution to cross-examine its witness. Without doing that the appellate court cannot straight-away proceed to reject the evidence of the said witness as if he was hostile and had been won over by the defence.[9]

Order allowing party to cross-examine its own witness is purely discretionary and will not be interfered with in revision.[10]

A party who calls on opponent as a witness has no right to cross-examine him, however hostile he may be, without the leave of the Judge. Whether a witness is a litigant or not, it is a matter of discretion in the Judge whether he shows himself so hostile as to justify his cross-examination by the party calling him.[11]

The Supreme Court in Dayabhai Chahaganbhai Thakkar v. State of Gujarat[12] observed: "Section 137 gives only the three stages in the examination of a witness, namely, examination-in-chief, cross-examination and re-examination. This has no relevance to the question when a party calling a witness can be permitted to put to him questions under Section 154; that is governed by the provisions of Section 154 which confers a discretionary power on the court to permit a person who calls a witness to put any questions to him which might be put in cross-examination by the adverse party. Section 154 does not in terms, or by necessary implication, confine the exercise of the power by the court before the examination-in-chief is concluded or to any particular stage of the examination of the witness. The discretion is entirely left to the court to exercise the power when the circumstances demand. The court, therefore, can permit a person, who calls a witness, to put questions to him which might be put in the cross-examination at any stage of the examination of the witness, provided it takes care to give an opportunity to the accused (opposite party) to cross-examine him on the answers elicited which do not find place in the examination-in-chief. Section 154 cannot be invoked after chief examination, cross-examination and re-examination are over.[13]

The Supreme Court observed: "The discretion conferred by Section 154 on the court is unqualified and untrammelled and is apart from any question of hostility. It is to be liberally exercised whenever the

---

7. Maharani Knirod Kumari Devi v. Ghasi Kuar, ILR 1962 Cut 767 dissenting from Krutibas Sahu v. Madhab Das, AIR 1961 Ori 48.
8. State of Mysore v. Sobhappa, (1961) 2 Cr LJ 653 (Mys).
9. Muhsan Ali v. Union Territory of Tripusa Lall, AIR 1964 Tri 45.
10. 1971 All Cr R 354.
11. Price v. Manning, (1889) 42 Ch D 372.
12. AIR 1964 SC 1563.
13. Rabindra Kumar Dey v. State of Orissa, AIR 1977 SC 170 followed in reversing (1971) 1 Cut WR 510; See also Pran Krishna Das v. State, ILR (1971) 2 Cal 392.

court from the witness's demeanour, temper, attitude, bearing, or the tenor and tendency of his answers, or from a perusal of his previous inconsistent statement, or otherwise, thinks that the grant of such permission is expedient to extract the truth and to do justice. The grant of such permission does not amount to an adjudication by the court as to the veracity of the witness. Therefore, in the order granting such permission, it is preferrable to avoid the use of such expression, such as, "declared hostile", "declared unfavourable", the significance of which is not still free from the historical cobwebs which, in their wake bring a misleading legacy of confusion, and conflict that had so long vexed the English Courts..... The evidence of such a witness cannot, as a matter of law, be treated as washed off out of the record. The Judge has to consider whether it could still be believed in regard to a part of his testimony."[14]

The discretion of the court must be exercised judicially. It should not be exercised without reason and the reason must be stated. The witness should exhibit an element of hostility or resile from a material statement made before an earlier authority or not be speaking the truth. There must be some material to show that the witness is not speaking the truth. Merely because a witness in an unguarded moment speaks the truth which may not suit the prosecution or which may be favourable to the accused, the discretion to allow cross-examination of ones own witness cannot be exercised. In R.K. Dey v. Orissa,[15] the witnesses in their statements before the police attributed a clear intention to the accused to commit murder but before the Court they stated that the accused was insane. The right to cross-examine them was upheld. But this does not make him an unreliable witness so as to exclude his evidence from consideration altogether.[16] The Court has the discretion under this section, to permit the prosecution to test, by way of cross-examination, the veracity of their own witnesses with regard to the (unconnected) matters elicited by the defence in cross-examination.[17]

Leading questions are allowed to be put to a party's own witness when such witness appears to be not only adverse but also hositle to the party, or if the witness tries to defeat the party's case by suppressing the truth.[18] The fact that a witness was permitted to be cross-examined under Section 154 by the Committing Magistrate would be of no avail in the Sessions Court, as the Sessions Court has to independently decide whether or not to give permission to cross-examine one's own witness, as required under Section 154.[19]

Merely because permission was given under Section 154 the nature of the examination of a witness by the party who calls him, is not changed from the examination-in-chief to cross-examination.[20]

It is not necessary to make a formal declaration that a witness in hostile before permission is granted under Section 154. The discretion in granting permission is a judicial discretion which should be exercised in a judicious way. For the purpose of discovering the truth, it is open to the court to act either under Section 154 to a limited extent or under Section 142 which allows leading questions to be put in examination-in-chief, even if objected to, with the permission of the court.[21]

Permitting the public prosecutor to put questions to his own witness without declaring the witness as hostile is illegal.[22]

Refusal by the court to allow a witness to be cross-examined does not necessarily imply that he considered him to be a truthful witness.[23]

---

14. Sat Paul v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1976 SC 294. See also Janardan v. State of Kerala, 1979 Mad LJ (Cri) 49 (Ker); State of Orissa v. Surendra Paramanik, (1962) 28 Cut LT 625.
15. AIR 1949 Pat 415.
16. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1976 SC 202, 203; Rabindra Kumar Dey v. State of Orissa, AIR 1977 SC 170; State v. Subhappa, (1961) 2 Cr LJ 653 (Mys); State of Mysore v. Subhappa, ILR 1960 Mys 742.
17. Amrita Lal Hagara v. Emperor, ILR (1915) 42 Cal 957.
18. Kala Chand Sahai v. Queen Empress, 13 Cal 53.
19. Sailendra Kumar v. State of Tripura, AIR 1959 Tripura 11, 15.
20. State v. Mohan Hira, AIR 1960 Guj 9; Banshilal v. State, 1981 JLJ 143 (DB).
21. Sivhamurthy Swamy v. Agodi Songonna, AIR 1969 Mys 12; State v. Ramesh Chandra, ILR (1974) 1 Del 129.
22. Koli Nana Bhana v. State of Gujarat, 1986 Cr LJ 571 (Guj).
23. State v. Genda Lal, AIR 1950 MB 89.

3. HOSTILE WITNESS

Hostile witnesses are those who are trying to defeat the prosecution by suppressing the truth. A witness who is unfavourable is not necessarily hostile, because a hostile witness is one who from the way in which he gives evidence would show that he is not desirous of telling the truth to the court.[24]

A witness who states the truth cannot be dubbed as "hostile" just because his statement does not suit the party producing him.[25]

A witness who is gained over by the opposite party is a hostile witness.

4. WHEN A WITNESS CAN BE TREATED AS HOSTILE

When a prosecution witness states something which is destructive of the prosecution case, the prosecution is entitled to pray that the witness be treated as hostile; in such a case the trial court must allow the public prosecutor to treat the witness as hostile.[26]

The mere fact that the evidence of a witness tends to be favourable to the accused as elicited by the defence in cross-examination would not be a valid ground to declare such a witness as a hostile.[27] Merely because a witness speaks about the truth which may not suit the party on whose behalf he is deposing and the same is favourable to the other side, the Court can not exercise its discretion to allow that party to cross-examine its own witness by declaring him hostile[28] unless such a witness is suppressing the truth and exhibits hostile animus which has to be judged on the basis of the answers given by him.[29] There must be some material to show that the witness has given back his earlier statement or is not speaking the truth or has exhibited an element of hostility or has changed sides.[30]

In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE 15th Ed. (2000), para 11-58, page 276 it is observed: "Adverse" means "hostile",[31] that is, when in the opinion of the judge[32], he bears a hostile animus to the party calling him and so does not give his evidence fairly and with a desire to tell the truth to the court. He is not adverse in the statutory sense when his testimony merely contradicts his proof or because it is unfavourable to the party calling him.[33] A witness who is not compellable but chooses to give evidence may be treated as hostile.[34] The Court of Appeal has said that an application to treat a witness as hostile must be made at the instant it is obvious that he is showing unmistakable signs of hostility.[35]

The expression "hostile witness" has been avoided because of the confusion caused by it in English Law. The section confers a simple discretion upon the Court to allow a party to cross-examine his own witness.[36] In short, the rule prohibiting a party to put questions to his own witness in the manner of cross-examination or in a leading form is relaxed not because the witness has already forfeited all right to credit but because of his antipathetic attitude or otherwise the Court feels that for doing justice, his evidence will be more fully given, the truth more effectively extracted and credit more adequately tested

---

24. Kalachand Sahai v. Queen Empress, ILR 13 Cal 53; Luchiram v. Radha Charan, ILR 49 Cal 93; Yusuf v. State of U.P., 1973 Cr LJ 1220; Dhruba Padhan v. State, (1983) 56 Cut LT 251; Panchanan Gogai v. Emperor, (1930) 57 Cal 1266.
25. Durga Dutt v. Chandanu, AIR 1956 HP 58; P.C. Pai v. Agricultural I.T. Officer, AIR 1970 Mys 168; State v. Nilam Das, 1952 HP 74; Shanker Nath v. Jagat Ram, ILR 1975 HP 46.
26. G.S. Baksh v. State (Delhi Administration), AIR 1979 SC 569.
27. Yusuf v. State of U.P., 1973 Cr LJ 1220.
28. S. Murugesan v. S. Pethaperumal, AIR 1999 Mad 76 (paras 7 and 12).
29. K.Kusuma Kumari v. G. Surya Bhagwan, 1996 AIHC 2627 (para 17) (AP).
30. Shanmuganathan v. Vallaiswamy, 1997 AIHC 2716 (paras 6 and 11) (Mad).
31. Greenough v. Eccles, (1859) 5 C.B. (N.S.) 786. The witness is described in the specimen direction to the jury suggested by the Judicial Studies Board as a witness who has "changed sides".
32. Which is final: Rice v. Howard, (1886) 16 QBD 681; R. v. Williams, (1913) 29 TLR 188; R v. Manning, (1968) Crim LR 675.
33. Greenough v. Eccles, (1859) 5 C.B. (NS) 786; R v. Smith, (1909) 2 Cr App R 86, 106, per JELF J., disapproving the decision of Coleridge J. at the trial; Cf. R v. Little, (1883) 15 Cox 319, R v. Williams, (1913) 8 Cr. App. R. 113.
34. R. v. Pitt, (1983) QB 25.
35. R. v. Pestano, (1981) Crim LR 397.
36. Sat Paul v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1976 SC 294. (The Court explains at this stage the purpoose of cross- examination and the validity of some of the Calcutta High Court decisions to the effect that once a witness is declared hostile his testimony cannot be used at all).

by questions put in a more pointed, penetrating and searching way. The expression "any questions that may be asked by the adverse party in cross-examination" shows that neither party is excluded from relying on his testimony.

This section does not warrant an inference that, only when any previous statement of the witness is available and if he is alleged to have departed from that, the Court can declare that witness hostile.[37] Inconsistent and contradictory statements are not enough. The witness must appear to be not desirous of telling the truth and it is necessary to regard him hostile for eliciting the truth.[38] Mere presentation of an application by the prosecution or representation that a certain witness had been won over is not conclusive of the allegation. In such a case the witness can be produced for cross-examination by the accused which would elicit correct facts. Inference of hostility of a witness should be drawn only from the answers given by him and to some extent from the demeanour.[39] Where the earliest information of the occurrence as given by the witness was recorded by the police constable who was not shown not to have cordial relations with the witness, nor the witness at any point of time complained about recording of version as told by him, the grant of permission to the prosecution to treat the constable as a hostile witness and to put the questions to him in cross-examination simply because the prosecution itself had given a different version to suit its convenience, was not warranted.[40] The prosecution witness cannot be declared hostile merely on the ground that he did not concur with the suggestion made by the public prosecutor only on a post event detail.[41] When a witness was not confronted with any contradiction in the trial court he cannot be treated as a hostile.[42]

When a witness gives answers fatal to the case of the prosecution, it would be wrong for the prosecutor not to exercise its right to seek permission to put leading question by treating him as hostile.[43] Eye-witnesses were declared hostile for the reason that they did not state specifically at the trial that they had seen the accused firing.[44]

The party who seeks permission of the court must lay a foundation for cross-examining his own witness. The court has to look into the previous statements of a witness, if any, whether the witness was actually resiling from the position taken during investigation, before declaring him as hostile.[45] Where there was no material to show that the prosecution witness had resiled from his statement made during investigation, the prosecution could not be permitted to cross-examine him.[46] Where the witness does not exhibit an element of hostility to the party for whom he is deposing, permission to cross-examine him can not be granted[47] but permission can be granted to recall and cross-examine one's own witness where the witness has resiled from his original statement on a material aspect.[48] When the witness makes two contradictory statements he can be permitted to be cross-examined for eliciting the truth under Section 154.[49]

A witness need not be declared hostile for allowing the prosecution to cross-examine his own witness under the proviso to Section 162 (1), Cr. P.C.[50]; so also where the public prosecutor after

---

37. Sahdeo Tanti v. Gipti, AIR 1969 Pat 415.
38. Phanindra Nath v. Bholanath Banerjee, AIR 1982 Cal 397.
39. State of U.P. v. Jaggo, AIR 1971 SC 1586; In re Vengala Reddy, AIR 1956 AP 26, 29; Sat Paul v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1976 SC 294; In re Vengata Reddy, 1956 Andhra 26; P.P. v. Subramanaya Odayar, 1937 Mad WN 557 (FB); Indra Mohan Brahma v. State of Assam, 1982 Cr LJ (NOC) 127 (Gau); Madhusudan Prasad Agarwal v. State of Bihar, 1973 Cr LJ 1582 (Pat); Ashim Das v. State of Assam, 1987 Cr LJ 1533 (Gau)(DB); Gura Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 487 (para 12) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 330.
40. Mahalingam v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 1991 (para 13) (Mad).
41. Gura Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 487 (para 13) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 330.
42. Bir Singh Majhi v. State of Assam, 1977 Cr LJ 1349 (Gau).
43. Food Inspector v. A.K. Ahammad Haji, 1983 Mad LJ (Cri) 280 : 1984 Cr LJ (NOC) 82.
44. Dagdu v. State of M.P., AIR 1999 SC 2639 (para 3).
45. Lalu v. State, AIR 1960 Cal 776; Saraswathamma v. Bhadramma, AIR 1970 Mys 157; Ranjith Singh v. State, AIR 1952 HP 81.
46. Samir Das v. State of Tripura, 1999 Cr LJ 953 at p. 955 (Gau).
47. Public Prosecutor, A.P. High Court v. Thummala Janardhana Rao, 1998 Cr LJ 4450 (para 12) (AP).
48. Shanmuganathan v. Vallaiswamy, 1997 AIHC 2716 (paras 11 and 12) (Mad).
49. ILR 1975 HP 46.
50. State v. Mohan Hira, AIR 1960 Guj 9; State v. Balchand, AIR 1960 Raj 101; Krutibas Sahu v. Madhab Das, AIR 1961 Ori 48; Tulsiram Shaw v. R.C. Pal, Ltd., AIR 1953 Cal 160.

obtaining the permission had asked a question to a prosecution witness with regard to the role played by two of the accused persons on the basis of his police statement.[51]

Even if a party calling a witness, wants to treat him as hostile his opinion as to the hostility is not final, and binding on the court. When the witness deposes in favour of the party calling him the court still is entitled to either believe or dis-believe him.[52]

The mere fact that at a Sessions trial a witness tells a different story from that told by him before the Magistrate does not necessarily make him hostile. The proper inference to be drawn from contradictions going to the whole texture of the story is not that the witness is hostile to this side or to that, but that the witness is one who ought not to be believed unless supported by other satisfactory evidence.[53]

5. PROCEDURE

The Court can permit a person, who calls a witness, to put questions to him which might be put in the cross-examination at any stage of the examination of the witness, provided it takes care to give an opportunity to the adverse party to cross-examine him on the answers elicited which do not find place in examination-in-chief.[54]

The proper stage for allowing the party to cross-examine his own witness is when he was being examined in-chief or in re-examination. And there is no scope for allowing the party when the witness was in the charge of the adversry for the purpose of cross-examination.[55]

Where a witness who is a competent witness has been tendered by the prosecution and oath has been administered by him, it is the prosecution which should technically be deemed to have called him although it did not put a single question to him. And the court cannot be said to act illegally in allowing him to be cross-examined under Section 154.[56]

Where the prosecution dropped a witness without declaring him as hostile, the defence applied for cross-examination of the said witness. It was held that the prosecution cannot object to take into consideration evidence of the said witness who was cross-examined by the defence only because he was not examined by the prosecution.[57]

Where while being cross-examined by the plaintiff's counsel, a letter was produced by the defence witness whereby the defendant was taken by surprise, it was held that the court was right in allowing the defendant to cross-examine his witness, that the cross-examination is permitted only in regard to the genuineness and content of the letter.[58]

Under Section 154 the maker of the statement alone and none else can be contradicted with his previous statement.[59]

A witness examined by the prosecution in the committing Magistrate's court, was tendered in the Sessions Court for cross-examination by defence, without his previous statement in the Commital court being brought on the record. After the cross-examination the prosectuion again cross-examined the witness without obtaining the leave of the court as required by Section 154. It was held that so much of the evidence elicited from the witness by cross-examination of the prosecution was not properly and legally obtained, and to that extent the accused must be held to be prejudiced.[60]

---

51. K. Naga Subba Reddy v. Public Prosecutor, A.P. High Court, 2000 Cr LJ 3452 (para 16) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 3480.
52. State of Mysore v. Raju Shetty, AIR 1961 Mys 74.
53. Kalachand Sircar v. Queen-Empress, ILR (1886) 13 Cal 53; Nga Nyein v. King-Emperor, ILR (1932) 11 Ran 4.
54. Dahyabhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1964 SC 1563.
55. Kailas Bais v. State, 1982 Jab LR 823 (MP).
56. Manzurul Haque v. State of Bihar, AIR 1958 Pat 422; Sahdeo Tanti v. Gipto Pasan, AIR 1969 Pat 415.
57. 1979 Cr LR 531 (Guj).
58. Malappa v. Guramma, AIR 1956 Bom 129; reversed on another point in Guramma v. Mallapa, AIR 1964 SC 510; Chummilal Ojha v. Mulsmkar Ojha, ILR 1961 Cut 635 (rejection of permission to cross-examine his own witness was held wrong); Ranjit Singh v. State, AIR 1952 HP 81 (refusal of permission held wrong) relying on Amritlal Hazra v. Emperor, AIR 1916 Cal 188.
59. State of Bihar v. S.K. Mehta, 1966 Cr LJ 343, 349 (Pat).
60. Dhirendra Nath v. State, AIR 1952 Cal 621, 627.

6. EVIDENTIARY VALUE

The Court should always be slow in acting on the evidence of a hostile witness. It should require corroboration by other reliable evidence. But the evidence may not be rejected outright because he makes different statement at different times.[61] It is not quite strange that some witnesses do turn hostile but that by itself would not prevent the Court from finding an accused guilty if there is otherwise acceptable evidence in support of the prosecution.[62] When a witness is declared hostile and when his testimony is not shaken on material points in the cross-examination, there is no ground to reject his testimony in toto.[63] The Court is not precluded from taking into account the statement of a hostile witness altogether and it is not necessary to discard that same in toto and can be relied upon partly.[64] If some portion of the statement of the hostile witness inspires confidence, it can be relied upon. He can not be termed as wholly unreliable.[65] Where a witness supported the prosecution case against his nephew in the Committal Court, but was declared later as hositle, his statement cannot be disbelieved.[66] Hostile witness is not necessarily a false witness.[67] Granting of a permission by the court to cross-examine his own witness does not amount to an adjudication by the court as to the veracity of a witness. It only means a declaration that the witness is adverse or unfriendly to the party calling him, and not that the witness is untruthful.[68] Cross-examination of a witness by the party calling him, does not make him unreliable witness so as to exclude his evidence from consideration altogether.[69] Merely because a witness becomes hostil it would not result in throwing out the prosecution case, but the Court must see the relative effect of his testimony.[70] Merely because the prosecution obtains permission to cross-examine the witness by treating him as a hostile it would not efface the value of the evidence of the hostile witness. If such evidence is corroborated by other evidence, there is no legal bar to convict the accused. On the basis of that evidence of the hositle witness.[71] Testimony of a hostile witness is

---

61. Karuppana Thevar v. State of T.N., AIR 1976 SC 980.

62. Sheikh Zakir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 911. See also State of Gujarat v. Balubhai Madhabhai Zala, 1995 Cr LJ 2588 (para 6.1) (Guj).

63. Syed Akbar v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1979 SC 1848 reversing the judgement of the Karn H.C.; Khujji v. State of M.P., AIR 1991 SC 1853; Dulal Chandra Ghosh v. State, 1988 Cr LJ 1835 (Cal); Subhas Debnath v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1373 (Cal); Asokan v. State of Kerala, 1982 Cr LJ 173 (Ker); Shankarlal v. State of M.P., 1982 Cr LJ 254 (DB); Arogyanadham v. State A.P., (1985) 1 Andhra WR 124; Gurbax Singh v. State of H.P., 1977 Cr LJ 1676; Harpal Singh v. State of H.P., 1976 Cr LJ 162 (HP); (though his earlier statement was under Section 164 Cr. P.C.); Shyama v. State of Rajasthan, 1977 Raj LW 146 : 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 79; In re Saibana Thipanna, AIR 1966 Mys 248; Santlal v. State of Rajasthan, 1975 Raj LW 350; Zamir Ali v. State, 1982 All LJ 66 (DB); Bir Singh v. State, ILR 1974 HP 948; relied on Rema Naik v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 31; Deodhari Koeri v. Emperor, AIR 1937 Pat 34; Chandrawati v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 975 (para 19) (Del); Zamir Ahmad v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 2354 (para 12) (Del); Raj Bahadur v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 2364 (paras 27 and 28) (Del).

64. Gulshan Kumar v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 1525 (paras 19 and 20) (Del); Kunwar v. State of U.P.,1993 Cr LJ 3421 (Paras 77 and 78) (All). Also see Haneefa v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 2125 (para 10) (Ker).

65. Ashokkumar Uttamchand Shah v. P.M.A. Chanchad, AIR 1999 Guj 108 (para 17). See also Madhukar Damu Patil v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 1062 (para 11) (Bom), relying on State of U.P. v. Chetram, AIR 1989 SC 1543 : 1989 Cr LJ 1785.

66. Ananta Mohanto v. State of Orissa, AIR 1979 SC 1433; See also (1971) 2 Cut WR 121; Lutai v. State, 1976 Cr LT 869 (All).

67. Shatrughan v. State of M.P., 1993 Cr LJ 120.

68. Sat Paul v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1976 SC 294; Sarjug Prasad v. State, AIR 1959 Pat 66; Emperor v. Haradhan, AIR 1933 Pat 517; Sahdeo Tanti v. Gipti Pasan, AIR 1969 Pat 415; Syed Akbar v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1979 SC 1848; State of U.P. v. Girija Shanker Misra, 1985 Cr LJ (NOC) 79 (Delhi); Azhar v. State, 1985 All LJ 384; Madho Ram Shakya v. State, 1984 All LJ 275; Rajaram v. State, 1978 Cr LJ 196 (All); Shankarlal v. State of M.P., 1982 Cr LJ 254 (MP); Badrinath v. State, AIR 1953 J&K 41; Jay Prakash v. State of Sikkim, 1982 Cr LJ (NOC) 196 (Cal); Kalimuddin v. State, 1977 Cr LJ (NOC) 261 (Cal); Babulal v. State of Rajasthan, 1977 Cr LJ 59; Agasti Mahananda v. Ramaprasad Padhi, (1969) 35 Cut LT 794; Ashique Khan v. State, 1974 Cr LJ 724 (Pat); Bholanath v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 1409 (Del); Ashok Kumar v. State, ILR (1976) 1 Delhi 359; Bir Singh Majhi v. State of Assam, 1977 Cr LJ 1349; Mazahar Ali v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 1629; Bhagatram v. State of M.P., 1990 Cr LJ 2407; Laxman Sahu v. State of Orissa, 1990 Cr LJ 821; Bhagaban Barik v. State of Orissa, ILR (1978) 1 Cut 202. Shyama v. State of Rajasthan 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 79 : 1977 Raj LW 146; Bholanath v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 1409 (Del).

69. Dhanu v. State of Tripura, 1999 Cr LJ 1231, at p. 1239 (Gau).

70. Suresh Chand v. State of Haryana, 1976 Cr LJ 452.

71. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1976 SC 202; See also Rabindra Kumar Dav v. State of Orissa, AIR 1977 SC 170.

acceptable to the extent it is corroborated by that of a reliable witness.[72] The evidence of a hostile witness is not necessarily to be rejected either in whole or in part. It is also not to be rejected so far as it is in favour of the party who called the witness, nor is it to be rejected so far as it is in favour of the opposite party. The whole of the evidence so far as it affects both parties favourably and unfavourably must be considered for whatever it is worth.[73]

Lapse of time may however be considered in examining the discrepancies.[74]

Where a party is allowed to cross-examine his own witness, the effect of that cross-examination must be to discredit that witness altogether and not merely to get rid of part of his testimony, and hence that witness's evidence must be excluded altogether. In the case of a witness for the prosecution, this means so far as it supports the case for the prosecution, for obviously the defence is entitled to rely on so much of his evidence as supports their case; otherwise a party who found that his witness had given evidence which supported his adversary's case could get rid of the evidence by declaring him hostile.[75] The defence is entitled to rely on so much of the evidence of the hostile witness as is depended upon by the prosecution.[76]

If a witness, on the ground that he is suspected to have turned hostile, is permitted by the Court to be cross-examined by the party who called him, the whole of the evidence of that witness does not become worthless. It is open to the Court to consider the evidence, and there is no objection to a part of that evidence being made use of in support of the prosecution or in support of the accused.[77] Where a number of witnesses who had induced belief in the prosecution by their statements in the course of investigation that they could be used as eye-witnesses staged a complete volte-face in examination-in-chief or cross-examination and acted as an echo of the defence lawyer., it was quite permissible for the trial Court to find out what portion of evidence was true and believable.[78] In a rape case when some witnesses turned hostile it would not be sufficient to discard evidence of other witnesses and the evidence of hostile witness has to be considered independently on its own merit and if any of their statements were corroborated by the evidence of other witnesses.[79] Where, a hostile witness was contradicted with reference to his earlier statement before the committing magistrate, the Supreme Court held the court was right in using the earlier statement of the hostile witness as substantive evidence.[80] The Court must carefully analyse the evidence of a hostile witness and see whether that part of the evidence which is

---

72. State of Maharashtra v. Harishchandra Tukaram Awatade, 1997 Cr LJ 612 (Bom). Evidence of hostile witness not to be totally rejected, trustworthy and corroborated part can be relied upon, Pandappa Hanumappa Hanamar v. State of Karnataka, 1997 Cr LJ 2493 (SC). Also see Rajendra Singh v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 2668 (All); Meena Gopalkrishna Mudaliyar v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3634 (para 6) (Bom); Om Prakash v. State of Haryana, 1994 Cr LJ 3351 (para 16) (P&H); conviction can be based on his corroborated testimony, Anil Rai v. State of Bihar, 2001 Cr LJ 3969 (para 37) (SC).

73. Rema Naik v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 31; relying on Sohrai Sao v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Pat 247; Profulla Kumar Sarkar v. Emperor, AIR 1931 Cal 401 (FB); State v. Sashi Bhusan Hari Chandan, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 550 (Ori); Nebti Mandal v. Emperor, AIR 1940 Pat 289; Purusotam Naik v. Chakradhar Das, AIR 1959 Ori 19; Emperor v. Haradhan, AIR 1933 Pat 517; Sarjug Prasad v. State, AIR 1959 Pat 66; State v. Naginder Singh, AIR 1953 Pepsu 97; Shridhar Mahadeo v. Emperor, AIR 1935 Bom 36; Gangadharam Pillai v. State, ILR 1951 Tra/Co 447; Emperor v. Jehangir, AIR 1927 Bom 501; Ammathayammal v. Official Assignee, AIR 1933 Mad 137; Upendar Mahakud v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1767 (Ori); Debi Prasad Padhi v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 2214 (Ori)(DB); Gobinda Chandra v. Haru Chandra, 1968 Cr LJ 1352 (Cal); Chakradhar Mohanty v. Nityananda Patra, ILR 1976 Cut 540; Chamara Pradhani v. State of Orissa, 1983 Cr LJ 1706 (Ori)(DB).

74. Gurbax Singh v. State of H.P., 1977 Cr LJ 1676; State of Orissa v. Dileshwar Bhai, ILR 1977 Cut 160; Golak Baliarsingh v. Purna Chandra Baliarsingh, ILR 1976 Cut 823.

75. Emperor v. Mokbul Khan, ILR (1928) 56 Cal 145; Sohrai Sao v. King Emperor, ILR (1929) 9 Pat 474, Jagir Singh v. State, AIR 1975 SC 1400. Prosecution case cannot be judged on the basis of testimony of hostile witnesses; Keshoram Bora v. State of Assam, AIR 1978 SC 1096 : (1978) 2 SCR 788; Khijruddin v. Emperor, AIR 1926 Cal 136; Babu Nath Gond v. State, 1975 Mah LJ 779; Chandrika Prasad v. State, 1975 Rajadhani LR 551; State v. Ramesh Chandra, ILR (1974) 1 Del 129; Bal Kari v. State of Rajasthan, 1976 Crl LJ 828 : 1975 Raj LW 435; Dharan v. State, 1975 WLN 371 (Raj).

76. In re Madhukar Dasarath Mendekar, 1972 Cr LJ 978 (Mys); relied on In re Saibanna Tipanna, AIR 1966 Mys 248; Profulla Kumar Sarkar v. Emperor, AIR 1931 Cal 401; Purustam Naik v. Chakradhar Das, AIR 1959 Ori 19; State of Mysore v. Ramaji Ramappa Malagi, (1972) 2 Mys. LJ 6.

77. Gangadharan Pillai v. State, ILR (1951) TC 447.

78. Balshiram Rambhau awate v. State of Maharashtra, 1978 Cr LJ 821.

79. State of Karnataka v. Mehaboob, 1987 Cr LJ 940 (Kant)(DB).

80. Periyasami v. State of Madras, AIR 1967 SC 1027.

consistent with the prosecution case is acceptable or not. His evidence cannot be rejected entirely merely because he has turned hostile.[81]

It is not right to proceed on the basis that whatever is stated by a hostile witness which is not in favour of the party calling him should necessarily be believed as if it were an admission made and binding upon the party calling him.[82]

Where the witness completely turned hostile his evidence cannot at all be relied upon for any purpose.[83] Where the hostile witness did not speak anything about the occurrence and there was no other direct evidence, the evidence of the hostile witness was of no use.[84]

It would be wrong to rely on the evidence of a hostile witness as corroborative piece of the plea of defence of the accused[85] but the evidence of a hostile witness cannot be rejected only on that count and can be used for the purpose of corroboration to the extent it corroborates the prosecution version.[86]

7. STATEMENTS UNDER SECTIONS 162 AND 164, Cr.P.C.

Under the Amended Section 162 Cr. P.C. (same under new code), proviso which came into effect on 1-1-1956, when the witness resiled from the statement made during investigation under Section 162 Cr P.C., with the permission of the court it can be used for cross-examining the witness.[87] Where the witnesses resiled from their earlier statements to police as to the motive for commission of murder of the wife by the husband, they were treated as hostile wholesale and their testimony was of no use.[88]

The court would not give leave until it is satisfied that there is hostility or adverseness displayed by the witness to the very party on whose behalf he has come to give evidence. The witness cannot be cross-examined with the help of the statements made by him to the police unless he is declared hostile.[89]

The Public Prosecutor while cross-examining the hostile witness should not ask as to whether he had stated before the police as per the whole of the statement, as marking of the whole statement as an exhibit is not contemplated under Section 145. He should point out such statements which are contradictory to the present statements in the witness-box.[90] Though an investigation by the Dy. S.P. under the prevention of corruption Act is illegal the statement recorded are not illegal and can be regarded as statement under Section 161, 162, Cr.P.C. In a subsequent legal investigation by the Superintendent of Police, it was held that the previous statements can be used for cross-examination, if the witness resiled from the statements.[91]

Statements recorded under Section 164 Cr. P.C., though not substantive piece of evidence, can be used to corroborate or contradict its maker.[92]

Impeaching credit of witness.

S. 155. The credit of a witness may be impeached in the following ways by the adverse party, or, with the consent of the Court, by the party who calls him:—

---

81. State of Gujarat v. Anirudhsing, AIR 1997 SC 2780 : 1997 Cr LJ 3397, following Khujji v. State of M.P., (1991) 3 SCC 627 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 916; State of U.P. v. Ramesh Prasad Misra, (1996) 10 SCC 360 : 1996 SCC (Cri) 1278. Evidence of hostile witness is to be scrutinised carefully, State of Rajasthan v. Bhera, 1997 Cr LJ 1237 (Raj); Mohomed Bachhu Miah v. State of Tripura, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 197 (Gau); not to be excluded entirely or rendered unworthy of consideration, Gura Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 487 (para 11) : AIR 2001 SC 330.

82. State of Mysore v. Raju Shetty, AIR 1961 Mys 74; Nand Kishore v. Brij Bihari, AIR 1955 Raj 65.

83. Sait v. State, 1989 Cr LJ 2050 (Mad).

84. Kathi Odhabhai Bhimabhai v. State of Gujarat, 1993 Cr LJ 187 (para 5) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 1193.

85. Administrator Municipal Board, Gangapur v. Omprakash, 1982 Cr LJ 1398 (Raj).

86. Chhotu Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 819 (para 7) (Raj). See also Yogendra Kumar v. State of U.P., 1999 Cr LJ 4685 (paras 9 and 10) (All); Koli Lakhmanbhai Chanabhai v. State of Gujarat, 2000 Cr LJ 408 (para 5) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 210.

87. State v. Balchand, AIR 1960 Raj 101; State v. Mohan Hira, AIR 1960 Guj 9; (witness need not declared hostile).

88. Subbiramani v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 3382 (paras 11 and 12) (Mad).

89. In re Kalu Singh Moti Singh, AIR 1964 MP 30; Babulal v. State, 1977 Cr LJ 2008 (All).

90. Annasab Melappa v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 1553 (Kant).

91. Bhanu Prasad v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1968 SC 1323.

92. Harbans Lal v. State, AIR 1967 HP 10.

(1) by the evidence of persons who testify that they, from their knowledge of the witness, believe him to be unworthy of credit;

(2) by proof that the witness has been bribed, or has accepted the offer of a bribe, or has received any other corrupt inducement to give his evidence;

(3) by proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted;

[(4) * * * *].

Explanation.*—A witness declaring another witness to be unworthy of credit may not, upon his examination-in-chief, give reasons for his belief, but he may be asked his reasons in cross-examination, and the answers which he gives cannot be contradicted, though, if they are false, he may afterwards be charged with giving false evidence.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) A sues B for the price of goods sold and delivered to B.

C says that A delivered the goods to B.

Evidence is offered to show that, on a previous occasion, he said that he had not delivered the goods to B.

The evidence is admissible.

(b) A is indicted for the murder of B.

C says that B, when dying, declared that A had given B the wound of which he died.

Evidence is offered to show that, on a previous occasion, C said that the wound was not given by A or in his presence.

The evidence is admissible.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1309
2. Witness believed to be unworthy of credit [Clause (1)] ... 1310
3. Witness accepted bribe etc. [Clause (2)] ... 1311
4. Witness's inconsistent statements [Clause (3)] ... 1312
5. Liable to be contradicted ... 1312
6. Sections 155 and 145 ... 1313
7. Tape-Record ... 1314
8. F.I.R. ... 1314
9. Section 162, Cr. P.C. ... 1315
10. Section 164, Cr. P.C. ... 1315
11. Immoral character of victim of rape [Clause (4)] ... 1316
12. Reasons for believing a witness unworthy of credit [Explanation] ... 1316

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section enables the parties to give independent testimony as to the character of a witness in order to indicate that he is unworthy of belief by the Court. Its provisions apply to both criminal and civil cases.

The section indicates four ways in which the credit of a witness may be impeached (a) by the adverse party, or (b) with the consent of the Court by the party who calls him. They are:—

(1) evidence of persons that the witness is unworthy of credit;

(2) proof that the witness (i) has been bribed; (ii) has accepted the offer of a bribe; or (iii) has received any other corrupt inducement.

(3) former statements inconsistent with the present evidence; and

---

* Cl. (4) omitted by the Indian Evidence (Amendment) Act, 2002, s. 3, w.e.f. 13-12-2002, prior to its omission it stood as under :

"(4) when a man is prosecuted for rape or an attempt to ravish, it may be shown that the prosecutrix was of generally immoral character."

(4) general immoral character of the prosecutrix in cases of rape or attempt to ravish.

The Sub-clause (1) has an explanation, which is a re-echo of S. 153. Witnesses deposing to character can be asked in cross-examination to give reasons for their opinion. They are not liable to be contradicted in those reasons; but, if they are false, they can be charged with giving false evidence.

The first three grounds are general. They indicate that the credit of a witness may be impeached, first of all, by the best of evidence, that is, his own former statements to the contrary; secondly, he can be shown to be unworthy of credit by the oral testimony of other persons; and, lastly, his credit can be completely overthrown by proving that he had accepted (a) a bribe, or (b) an offer of a bribe, or (c) any other corrupt inducement. The fourth ground is a special one. If the woman complaining of rape or attempt to ravish is proved to be a woman generally of immoral character, her story in the complaint will necessitate strong proof.

This section should be strictly construed and narrowly interpreted, otherwise Courts would have to investigate, on most imperfect materials, questions which have no bearing upon the matter really in contest.[1] The provisions of Section 155 have to be strictly construed.[2]

This section is in addition to other provisions contained in Sections 138, 140, 145, 148 & 154 for impeaching the credit of a witness by cross-examination.

Section 52 of the Act deals with relevancy of character evidence whereas this section prescribes the manner of impeaching the credit of a witness. Therefore, Section 155 cannot be construed as an exception to Section 52. Further Sections 155 and 146 are not in conflict with each other, as Section 146 deals with methods of impeaching the credit of a witness in a different way. Sections 138, 140, 145, 148 and 154 provide for impeaching a credit of a witness by cross-examination.[3]

This section mainly deals with the modes of evidence for impeaching the credit of a witness other than by cross-examination in the witness-box and must be exercised immediately after examination-in-chief.[4] When a statement was recorded by the order of a court having no jurisdiction, still such a statement can be made use of for purposes of Sections 145, 155 & 157 of the Evidence Act, as it was recorded by an official under the orders of the Court. The statement of a person does not cease to be his statement merely because it was written in the afore-mentioned circumstances. Even if the court has not passed an order for recording the statement, and the statement has been recorded such a statement would be made use of for purposes of Sections 145, 155 and 157.[5]

An inquest report is not a substantive piece of evidence; it could only be considered as a previous statement of the investigating officer and his credit could be impeached with respect to that statement.[6]

2. WITNESS BELIEVED TO BE UNWORTHY OF CREDIT [CLAUSE (1)]

Clause (1) says that the credit of a witness may be impeached by the evidence of persons who from their knowledge of the witness believe the witness to be untrustworthy of credit. Sections 146 to 153 deal with how a witness's veracity can be tested by cross-examination. Section 155 does not allow evidence of bad character of a witness to be spoken to.[7]

In order to impeach the character of a witness for veracity, witnesses may be called to prove that his general reputation is such that they would not believe him upon his oath. Such evidence can be given, and the practice is ancient and undoubted.[8]

Where the general reputation of a witness has been thus impeached, the party calling him may re-establish his credit by cross-examining the witnesses who have spoken against him as to their means of knowledge and the grounds of their opinion, or as to their hostile feelings towards the person whose testimony they have discredited, or as to their own character and conduct, or by calling other witnesses.

---

1. Bhogilal v. Royal Insurance Co. Ltd., (1927) 30 Bom LR 818 : ILR 6 Ran 142 PC : AIR 1928 PC 54.
2. Rama Reddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 1162.
3. G. Hussenaiah v. B. Yerraiah, AIR 1954 Andhra 39.
4. Kiranchandra Pal v. Bhondu, 1970 MPLJ 263.
5. State of Punjab v. Vishwajit Singh, AIR 1987 P&H 126.
6. Ramanand v. State, ILR 1974 HP 509.
7. Maung San Myin v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Rang 49.
8. R v. Brown and Hedley, (1867) LR 1 CC 70.

either to support the character of the first witness or to attack in their turn the general reputation of the impeaching witnesses. How far this plan of recrimination may be carried is not yet formally determined, though the practice is said by some lawyers to be in conformity with the general rule of the civil law, in testem tets, et in hos, sed non datur ultra, that is, a discrediting witness may himself be discredited by other witnesses, but no further witnesses can be called to attack the characters of these last.[9]

The evidence that is to be adduced to discredit the witness should be confined to general reputation for truthfulness or general moral character and should not be given of particular acts of falsehood or immorality or any wrong doing. Explanation under Section 55 of this Act states that in Sections 52, 53, 54 & 55, the word 'character' includes both reputation and disposition; but except as provided in Section 54 evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition were shown.[10]

"The impeaching witness cannot in direct examination give particular instances of other falsehood or dishonesty, since no man is supposed to come prepared to defend all the acts of his wife. But, in cross-examination he may be asked as to his means of knowledge of the other witness, his feelings of hostility towards him, or whether inspite of bad character in other respects, the impeached witness has not preserved his reputation for truth; and the answers to these questions cannot be contradicted. It has been said that the impeaching witness should come from the locality of the other, and not be a stranger sent expressly to learn the latter's reputation.

The impeaching witness cannot, of course, be asked his opinion whether the witness is in fact speaking the truth about the issue before the Court."[11]

Opinion evidence is, as a general rule not admissible, and Section 155(1) is an exception to that rule. To draw an inference against the credibility of a witness without anybody going into the witness-box in the manner contemplated by Section 155(1) would not be legitimate.[12]

The testimony of a trap-witness and persons of shady character should not be rejected as tainted evidence without scrutiny. A conviction can be based on such testimony.[13]

3. WITNESS ACCEPTED BRIBE ETC. [CLAUSE (2)]

It says that the credit of a witness may be impeached by proof that the witness has been bribed or has accepted the offer of a bribe, or has received any other corrupt inducement to give his evidence.

The credit of a witness may be impeached on the ground that his evidence was obtained by corrupt inducement, and it was open to the defendant to contend that the application of a third degree method by the persistent questioning in the investigation constituted a form of unfair evil, the avoidance of which was a corrupt inducement to witness to say what was required of him. It would be open to the defendant also to attempt to establish this by evidence, and it was clear that an important witness for this purpose would be the counsel. There was also the possibility of certain contingencies in which the counsel's association with the enquiry may be unseemly.[14]

Section 153 exception (2) says that if a witness is asked any question tending to impeach impartiality and answers it by denying the fact suggested, he may be contradicted. So when a witness denies a suggestion that he accepted the offer of a bribe, then such statement can be contradicted. The Privy Council held that when the offer of a bribe was not shown to have been accepted, it would be no ground for impeaching the impartiality of a witness, but the fact that the witness accepted the bribe or the promise of a bribe would be a ground to impeach the credit of that witness and the second clause embodies that view.[15]

---

9. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 1473, p. 939; ADRIAN KEANE IN MODERN LAW OF EVIDENCE (2nd Edn.) Considers this an anomalous albict long established rule and opines that it is difficult to find a convincing justification for this rule.
10. See R v. Gunewardene, (1951) 2 KB 600 : (1951) 2 All ER 290.
11. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), P. 265 (para 11-41).
12. Dinkar Bandhu Deshmukh v. State, AIR 1970 Bom 438.
13. Ramsarup v. State, AIR 1967 Del 26.
14. Hussain Khan of Mamdot v. Iftikhar Hussain Khan of Mamdot, ILR (1949) 2 Lah 844.
15. Bhoolal v. Royal Insurance Co. Ltd., AIR 1928 PC 54.

Sections 146, 148 & 155 would show that the credit of the witness can be said to have shaken if it can be shown that he is not a man of veracity, and not that he is of bad moral character. A black-marketeer is not necessarily untruthful, nor a non-black-marketeer necessarily a man of veracity.[16]

A witness may be discredited as pointed out in exceptions 1 & 2 of Section 153, in regard to the proof of previous conviction when denied by the witness, or by evidence when the witness denied impartiality.

For impeaching the credit of a witness, indecent and scandalous questions can be allowed in cross-examination provided there is necessity and foundation for the same.[17]

4. WITNESS'S INCONSISTENT STATEMENTS [CLAUSE (3)]

This clause states that the witness may be impeached by proof of former statement inconsistent with any part of his evidence which is liable to be contradicted[18]; but the mode of using such former statement for the purposes of contradicting the witness is prescribed in Section 145 of the Evidence Act.[19] If a witness disowns having made any statement which is inconsistent with his present stand, his testimony in the Court on that score would not be vitiated until the cross-examiner calls his attention to those parts of his statement which are to be used for contradicting him.[20] A former statement though seemingly inconsistent with the evidence need not necessarily be sufficient to amount to contradiction. Only such of the inconsistent statements which is liable to be "contradicted" would affect the credit of the witness. Mere variations falling in narration of the incident by the witnesses, is not sufficient to discredit their testimony.[21]

TAYLOR (8th Ed., Section 1324) states: "It may be important to distinguish between contradicting a witness and impeaching the credit of a witness—expressions which are sometimes used as synonymous but between which a distinction appears to be made by the Evidence Act. The first of the modes in which the credit of a witness may be impeached is, that witnesses may be called to disprove such of the facts stated by him, whether in his direct or cross-examination as are material to the issue. The omission of this mode in the above section of the Evidence Act appears to have suggested doubts as to whether Indian Legislature did or did not intend to allow the testimony of a witness to be contradicted by other evidence disproving the facts stated by him. It has been shown that where these facts are relevant the Evidence Act assumes that evidence may be given to contradict and while declaring generally that evidence may not be given to contradict the answers to questions, which are relevant to the enquiry only insofar as they tend to shake the credit of a witness by injuring his character, the Act makes two exceptions; to this rule (exceptions 1 & 2 of Section 153)."[22]

This clause deals with previous inconsistent statements of a witness whose evidence is sought to be discredited under this clause. The previous statements may be of several types, like, statements given to the Police Officer coming under Section 162, Cr. P.C., statements recorded under Section 164, Cr. P.C., statements made during conversation which were recorded on tape. Section 145 of this Act deals with contradicting a witness by earlier statements in writing.

5. LIABLE TO BE CONTRADICTED

The words "which is liable to be contradicted" mean "which is relevant to the issue".[23]

The Supreme Court held that the above statement in ILR 17 Cal 344 was too broadly laid down and the expression "which is liable to be contradicted" does not mean merely "which is relevant to the issue."[24]

---

16. Chari v. State, AIR 1959 All 149.
17. Prakash Raja Ram v. State of Maharashtra, 1975 Cr LJ 1297 (Bom).
18. Narayanan v. Krishnan, 1981 Crl LJ 563 (Ker). See also Binay Kumar Singh v. State of Bihar, 1997 Cr LJ 362 : AIR 1997 SC 322.
19. State of Rajasthan v. Teja Ram, 1999 Cr LJ 2588 (para 32) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 1776.
20. Binay Kumar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 322 : 1997 Cr LJ 362, Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 214 : (1952) 1 MLJ 816 (SC).
21. Rammi v. State of M.P., 1999 Cr LJ 4561 (paras 23-28) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3544.
22. R. v. Sakaram Mukundji, (1874) 11 Bom HCR 169.
23. Khadijah Khanum v. Adool Kazim Shirazi, ILR (1899) 17 Cal 344 @ p. 347.
24. N. Sri Ramreddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 1162.

6. SECTIONS 155 AND 145

The Supreme Court held that a perusal of Sections 145, 155 and 157 clearly indicates that there are two purposes for which a previous statement can be used (1) for cross-examination and contradiction and (2) for corroboration. When the defence wants to use the previous statement of a witness it could be only to contradict a witness and not to corroborate.[25]

A statement made by a witness before a commission appointed under the Commission of Enquiry Act of 1952 cannot be permitted to be used to contradict the maker or impeach his credit.[26]

Section 155 does not lay down the mode of proof of a former statement, that is provided in Section 145 when the prior statement is sought to be tendered in evidence for impeaching the credit of the witness.[27]

Under this section though it is stated that a witness can be impeached by proof of former statements inconsistent with any part of his evidence, it does not lay down how the former statement is to be proved. While Section 145 refers to former statements in writing or reduced into writing, this section would also apply to oral statements.

Where a party wants to rely on a previous statement of a person who is giving evidence, in order to contradict him, it is the duty of the cross-examiner to put the document to him so as to give him an opportunity to explain it. Thus Section 155 is controlled by Section 145 and it is not independent of it.[28] However, it was held that as Section 145 makes no mention of oral statements it cannot control Section 155. When former oral statements were put to the witness showing some inconsistency, the court may refuse to place any reliance on such inconsistency, when those persons to whom such oral statements were made were not examined and such questions were not put to those witness for explanation.[29] It is a legitimate right of the accused to prove that the previous statements made by the witness were different and they should be made available to him for his defence for impeaching the credit of the witness as he has to draw the attention of the witness to his previous statements.[30] If the evidence is intended to suggest that the witness was not speaking the truth upon a particular point his attention must first be directed to the fact by cross-examination so that he may have an opportunity of giving an explanation.[31] In the absence of any inherent incredibility (vice) no presumption adverse to a witness should be drawn on any matter unless it is put to him and he is given an opportunity to explain it.[32]

The previous deposition in an earlier proceeding can be used to contradict or corroborate his present statement in the court under Section 155 and Section 157 of the Evidence Act.[33] Even a former statement made by an informant to a person not legally competent to investigate, can be used for contradiction under Section 145 and for impeaching his credit under Section 155.[34]

The fact that a particular witness was not believed in another case would not impeach the credit of a witness as such earlier judgement cannot be given in evidence for the purpose of discrediting the witness in the present proceedings.[35]

In a de novo trial before a successor Magistrate on the request of the accused, the statements of witnesses recorded by the predecessor were brought on record. On the admission of those witnesses in

---

25. Kehar Singh v. State, AIR 1988 SC 1883.
26. See also Mohammad Sarwar v. Emperor, AIR 1942 Lah 215.
27. Dama alias Damodar Jena v. State, ILR 1969 Cut 265.
28. Bal Gangadhar Tilak v. Srinivas Pandit, AIR 1915 PC 7; Jagrani Kunwar v. Durga Prasad, ILR 36 All 93 (PC); Rani Amrit Kunwar v. Gur Charan Singh, AIR 1934 All 226; State v. Minaketan Patnaik, AIR 1952 Ori 267; Gopichand v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Lah 491; Arnup v. Kedar, AIR 30 Cal WN 835; Dama alias Damodar Jena v. State, ILR 1969 Cut 265.
29. Muktawandas Ajab Das v. R, AIR 1939 Nag 13; Ramratan v. State, AIR 1956 Raj 196.
30. Manilal Sahu v. State, AIR 1969 Ori 176; Doman Mahton v. Suraj Deo Prasad, AIR 1970 Pat 95.
31. Chunilal v. Hart Ford Fire Insurance Co., AIR 1958 Punj 440.
32. Sachindranath Chatterjee v. Nilima, AIR 1970 Cal 38.
33. Ponnuswami v. Kalyana Sundara, AIR 1930 Mad 770.
34. State v. Pareswar Ghasi, AIR 1968 Ori 20; State of Punjab v. Vishwajit Singh, AIR 1987 P&H 126; Ramkishun Sao v. R., AIR 1946 Pat 82.
35. Chandreshwar Prasad v. Bisheshwar, AIR 1927 Pat 61; In the matter of Juggappa, 4 Cal WN 684.

cross-examination that they had made those statements, it was held that the evidence previously givey b those witnesses was not brought on record in strict conformity with the provisions of the Evidence Act The provisions of Sections 145 and 155 not having been complied with, it was not open to the Magistrat to act upon those statements and to get them on the record as evidence in a criminal case.[36]

It was held that a recital as to the boundary in documents between third parties is not ordinarily admissible to prove possession or title as against a person who is not a party to the document, but thi rule is subject to exception which can be classified under four heads, namely, if these documents com within the relevancy and admissibility contemplated under (a) Sections 155 and 157; (b) Section 32(3) (c) under Section 13; and (d) under Section 11 of the Evidence Act. If the recital of the document i deposed to by the executant of the document it becomes admissible under Section 157 to corroborate th evidence of the executant or under Section 155 to contradict such evidence.[37]

It was held by the Privy Council that a letter written by a witness is no evidence of the fact contained therein, but it can be put to use in cross-examination for discrediting him showing that what h had written was inconsistent with his evidence.[38] The handwritting of a witness cannot be used fo impeaching the credit of the witness, as the handwriting is not a "former statement" of the witness.[39] Th Supreme Court held that a statement said to have been made by a witness who refused to affix his thum impression could not be used for contradicting that witness.[40]

When a witness denied having made a statement, his previous statement admitting that fact, in previous deposition can be taken in evidence though its value is weak and it is unsafe to act upon without corroboration.[41]

7. TAPE-RECORD

The Supreme Court in Pratap Singh v. State of Punjab[42] reversing the decision in Pratap Sing (Dr.) v. State of Punjab[43] held that the tape-recorded statements can be admitted to discredit the witnes in the witness box with his former inconsistent statement recorded on the tape; it is to be noted that AI 1963 Punj 298 overruled a prior decision in Rupchand v. Mahabir Prasad[44] must be held to be good la wherein it was stated following the decision Andrews v. United States[45] a case of electro-telephoni communication, that a defendant who is endeavouring to shake the credit of a witness by proof of former inconsistent statement, can depose that while he was engaged in coversation with the witness, tape-record was in operation or can produce the said tape-recorder in support of the assertion that certain statement was made in his presence.

The Supreme Court held that a tape-recorded statement is admissible under Section 155(3), thoug the weight to be given to such evidence is however distinct and separate from the question o admissibility.[46] It was held by the Supreme Court, that the conversation between the accused and th complainant which was recorded even by a Police Officer without their knowledge can be relied upon a such conversation would not attract the applicability of Section 162 Cr. P.C.[47]

8. F.I.R.

The F.I.R. can be made use of by the defence to impeach the informant's credit who had given th information to the police for recording the F.I.R. It can be tendered under any provision of Chapter II o the Evidence Act, such as Section 32(1) or Section 8 and it can be used only for purpose o corroborating, contradicting or discrediting the maker under the provisions of Sections 145, 155 & 15

---

36. Saligram v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 All 138.
37. Rangayyan v. Innasimuthu Mudali, AIR 1956 Mad 226.
38. Judah v. Isolyne Sarojbashini Bose, AIR 1945 PC 174.
39. Kiranchandra Pal v. Bhondu, 1970 MPLJ 263.
40. State of Haryana v. Harpal Singh, AIR 1978 SC 1530.
41. Homeshwar Singh v. Kameshwar, AIR 1935 PC 146.
42. AIR 1962 SC 72.
43. AIR 1963 Punj 298.
44. AIR 1956 Punj 173.
45. 105 Am LR 322.
46. Rama Reddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 1162.
47. Yusufalli v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 147.

provided he is examined in court and it cannot be used for any purpose with reference to other witnesses.[48]

Where the first informant did not mention the name of one of the accused in the F.I.R. though the said accused was known to him, evidence of the first informant would not come in aid of prosecution to prove the complicity of such accused in crime.[49]

9. SECTION 162, Cr. P.C.

Any statement made to a police officer during investigation when it is reduced to writing cannot be used as evidence, but it may be used for the purpose of refreshing the memory under Section 159 of the Evidence Act. The person making the statement can be questioned with a view to impeach his credit, but the Police Officer who recorded it or any other person in whose hearing the statement was made has to be examined under Section 155 on that part of the statement which was used as contradiction.[50]

Section 162(1), Cr. P.C. permits the prosecution to impeach the credit of his own witness by proof of his former statements made to the investigating officer. The defence also can use it in view of the proviso to Section 162 (1), Cr. P.C.[51]

It was held by the Supreme Court that Section 162, Cr. P.C., prohibits the use of statements of witness made before the police during investigation; but for a limited purpose of contradiction of a prosecution witness it can be used; it cannot be used for corroboration of a prosecution witness or for contradiction of a defence witness.[52]

The statement made by an identifier before a Magistrate contained in a identification memo is a former statement of the identifier and can be used for contradicting him under Section 145 or 155 and for corroborating him under Section 157, unless it is made in the presence of the police in which case it would be hit by Section 162, Cr. P.C. and would therefore be not admissible, for contradiction.[53]

Where the material statement of the eye-witness that he had seen the accused setting fire to the shed was omitted by him in the police statement, it amounted to contradiction.[54]

10. SECTION 164, Cr. P.C.

A previous statement of a witness recorded u/Section 164, Cr. P.C. can be used for impeaching the credit of a witness though it may not be used as substantive evidence.[55]

Where a person made a dying declaration but later survived, it was held that the statement though not admissible as a dying declaration under Section 32 of the Evidence Act such statement can be used for contradiction under Section 145 and for impeaching the credit of the witness under Section 155.[56]

---

48. Shankar v. State of U.P., AIR 1975 SC 757; Azimuddy v. R., ILR 54 Cal 237; Man Mohan Ghosh v. Emperor, ILR (1931) 58 Cal 1312; Ramnaresh v. R., AIR 1939 All 242; Nisar Ali v. State, AIR 1957 SC 366; Aghnoo v. State, AIR 1966 SC 119; Nankhu Singh v. State, AIR 1973 SC 491; Hasib v. State of Bihar, AIR 1972 SC 283; Khan v. State, AIR 1962 Cal 641; Bhagirathi v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 99; Tikaram v. State, AIR 1957 All 755; Emperor v. Aftab Mohammad, AIR 1940 All 291.

49. Raju v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1998 SC 275 : 1998 Cr LJ 493.

50. R. v. Uttamchand, (1874) 11 Bom HCR 120; R v. Tajkhan, ILR 17 All 57.

51. R. v. Najibuddin, AIR 1933 Pat 589.

52. Sat Paul v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1976 SC 294. See also Madari Sikdar v. R., ILR 54 Cal 307; In re Packirswami, AIR 1942 Mad 288; In re Saibanna Tipanna, AIR 1966 Mys 248; R. v. Vithu, AIR 1924 Bom 510; Tahsildhar Singh v. State, AIR 1959 SC 1012; Laxman Kalu v. State, AIR 1968 SC 1390; Prakash Chand v. State, AIR 1979 SC 406; Kehar Singh v. State (Delhi Administration), AIR 1988 SC 1883.

53. Asharfi v. State, AIR 1961 All 153; In re Saibanna Tipanna, AIR 1966 Mys. 248.

54. Guz Pedro Pacheco v. State, 1998 Cr LJ 4628 (paras 12, 14 and 15) (Bom).

55. Bishen v. R., ILR 50 All 242; R. v. Cherath, (1902) ILR 26 Mad 191; Niamat Khar v. R., AIR 1930 Lah 409; Bishen v. R., AIR 1927 All 705 : ILR 50 All 242; R. v. Sekander Ali Shah, AIR 1941 Cal 406; Mamand v. R., AIR 1946 PC 45; Brijbushan Singh v. R., AIR 1946 PC 38; Bhuboni Sahu v. R., AIR 1949 PC 257; Bisipati Padhan v. State, AIR 1969 Ori 289; Manik Gazi v. R., AIR 1942 Cal 36; Abdul Hakim v. State, 1957 Cr LJ 117 (All).

56. Kina Behara v. State, ILR 1968 Cut 660.

11. IMMORAL CHARACTER OF VICTIM OF RAPE [CLAUSE (4)]

When a man is prosecuted for rape or any attempt to ravish evidence can be given to impeach the credit of the prosecutrix about her general immoral character. But is is not permissible to prove specific immoral acts either with the accused person or with others and she may decline to answer such questions but if she answers them in the negative, further evidence can be adduced to contradict her.[57] It was held that as the expression "generally immoral character" used in Cl. (4) pre-supposes that evidence showing general reputation of the woman as that of a prostitute, or that she had general reputation of going about and committing immoral acts with a number of men is admissible.[58]

In HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND (4th Ed., Vol. 11, Para 374, page 274) it is stated: "On charges of rape, attempted rape, assault with intent to rape and indecent assault, the character of the complainant is relevant to the issue of consent, and she may therefore be cross-examined (I) to show that she is of general bad character, for example that she is a common prostitute, or is of loose morals, or is in the habit of having intercourse on first acquaintance whether for money or not, or (2) that she has had intercourse with the defendant, on previous occasions, and witness may be called to give evidence in support of such imputations[59]. She may also be cross-examined as to acts of intercourse with other men, but since this goes to credibility rather than to the issue, the defendant is bound by her answers, and if such acts are denied, evidence may not be called to prove them.[60]

In a case of rape the general immoral character of the complainant is relevant. The non-consent of the complainant is a material element; and the character of the woman as to chastity is of considerable probative value in judging of the likelihood of that consent.[61]

12. REASONS FOR BELIEVING A WITNESS UNWORTHY OF CREDIT [EXPLANATION]

In the examination-in-chief a witness cannot be asked the reasons for his belief that another witness is unworthy of credit. Such questions can only be asked in cross-examination. But it is very dangerous in cross-examination to ask a witness his reasons for believing a witness to be untrustworthy. He is, by such a question, enabled to state any unfavourable fact without fear of contradiction.[62]

Questions tending to corroborate evidence of relevant fact, admissible.

S. 156. When a witness whom it is intended to corroborate gives evidence of any relevant fact, he may be questioned as to any other circumstances which he observed at or near to the time or place at which such relevant fact occurred, if the Court is of opinion that such circumstances, if proved, would corroborate the testimony of the witness as to the relevant fact which he testifies.

---

57. See TAILOR ON EVIDENCE, 8th Ed., Section 363.

58. Wahid Ali v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Cal 523; Keramat v. R., AIR 1926 Cal 320.

59. R. v. Clarke, (1817) 2 Stark 241; R. v. Barker, (1829) 3 C&P 589; R. v. Martin, (1834) 6 C&P 562; R. v. Tissington (1843) 1 Cox CC 48; R. v. Clay, (1851) 5 Cox CC 146; R. v. Cockcroft, (1870) 11 Cox CC 410; R v. Holmes, (1871) LR 1 CCR 344; R. v. Riley, (1887) 18 QBD 481, CCR; R. v. Gretbanks, (1959) Crim LR 450; A witness for the defence is entitled to give reasons for his opinion; R. v. Bashir and Manzur, (1969) 3 All ER 692 : (1969) 1 WLR 1303; R. v. Krausz, (1973) 57 Cr App Rep 466, CA. See also R. v. Thompson, (1951) SASR 135 (S. Aust. FC).

60. R. v. Hodgson, (1812) Russ & Ry 211, CCR; R. v. Cockcroft, (1870) 11 Cox CC 410; R. v. Holmes, (1871); LR 1 CCR 334; R. v. Riley, (1887) 18 QBD 481, CCR; R. v. Cargill, (1913) 2 KB 271, CCA. See also R. v. Bashir and Manzur, (1969) 3 All ER 692 : (1969) 1 WLR 1303. As to questioning the complainant about specific acts, see R. v. Hodgson, supra; R. v. Mercer, (1842) 6 Jur 243.

61. Cunnigham, 360.

62. Cunnigham, 360.

ILLUSTRATION

A, an accomplice, gives an account of a robbery in which he took part. He describes various incidents unconnected with the robbery which occurred on his way to and from the place where it was committed.

Independent evidence of these facts may be given in order to corroborate his evidence as to the robbery itself.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that questions tending to corroborate any relevant fact can be put in respect of circumstances which the witness observed at or near the time or place at which such relevant fact occurred. There is a condition imposed that such questions can be put only when the court is of the opinion that the circumstances, if proved would corroborate the testimony of the witness as to the relevant fact which he testifies. The illustration given explains the intendment of the section.

The frame of the section indicates what questions are to be asked in examination-in-chief. In most cases, it paves the way for cross-examination, which, if successful, brings out contradiction; but which, if unsuccessful, must inevitably result in corroboration. Like contradiction, corroboration is meant to test the truthfulness of a witness.

The Legislature has indicated how and when a witness may be contradicted (Ss. 145, 153 and 158). We have now to see in what circumstances a witness may be corroborated. First of all, he may be asked questions tending to corroborate evidence of a relevant fact (S. 156); secondly, former statements made by him may be proved to corroborate later testimony to the same fact (S. 157); thirdly, when any statement relevant under S. 32 or S. 33 is proved, all matters may be proved either to contradict or corroborate it. (S. 158).

Under Section 11(2), of this Act facts not otherwise relevant are relevant if by themselves or in connection with other facts they make the existence or non-existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable or improbable. This section is not intended to prove relevant facts, but to corroborate the evidence of a witness.

MARKBY ON EVIDENCE (P. 109-110) observes: "This section, in effect, declares evidence of certain facts to be admissible. If this section had not been inserted, the judge would have had to determine the relevancy of these facts by reference to Section 7 and 11; and he might perhaps have been influenced by the practice in England, which has been against the admission of such evidence."[63]

When the court is not inclined to reject the evidence of a witness to be false but has some doubts, it may find it necessary to have corroboration and in order to enable it to act on that evidence, it may seek corroboration from other independent evidence or circumstance.[64] Evidence of similar facts though not admissible to prove a main fact, may be received for purpose of corroboration.[65] Corroboration, in order to be of any value, must be on material particulars and the facts relied on for corroboration must be established by reliable and independent evidence. Those facts must be such as to lend assurance to the crucial issue which is in question.[66]

In a corruption case, no conviction can be based even on the complainants' quite credible evidence, unless it is corroborated by independent material.[67]

Former statements of witness may be proved to corroborate later testimony as to same fact.

S. 157. In order to corroborate the testimony of a witness, any former statement made by such witness relating to the same fact, at or about the time when the fact took place, or before any authority legally competent to investigate the fact, may be proved.

---

63. See the commentary on Cl. (2) of Section 11.
64. Yudhishtir v. State of M.P., AIR 1971 SCC (Cr.) 684.
65. R. v. Kennaway, (1917) 1 KB 25; R. v. Chitson, (1909) 2 KB 945.
66. Sarla Devi v. Birendra Singh, AIR 1961 MP 127.
67. M.G. Thatte v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 2878 (para 8) (Bom).

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope ... 1318
2. Previous statements should have been made by the same witness ... 1319
3. Testimony of approver ... 1320
4. Statement ... 1320
5. Effect of Section 162, Criminal Procedure Code ... 1320
6. Statements in documents and depositions ... 1322
7. Previous depositions ... 1322
8. Pleadings ... 1322
9. Inquest report ... 1322
10. Post mortem certificate ... 1322
11. Kidnapping ... 132
12. Sexual offences ... 132
13. Dying declaration ... 132
14. Statement opposed to public policy ... 132
15. Legally competent to investigate ... 132
16. Statement under Section 161, Cr.P.C. ... 132
17. Statement under Section 164, Cr. P.C. ... 132
18. Former statement in committal court ... 132
19. First Information Report ... 132
20. At or about the time when the fact took place ... 132
21. Cases ... 132

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that in order to corroborate the testimony of a witness in respect of a fact h former statement which was made at or about the time when the fact took place can be given in evidenc or the former statement given before any authority legally competent to investigate the fact may also b given and proved. Section 145 and 155(3) deal with the former statement of a witness which can be use for purpose of contradicting him. Normally, a witness cannot corroborate himself.[68]

The expression "legally competent to investigate the fact" is used in the latter part of the sectio According to this section two classes of former statement may be proved in order to corroborate th testimony of the witness. The first part relates to former statements made by such witness relating to th same fact at or about the time when the fact took place. The second class of former statements must hav been made before any authority legally competent to investigate the fact.

Generally, the statements made immediately on the occurrence of an event contain truth, for no tim has elapsed for concoctions to creep in. Similarly, statements solemnly made in the presence of a legal competent authority bear the impress of truth. Statements like these are, therefore, a legitimate means c corroboration. They support the credibility of the person whose evidence is corroborated.

Corroboration should as a general rule come from an independent source but under this section former statement of a witness which is contemporaneous in point of time between the occurrence of fact and the making of the statement can be given for purpose of corroboration of his testimony. In th regard illustrations (a) to Section 6 and illustrations (f) & (k) to Section 8 have to be looked into. Sectio 6 illustration (a) says "A is accused of the murder of B by beating him. Whatever was said or done by or B or the bystanders at the beating shortly before or after it as to form part of the transaction is relevant fact". Section 8 Ills. (f) says "The question is whether A robbed B. The facts that, after B w robbed, C said in A's presence—"The police are coming to look for the man who robbed B" and th immediately afterwards A ran away are relevant. Section 8 Illus. (k) says "The question is whether A w robbed. The fact that soon after the alleged robbery he made a complaint relating to the offence, th circumstances under which, and the terms in which, the complaint was made, are relevant."

In all the above illustrations the former statements made by a witness at about the same point of tim can be used under this section to corroborate his testimony.

The Supreme Court observed: "There are only two things which are essential for Section 157 apply. The first is that a witness should have given testimony with respect to some fact. The second that he should have made a statement earlier with respect to the same fact at or about the time when t fact took place or before any authority legally competent to investigate the fact. If the witness to corroborated also says in his testimony that he had made the former statement to some one that wou

---

68. R. v. Nga Myo, AIR 1938 Rang 177 (FB); R. v. Christie, (1914) AC 545; Lim Yam Hong & Co v. Lam Choon & C AIR 1928 PC 127.

add to the weight of the evidence of the person who gives evidence in corroboration, just as—if the witness to be corroborated says to any body, that makes the statements of any witness appearing as a corroborating witness as to the former statement of little value. But in order to make the former statement admissible under 157 it is not necessary that the witness to be corroborated must also, besides making the former statements at or about the time the fact took place, says in court in his testimony that he had made the former statement.[69]

A previous statement of a witness is admissible in evidence in certain specified circumstances and for certain specified purposes. It may be admissible as part of res gestae under Section 6, 7, 8, 9 & 14 or under Section 33 or under Section 145 or under Section 157 or as an admission.[70]

Though the narration of a complainant about the incident to some of her colleagues is not res gestae and hence not admissible under Section 6 of the Evidence Act, if the same was corroborated by her colleagues, it is admissible under Section 157.[71]

2. PREVIOUS STATEMENTS SHOULD HAVE BEEN MADE BY THE SAME WITNESS

This section cannot be invoked for making use of statements made by some body else.[72] The F.I.R. cannot be utilised to contradict or corroborate any witness other than the maker under Section 145 or 157.[73]

Where A made a statement to B earlier and A was not asked when he was examined earlier about that statement, but B in his evidence stated about A's statement to him, it was held that A should have been given an opportunity to explain that statement and in the absence of such opportunity the statement of A which was said to have been made to B is inadmissible in evidence.[74]

It was held in a case of perjury under Section 193, I.P.C., a false confession is not false evidence. The accused is not a witness for the purpose of the definition of "evidence" in Section 3 of the Evidence Act. Section 157, has no application in such a case. This section applies where a witness is sought to be examined with reference to his earlier statement.[75]

When a statement of a witness in court is not believed, his former statement cannot be used in support of the evidence of other prosecution witnesses.[76] Where the evidence of the complaint was not free from blemishes, the former statement though admissible cannot be put as corroboration of an untruthful witness.[77]

Where a dispute between A & B was whether A had agreed to make a purchase from B on a certain date, a statement in support of A's allegation in a letter written by B to a third party was held inadmissible for purpose of corroboration.[78]

The force of any corroboration by means of previous consistent statements must evidently depend upon the truth of the proposition that he who is consistent deserves to be believed. If that proposition be not universally true, what becomes of the virtue of previous consistent statements? One may persistently adhere to falsehood once uttered, if there is a motive for it and should the value of such a corroboration ever come to be rated higher than it now is, nothing would be easier than for designing an unscrupulous persons to procure the conviction of any innocent men, who might be obnoxious to them by first

---

69. Ram Ratan v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1962 SC 424, overruling Misri (Mst.) v. Emperor, AIR 1934 Sind 100; Nazar Singh v. State, AIR 1951 Pepsu 66; see also Dwaraka Nath v. Lal Chand, AIR (1965) SC 1549, Lakhoo v. State of M.P., 1985 Cr LJ 569 MP.
70. Kamaeswar Prasad Singh* v. *Rex, 1951 All LJ 149.
71. Chander Kala (Smt.)* v. *Ramkishen, AIR 1985 SC 1268.
72. Ambika Charan* v. *Kumed, ILR (1928) Cal 893.
73. Nisar Ali v. State, AIR 1957 SC 366; Balagangadhar Tilak v. Shrinivas Pandit, AIR 1915 PC 7; Tara Singh v. State, AIR 1951 SC 441; State of Gujarat v. Hiralal Devji, AIR 1964 Guj 261; Bhagirathi v. State of Orissa, AIR 1965 Ori 99.
74. Awadh Behari* v. *State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 738.
75. Public Prosecutor v. K. Sanjeevamma, AIR 1959 AP 567.
76. Moti Singh v. State of U.P., AIR (1964) SC 900.
77. Gauranga Charan Mohanty v. State of Orissa, (1968) 1 SCWR 23 : 1968 SCD 175.
78. Gillie* v. *Posho Ltd., (1939) 2 All ER 196.

committing offence, and afterwards making statements, to different people and at different times an places implicating those innocent men.[79]

3. TESTIMONY OF APPROVER

"From the position occupied by an approver witness, his evidence is necessarily regarded with ver great suspicion as being tainted, and that although he may on the main facts connected with th commission of the offence be truthful and reliable, it is when he comes to implicate any particular perso that his evidence should be accepted with the greatest caution. Nothing is easier for a man than to narrat events with accuracy, and yet more so when coming to describe the acts of a particular person, to chang his personality so as to exculpate a guilty friend, and to implicate an innocent person or an enemy".[80]

Hence, it is a rule that corroboration to the evidence of an accomplice must proceed from a independent and reliable source; and that previous statements made by the accomplice himself, thoug consistent with the statements made by him at the trial, are insufficient for such corroboration.[81] Previou statements of anaccomplice may be proved under this section, and may be corroborative.[82]

4. STATEMENT

A statement may be written or verbal, on oath or in ordinary conversation. A witness's accoun books duly kept in the ordinary course of business, may be used under this section.[83]

The Supreme Court observed: "The word 'Statement' used in Section 157 of the Evidence Act i used in its primary meaning and there is nothing in the section which in any way requires that an element of communication to another person should be imported into the meaning of the wor "statement" used therein..... A 'Statement' under Section 157 of the Evidence Act means onl "something that is stated" and the element of communication to another person is not necessary befor "something that is stated" becomes a "statement" under that section. Notes of attendance made by solicitor at a conversation would be statements within the meaning of Section 157 and would b admissible to corroborate the solicitor's evidence under Section 157. Refreshing memory under Sectio 159 of the Evidence Act is confined to statements in writing made under the conditions mentioned in tha section while corroborating under Section 157 may be by statements in writing or even by ora statements. That is why there is difference in the language between Section 157 and 159. But tha difference does not lead to any conclusion which would cut down the meaning of the word "statement under Section 157 to those statements only which are communicated to another person."[84]

Tape recorded statement is also a statement which can be corroborated.[85] The Privy Council hel that where a sale deed recited circumstances leading to the same including the fact that a year before partition was asked for but was refused, the saledeed would be admissible under Section 157 though no for proving refusal of partition yet as corroborating evidence given by the vendor and his witnesses upon other material matters.[86] Where a writer of a letter was examined as a witness, the contents of tha letter would amount to a previous statement of the witness and can be used under Section 157 though cannot be used as a substantive evidence.[87] Entries in a diary in a solicitor's office are admissible a corroborative evidence.[88]

5. EFFECT OF SECTION 162, CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE

The general rule laid down in Section 157 is controlled by the special provisions of Section 16 Criminal Procedure Code so far as statements to the police taken under Section 161, Criminal Procedu Code, are concerned. Section 162 prohibits the use of the record containing the statement of a witness

---

79. Rey v. Malapabinkapana, (1874) 11 BHC 196, 198.
80. Queen Empress v. Bepin Biswas, ILR (1984) 10 Cal 970, 973.
81. Reg v. Malapa bin Kapana, (1874) 11 BHC 196.
82. Barkat Ali v. Crown, (1916) PR No. 2 of 1917 (Cr).
83. STOKES Vol. II, p. 931, fn1.
84. Bhogilal Chunilal v. State of Bombay, AIR 1959 SC 356.
85. Rama Reddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 1162.
86. Radhoga Baloba v. Abu Rao Bhagwant Rao, AIR (1929) PC 231.
87. Balabhadra v. Nirmala Sundari Devi, AIR (1954) Ori 23.
88. Md. Yusuff v. D, AIR 1968 Bom 112.

the police as evidence against the accused as well as proof of such statement by oral evidence.[89] Such statements cannot be used as corroboration under this section.[90] Cases which laid down that the record was inadmissible but oral evidence as to the nature of those statements could be given to corroborate the testimony of a witness are no longer of any authority in virtue of the amended Section 162, Criminal Procedure Code.[91]

The general provisions of the Evidence Act contained in Section 157 are controlled by the special provisions of Section 162, Cr.P.C. which is a special enactment. Therefore, it is important to determine whether an information is really first information and therefore can be used under Section 157 or it is hit by the Section 162. If it falls under Section 157 or it is hit by the Section 162. If it falls Section 162, Cr.P.C. it cannot be used except for the limited purpose mentioned there in that is for contradicting the witness.[92] After the amendment of Section 162, Cr.P.C. any statement if it falls under Section 162, unless it comes within its proviso, it would prevail over Section 157 and 145 Evidence Act.[93]

Where the witness, who is sought to be corroborate by the former statement, had the opportunity of seeing and knowing the facts prior to her giving evidence still they would be admissible to corroborate her evidence.[94] The Allahabad High Court held that a statement made to one person would connote the idea that the narration is addressed to that person and implies an animus or intention to communicate the subject matter of the statement to such a person, that is the meaning for the expression 'statement' used in Section 162, Cr.P.C. The expression 'statement' in Section 157 has a wider connotation than it has in Section 162, Cr.P.C.[95]

A statement of a witness recorded by the investigating officer during the inquest would come under Section 162, Cr.P.C. It can be admitted for purposes of contradiction under Section 145 of the Evidence Act, but how far it would be admissible for corroboration under Section 157 is a doubtful question.[96]

The Supreme Court held that a Panchanama cannot be treated as a statement made to the Panch witnesses and not to the police officers, as otherwise it would be easy for the police officers to circumvent the provisions of Section 162, Cr.P.C. by formerly asking Panch witnesses to be present and contending that the statements were made to the Panch witnesses and not to themselves.[97] The Bombay High Court held that the previous statements of the panchas which are to be found in the pre-trap and post-trap Panchanamas in a corruption case do not fall within the Phrase 'statement made to the police officer' as contemplated by Section 162, Cr. P.C. and that the contents of such Panchanamas would not come within the ban of that section and such previous statements could be legitimately used for corroboration under Section 157, Evidence Act.[98] If Panchanama was drawn, not during the course of police investigation, it would not be hit by the provisions of Section 162, Cr.P.C. if it was made during investigation it would be hit by Section 162, Cr.P.C.[99]

---

89. Rakha v. Crown, ILR (1925) 6 Lan 171, disproving Mam Chand v. Crown, ILR (1924) 5 Lah 324.
90. Jagwa Dhanuk v. King Emperor, ILR (1925) 5 Pat 63; King Emperor v. Manung The Division, ILR (1926) 4 Ran 72 FB. Rakha v. Crown, (1925) 6 Lah 171, disapproving Mam Chand v. Crown, ILR (1924) 5 Lah 324; King Emperor v. Nga Lun Thoung, ILR (1935) 13 Ran 570 FB.
91. The following cases are no longer of any authority Emperor v. Hanmaraddi, (1914) 16 Bom LR 603 : ILR 39 Bom 58; Fanindra Nath Banerjee v. Emperor, ILR (1908) 36 Cal 281; Muthujumaraswami Pillai v. King Emperor, ILR (1912) 35 Mad 397, FB.
92. In re Rangarajulu, AIR 1958 Mad 368; Naginlal Nandlal v. State of Gujarat, (1962) 1 Cr LJ 142 (Guj)(DB); Rakha v. Crown, AIR 1925 Lah 399; Emperor v. Najibuddin, AIR 1933 Pat 589; Valibhai Omarji v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1963 Guj 145, R v. Akbar, ILR 34 Bom 599; R. v. Narayan, ILR 32 Bom 111 (FB); Nikha Singh v. State, AIR 1952 Punb 186. See CONTRA Bashir Hussain v. Gulam Mohamed, AIR 1966 Bom 253; Fanandra v. R, 36 Cal 281; Muthukumaraswamy Pillai v. R, ILR (1912) 35 Mad 397; R. v. Hanmaraddi, ILR 39 Bom 58; Baldeo v. R, 61 IC 785.
93. V.K. Belurkar v. State of Maharashtra, 1975 Cr LJ 517 (Bom) (FB).
94. State v. Dukhi Dei, AIR (1963) Ori 144; relying on Hem Raj Devilal v. State of Azmer, AIR 1954 SC 462.
95. Shyamlal Sharma v. King Emperor, AIR (1949) All 483 (FB). See also V.K. Belurkar v. State of Maharashtra, 1975 Cr LJ 517 (FB) (Bom).
96. Pandurang v. State of Hyderabad, AIR (1955) SC 216.
97. Ramakishan v. Bombay State, AIR 1955 SC 104.
98. Belurkar v. State of Maharashtra, 1975 Cr LJ 517 (Bom)(FB) overruling Dilip Sadashiv Apte v. State, ILR 1974 Bom 613. See also Vali Bhai Omarji v. State, AIR 1963 Guj 145; V.A. Abraham v. Superintendent of Police, 1988 Cr LJ 1144 (Ker).
99. R.C. Lam v. State of Emperor, AIR 1932 Bom 181; Mohanlal Badadhai v. Emperor, 1941 Guj 149; Valibhai Omarji v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1963 Guj 145; Hamidulla v. State of Gujarat, 1988 Cr LJ 981 (Guj)(DB); Pritam Singh v. State, AIR 1972 All 744; Miyabhai Pirbhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1963 Guj 188.

6. STATEMENTS IN DOCUMENTS AND DEPOSITIONS

Where the document contained recitals and it is not between the parties to a suit, if the executent of the document is examined as a witness, the recitals contained therein may be used to corroborate his testimony under Section 157.[1]

7. PREVIOUS DEPOSITIONS

Where the plaintiffs wanted to establish their pedigree showing that A and B were brothers, it was held that a statement to that effect made by one of the plaintiffs in a deposition long before the present suit was admissible in evidence.[2]

In a suit for damages for malicious prosecution the depositions recorded in the criminal court can be made use of only under Section 157 and 158 of the Evidence Act.[3]

8. PLEADINGS

Plaint in a previous suit can be described as a previous statement of a witness. When the plaintiff comes to give evidence in court in another matter, he can be corroborated with the statements in plaint in the previous suit.[4]

9. INQUEST REPORT

The Supreme Court held that any statement by any witness during investigation is hit by Section 162 but an inquest report is not a statement of a witness at all but is only a memo of what the investigating officer had himself found and observed at the spot and so, Section 162 would have no application and there is no reason to disbelieve such a statement in an inquest report.[5]

10. POST MORTEM CERTIFICATE

The Post Mortem (Certificate) Report can be used only for corroboration of his evidence under Section 157 or to contradict him under Section 145.[6] Before the Post Mortem Report can be used to corroborate there must be evidence in the deposition of a witness which can be corroborated under Section 157.[7] The operation notes dictated by the surgeon to his junior doctor soon after the operation was performed can be used as corroborative piece of evidence to the doctor's evidence under Section 157 or can be used for refreshing his memory under Section 159.[8]

11. KIDNAPPING

Where the informant resiled from his statement made to the father of the victim of kidnapping as to the names of kidnappers and the number of the vehicle used in the offence, it was held to be hearsay but would be admissible under Section 157 as corroborative evidence to the testimony of the father that the informant told him that his son was kidnapped.[9]

12. SEXUAL OFFENCES

A statement made by the victim prosecutrix to her husband immediately after the incident is admissible as a former statement of the witness under Section 157 to corroborate her testimony latter as

---

1. Kunda Singh v. Rangi Ram, AIR (1950) Pepsu 7; Rangayyan v. Innasimuthu Mudali, AIR 1956 Mad 226.
2. Jadu Nath Sarkar v. Mahendra Nathrar, 12 Cal WN 266.
3. B.S. Wabhusan v. State, AIR 1952 Ori 289; Jamal Momin v. R., AIR 1925 Pat 381.
4. Firm Ralla Vam Raj Kumar v. Union of India, AIR 1952 Punj 340.
5. Rameswar Dayal v. State of U.P., AIR 1978 SC 1558. See also Adi Bhumiant v. State, AIR 1957 Ori 216.
6. Rangappa Goundan v. Emperor, ILR 59 Mad 349; In re, Ramaswamy, AIR 1938 Mad 336; Hadi Kirsani v. State AIR 1966 Ori 21; Vidyamati v. State, AIR 1951 HP 82; Jagdeo Singh v. State, 1979 Cr LJ 236 (All); Ganpat Raoji v State, 1980 Cr LJ 853 (Bom); State of Rajasthan v. Jawan Singh, 1971 Cr LJ 1656 (Raj).
7. Govind v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1967 Guj 288.
8. 1972 WLN 867 (Raj).
9. Vijender v. State of Delhi, (1997) 6 SCC 171 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 857.

to the same fact.[10] It was held that in cases of rape, evidence of the witnesses based on earlier statements made by the victim to them regarding the offence furnishes corroborative evidence, the weight to be attached to the evidence is another matter, depending upon the facts and circumstances of each case.[11] Statement by a girl victim of an unnatural offence to her mother 16 hours after the occurrence and that too after persistent questioning, was held not admissible to corroborate her evidence at the trial.[12] Where the statement of the prosecutrix made under Section 164, Cr.P.C. supported the prosecution story, but her evidence indicated her conduct and circumstances showing that she was a consenting party of the rape, it was held that her prior statement under Section 164, Cr.P.C. would not amount to corroboration to her evidence in material particulars.[13]

13. DYING DECLARATION

Where a person made a dying declaration but later survived, that statement in the dying declaration is admissible under Section 157, though not under Section 32 of the Evidence Act. Such statement can be used for purpose of corroboration under Section 157.[14]

14. STATEMENT OPPOSED TO PUBLIC POLICY

In a letter by a Police Officer to his superior expressing that a certain person would make a certain statement if a certain sum of money is given, it was held that such a statement in the letter is not properly receivable in evidence under Section 157 or for any other purpose, as it is opposed to public policy.[15]

15. LEGALLY COMPETENT TO INVESTIGATE

As long as an authority legally competent to deal with the matter investigates, the requirement of Section 157 would be satisfied.[16]

The word 'investigate' used in Section 157 is wide in its import. The restricted meaning given to the word 'investigation' in Section 157 of the Cr.P.C. cannot be attached to it. The word 'investigation' merely means in this section a fact finding process, and is not confined to the one conducted by the police for the collection of evidence.[17]An Inspector of the Criminal Investigation Department is 'an authority legally competent to investigate' within the meaning of this section.[18]

A report of a commissioner appointed to inspect and submit a report, can be relied on as corroborative evidence of the inspection when he is examined in court, though he was not examined as a commissioner under Order XXVI, Rule 10, Cl. (2), C.P.C.[19] Statements of persons recorded under Section 9 of Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act of 1966 can be used for corroboration under Section 157.[20]

A Deputy Superintendent of Police is an officer legally competent to investigate the fact of a murder and dacoity within this section.[21]

---

10. Sheikh Zakhir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 911; State v. Balakrishna Mahanto, (1965) 31 Cut LT 1044 (Statement to the Mother). Govind Rana v. State, 28 Cut LT 385 (Statement to the bother); 1978 Raj Cr C 419 (Statement to her father and uncle). Radhya Sham v. State of J&K, 1988 Cr LJ 447 (J&K); Yellappa Laxman v. Basavanatah Sidabasappa Patil, (1972) 2 Mys LJ 39; Gopi Shankar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1967 Raj 159; Bandu v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 285 (para 10) (Bom); State of H.P. v. Ram Dass, 1999 Cr LJ 2802 (para 10) (HP); State of Karnataka v. Manjanna, 2000 Cr LJ 3471 (para 7) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 2231; Tarachand v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 3604 (para 19) (Raj).
11. P.P. v. Mohini Sankar Dass, (1956) An WR 572.
12. State v. Satya Pal, ILR (1960) 10 Raj 250.
13. Raksnit Khosla v. State, ILR 1969 Del 653.
14. Maqsoodan v. State of U.P., AIR 1983 SC 126 : 1982 All LJ 1524; Siddu v. State, 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 255 : 1978 MPLJ 820 (DB); Namdeo v. State of Maharashtra, 1976 Cr LJ 871 (Bom). Kina Behara v. State, ILR 1968 Cut 660; Emperror v. Ram Sattu, 4 Bom LR 434; Gentela Vijayavardhan Rao v. State of A.P., AIR 1996 SC 2791 (para 17); Ramprasad v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 Cr LJ 2889 (para 15) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 1969.
15. Bhogilal v. Royal Insurance Co. Ltd., AIR (1928) PC 54.
16. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 214; Sarju v. State of W.B., (1961) 2 Cr LJ 71 (Cal).
17. Sarju v. State of W.B., (1961) 2 Cr LJ 711; State of Orissa v. Pareswar Ghasi, AIR 1968 Ori 20.
18. Muthu Kumaraswami Pillai v. King Emperor, ILR (1912) 35 Mad 397 (FB).
19. J.A. Taban v. Khair-ul-Nasa, AIR 1970 Del 205.
20. Babulal v. State, 1977 Cr LJ 2008 (All).
21. In re Thachroth, 45 MLJ 279.

16. STATEMENT UNDER SECTION 161, Cr.P.C.

Where the witnesses filled up omissions in their statement under Section 161, Cr.P.C. while giving testimony in the Court, the same would not amount to making improvement and only the contradictions between the two can be proved and utilized by the accused and not the omissions.[22]

17. STATEMENT UNDER SECTION 164, Cr. P.C.

The privy council held that a statement under Section 164, Cr.P.C., though can never be used as substantive evidence of the facts stated, can be used to corroborate under Section 157 or to contradict under Section 145 of the statement made in court.[23] Where a statement under Section 164, Cr.P.C. was recorded by a Registrar who was deputed for that purpose, it was held that the statement was admissible under the second part of Section 157.[24] A statement of a witness under Section 164, Cr.P.C. recorded by a Magistrate was admissible in evidence to corroborate the statement made by the witness before the committing Magistrate though the witness resiled in the sessions court from the evidence given before the committing Magistrate.[25] A statement or a confession by an accused recorded under Section 164, Cr.P.C. when the accused turned an approver, can be used for corroboration under Section 157, Evidence Act and Section 24 of the Evidence Act is not a bar for using those statements for the purpose of cross examining the approver.[26]

18. FORMER STATEMENT IN COMMITTAL COURT

The Supreme Court observed "Where a witness turns hostile in cross examination, his former statement in the examination in chief could be used for corroboration of his statement in the examination in chief or for contradiction of his statement in the cross-examination if the former statement could be brought under Section 157 by transmitting it into substantive evidence by the application of Section 288 Cr.P.C. Where the witness turns hostile from the start there is no question of corroboration and his former statement can be used only for contradiction under Section 145."[27] Even where a former statement was recorded by a person or court not having jurisdiction, it can still be made use of for purposes of Section 145, 155 and 157.[28]

Statements made in an enquiry by the Court of Wards for the purpose of according consent to an adoption, the statement are not made before the authority legally competent to enquire into the fact of giving of the authority to adopt.[29] The investigation must be by a person legally competent. He must have power to investigate under some law statutory or otherwise. There being no provision of law or rule under which a Sarpanch is legally competent to hold the test identification parade, his report of identification parade cannot be relied upon under Section 157 as a former statement to corroborate the testimony of the informant, though it can be used for contradiction under Section 145 or for impeaching the credit of the witness under Section 155.[30] A verified application made by a guardian containing the ward's date of birth cannot be treated as a statement made before an officer legally competent to investigate nor is it a statement at or about the time of the existence of the fact of birth; and so cannot be used under this section nor to prove the age of the ward though it can be used for re-freshing the memory under Section 159.[31]

---

22. Mohd. Islam v. State of U.P., 1993 Cr LJ 1736 (para 32) (All).
23. Bhuboni Sahu v. Emperor, AIR 1949 PC 257. See also Brij Bhushan Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1946 PC 38; Kanai La v. State, AIR 1950 Cal 413; Harnam Kisha v. Emperor, AIR 1935 Bom 26.
24. Kina Behara v. State, ILR 1968 Cut 660.
25. Vellaiah Kone v. King Emperor, ILR 45 Mad 766 : AIR 1923 Mad 20; Manar Ali v. Emperor, AIR 1934 Cal 124 Manik Gazi v. R., 1942 Cal 36; Bisipati Padhan v. State, AIR 1969 Ori 289; See CONTRA, State v. Hotey Khan, AIR 1960 All 521; Emperor v. Akbar, ILR 34 Bom 599.
26. Birendra Chandra v. State of Assam, AIR 1957 Assam 168.
27. Bhagwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 214. See also Biswabhushan Naik v. State of Orissa, 1952 Ori 289 State v. Hardial Singh, AIR (1953) Pepsu 66; Narayan Ganapati v. State, AIR 1959 Bom 552.
28. State of Punjab v. Vishwajit Singh, AIR 1987 P&H 126.
29. See also Oriental G.S.L. Insurance Co. v. Narasimha, ILR 25 Mad 183.
30. State v. Pareswar Ghasi, AIR 1968 Ori 20; Kumara Muthu v. Emperor, AIR 1919 Mad 487; Emperor v Ramchandra, AIR 1928 Cal 732; Tobarak Mondal v. King, AIR (1949) Cal 629; Thakurji v. Parmeshawar Daya (Statement before collector), AIR 1960 All 339.
31. Gopinath v. Satish Chandra, AIR 1964 All 53.

19. FIRST INFORMATION REPORT

The F.I.R. is not substantive piece of evidence and can only be used to corroborate the statement of the maker under Section 157 or to contradict it under Section 145 of the Evidence Act. It cannot be used as evidence against the maker if he becomes an accused, nor to corroborate or contradict other witnesses.[32] Where the first informant had turned hostile and testified that he had made no statement to the police and had rather signed on dotted lines, it was held that such an F.I.R. could not be used to corroborate the first informant or to discredit the other prosecution witnesses before whom the deceased had made the dying declaration.[33] In certain cases where the maker of the information which was recorded as F.I.R. had died as a result of the injuries received then it would be admissible as substantive evidence under Section 32 of the Evidence Act.[34]

It was held by the Supreme Court that the fact that the F.I.R. was lodged within 35 minutes of the occurrence at a police station which is at a distance of two miles from the place of the occurrence and the fact that names of the accused and also of the witnesses were mentioned therein lends considerable corroboration to the testimony of the maker who is examined as a witness, as regards the participation of the accused in the occurrence.[35] A complaint in a corruption case is a F.I.R. and is admissible for corroboration of evidence of the maker under Section 157.[36]

When the maker of the FIR is examined in court and the report is not tendered by the prosecution in accordance with the provisions of Section 157 Evidence Act it cannot be relied on for any purpose.[37] When the prosecution has neither produced in evidence the person who made the first report in the Thana nor the person who wrote it out at the Thana, the first report cannot be referred to in evidence.[38] When there is delay in giving the F.I.R., unless the delay is explained it has no corroborative value at all.[39]

When the maker of the F.I.R. is alive it is admissible only under Section 157 to corroborate his statement, and if he is dead it would be admissible under Section 32 of this act.[40]

Where the information regarding the commission of an offence was given to the police on two different dates by two different persons, and one was earlier to the other it was held that the later report is not a statement made to a Police Officer in the course of investigation but it is an independent first information report and so can be used by the prosecution.[41]

20. AT OR ABOUT THE TIME WHEN THE FACT TOOK PLACE

These words mean that the statement must be made at once or at least shortly after when a reasonable opportunity for making it presents itself. What is a reasonable time is a question of fact in each case. The object of the section is to admit statements made at a time when the mind of the witness is still so connected with the events as to make it probable that his description of them would be accurate.

---

32. Nisar Ali v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 366; Aghnoo Nagesia v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 119; Emperor v. Nazeer Ahmed, AIR 1945 PC 18; Damodar Prasad v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1972 SC 622; Pundlik v. State, AIR 1951 MP 72; Hasib v. State of Bihar, AIR 1972 SC 283; Kalu Mandal v. State, AIR 1950 Cal 412; Dhirendra Nath v. State, AIR 1952 Cal 621; Maganlal Radha Kishen v. Emperor, AIR 1946 Nag 173; Abdul Latif v. Emperor, AIR 1941 Cal 533; A W Khan v. State, AIR 1962 Cal 641; Ram Naresh v. Emperor, AIR 1939 All 242; In re Rangarajulu Naidu, AIR 1958 Mad 368; Suka Misra v. State, AIR 1951 Ori 71; Thommi Anthoni v. Sirkar Prosecutor, AIR 1950 Tra Co 41; Sonkarlinga Tewan v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Mad 632; Emperor v. Dubai, AIR 1942 Pat 113; Bhagirathi v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 99; State v. Shiv Singh, AIR 1962 Raj 3; Shanker v. State of U.P., AIR 1975 SC 757; B G Singh v. State, ILR 1974 HP 948; Padan Pradhan v. State of Orissa, 1982 Cr LJ 534 (Ori); Mazidar Rahman v. State of Assam, 1977 Cr LJ 1293; State of Gujarat v. Hiralal Deivji, AIR 1964 Guj 261; Balgangadhar Tilak v. Srinivas Pandit, AIR 1915 PC 7; Tara Singh v. State, AIR 1951 SC 441; Miyana Hasan Abdulla v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1962 Guj 214; Sagar Chandra Saha v. State, AIR 1962 Cal 85.

33. George v. State of Kerala, AIR 1998 SC 1376 : 1998 Cr LJ 2034.

34. Inchan v. Emperor, (1943) Cal 647.

35. Dargahi v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 2695; Satyawir v. State, AIR 1958 All 746.

36. V.K. Belurkar v. State of Maharashtra, (1975) Cr LJ 517 (Bom) FB.

37. Damodar Prasad Chandrika Prasad v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1972 SC 622.

38. State v. Gajraj, ILR (1952) Raj 910.

39. 1974 All Cr R 21.

40. Maqsoodan v. State of U.P., AIR 1983 SC 126.

41. Emperor v. Lalji Rai, AIR (1936) Pat 11.

In STEPHEN'S DIGEST OF LAW OF EVIDENCE (10th Ed. p. 170) it is stated that the expression "at or about the time" means reasonably soon after the alleged offence or very shortly after.[42]

The Supreme Court observed: "There can be no hard and fast rule about the "or about" condition in Section 157." The main test is whether the statement was made as early as can reasonably be expected in the circumstances of the case and before there was opportunity for tutoring or concoction".[43] Any former statement made by a witness at or about the time when the incident took place becomes usable as of corroborative value. Though such statements are not part of the main transaction, they have a probative value for corroborative purpose if such statements have been made without delay. Delay restricts its utility to confronting the maker for contradicting him. Such a statement would have no corroborative value.[44] Where the witness disclosed to his brother-in-law about his version of the occurrence and there was nothing to indicate that he was either tutored or influenced by anybody during the interregnum, such a statement could be treated as corroborative piece of evidence.[45]

A child victim of rape stated to her mother shortly after the occurrence about the incident. The mother also stated what her child stated to her shortly after the incident. It was held by the Supreme Court, that the statement of the mother amounts to corroboration of the evidence of the child victim; it was further held the previous statement of an accomplice or a complainant is legally admissible as corroboration provided the conditions prescribed by Section 157 Evidence Act, viz., "at or about the time etc." are fulfilled; the weight to be attached to it is another matter. It may be in some cases the evidentiary value of the two statements emanating from the same tainted source may not be high, but in view of Section 118 its legal admissibility as corroboration cannot be questioned.[46] Statements by victims of rape to her husband immediately after the incident and for other cases see also under the head sexual offences.[47]

Annoyance was caused to a woman teacher by the Principal by cutting jokes in the presence of others. It was held that her conduct in narrating all that transpired to some of her colleagues is not res gestae under Section 6 but the same when corroborated by other witnesses is clearly admissible under Section 157.[48]

The Lahore High Court has held that the proximity of time must be established.[49] If time for reflection passes between the event and the subsequent statement, it not only can be of very little value but may be actually dangerous as such statements can be easily brought into being. Such delayed statements are inadmissible. The section says that the statement must be made "at or about the time" and not" "at any time after the event."[50] Where the occurrence took place at 7 A.M. and dying declaration was recorded at 12-30 P.M. and the person survived, it was held that his statement must be deemed to have been recorded at or about the time of occurrence, and could be used for corroboration of his testimony in court.[51] Where a statement was made more than 12 hours after the occurrence, it was held that the maker (witness) was in a precarious condition and as there was no opportunity for tutoring or concoction, it can be taken that the statement was made at about the time when the fact took place and hence admissible under Section 157.[52]

---

42. Reg v. Lillyman, (1896) 2 QB 167.

43. Rameshwar Kalyan Singh v. State of Rajastan, AIR 1952 SC 54. See also Mahabir Singh v. State of Haryana, 200 Cr LJ 3945 (para 23) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2503.

44. Nathuni Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 1808.

45. State of Tamil Nadu v. Suresh, AIR 1998 SC 1044 : 1998 Cr LJ 1416 (para 29) (SC), reversing Cri A Nos. 782-83 o 1989, decided on 8.2.1991 (Mad).

46. Sheikh Zakir v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 911; In re, Boya Chinnappa, ILR 1951 Mad 973; Bachu v. King, ILR 1951 Cal 219.

47. State of Rajasthan v. Rameshwar, AIR 1951 Raj 30; Bhupati Ghosh v. King, (the witness came several hours after the occurrence and his statement is not admissible) AIR 1950 Cal 327; State of Bihar v. Srilal Kejriwal, AIR 196 Pat 459 (approvers statement soon after the crime); State of Orissa v. Parvatisam, AIR 1963 Ori 58; State of Mysor v. Kantappa, (1964) Mys LJ 393; D.B. Deshmukh v. State, AIR (1970) Bom 438; Khali Sahu v. State, (1975) 41 Cu LT 751; 1978 Raj Cr C 419, (Rape victim's statements to her father and uncle); 1983 Raj Cr C 363 (Rape victim' statements to her father and uncle.

48. Chander Kala v. Ram Kishan, AIR 1985 SC 1268.

49. Manghat Rai v. Emperor, AIR 1928 Lah 647.

50. Appadurai, In re, ILR (1945) Mad 821.

51. 1984 All Cr. R. 459.

52. Kina Behera v. State, ILR 1968 Cut 660.

Where the question arose in 1944 whether A and B were partners in a business in 1936. A deposed that he was an employer and B was an employee. In 1936 A handed over a letter to B's lawyer wherein it was stated so. It was held by the Privy council that the document of 1936 could not corroborate the evidence given 8 years later and it was a most contemporary document which correctly stated the terms agreed upon between the parties.[53] The statement of a girl victim of rape to her mother made 16 hours after the occurrence that too after persistent questioning was held not admissible to corroborate her evidence.[54]

21. CASES

In 1874 five out of six persons who were named as having committed a murder were arrested and after inquiry before a Magistrate were tried before the Court of Sessions and convicted. At the time of the inquiry before the Magistrate, the sixth person absconded, and evidence was recorded by the Magistrate in his absence. In their examination before that officer, the witnesses deposed to the absconder having been one of the participators in the crime charged against the prisoners then under trial. In 1886, the absconder was apprehended and tried before the Court of Session upon the charge of murder. Of the witnesses examined at the first trial, only one was living. He was examined and his deposition given in 1874 was also admitted. It was held that the deposition taken in 1874 of the surviving witnesses was admissible under this section as corroboration of his evidence given at the trial of the prisoner.[55]

The principle underlying the rule of corroboration is that he who is insistent deserves to be believed. Therefore previous statements of the victims who has turned hostile and does not support the case of prosecution cannot be used as corroboration under Section 157.[56]

Before corroborative evidence is admitted, evidence sought to be corroborated must be given first.[57] In order that a former statement be admissible under Section 157 it is not necessary that the witness sought to be corroborated must also say in court that he had made a former statement.[58]

Where the witness who is sought to be corroborated by the former statement, had the opportunity of seeing and knowing the faces prior to her giving evidence still they would be admissible to corroborate her evidence.[59]

What matters may be proved in connection with proved statement relevant under Section 32 or 33

S. 158. Whenever any statement, relevant under Section 32 or 33, is proved, all matters may be proved, either in order to contradict or to corroborate it, or in order to impeach or confirm the credit of the person by whom it was made, which might have been proved if that person had been called as a witness and had denied upon cross-examination the truth of the matter suggested.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Sections 32 and 33 of the Act permit the putting in of statements, oral or written, or statements made in a judicial proceeding, by a person who cannot be examined as a witness. The Legislature intends by this section to submit such statements to the tests of contradiction and corroboration, in the same way as if those statements were made by the witness in the box.

STEPHEN in his Digest (Art. 135) states: "The object of this section is to expose statements to every possible means of contradiction or corroboration in the same manner as that of a witness before the court

---

53. Hurberi P. James v. Ghulam Hussein, AIR (1949) PC 151.
54. State v. Satya Pal, ILR (1960) 10 Raj 250.
55. Queen Emperor v. Ishri Singh, ILR (1886) 8 All 672.
56. Pratap Singh v. State of M.P., (1972) Cr LJ 172.
57. Kshetrimayum v. Union Territory of Manipur, 1968 Cr LJ 690, 693 (Mani).
58. Rama Ratan v. State, 1962 SC 424 Overruling Misri (Mst.) v. Emperor, AIR (1934) Sind 100; Nazar Singh v. State, AIR 1951 Pepsu 66; Radha Kishan v. State of Rajasthan, 1973 Cr LJ 481 (Raj).
59. State of Orissa v. Dukhi Dei, AIR (1963) Ori 144 relying on Hem Raj Devilal v. State of Azmer, AIR (1954) SC 462.

under cross-examination, the reason being that statements admissible under Section 32 and 33 ar exceptional cases and it is but just and reasonable that such statements should as far as possible b subject to the various modes of attacking or corroborating them. No sanctity attaches to the statement simply because a person is dead; his crediblity may be impeached or confirmed in the same manner a that of a living witness."

A statement made by a widow in her gift-deed was sought to be put in evidence to contradict he earlier statement. It was held that the statement in the gift deed was relevant for purpose of contradictin her earlier statement. However on facts it was held that the statement in the gift deed did not directl contradict her earlier statement.[60] Under this section prior statements of a deceased person can b admitted both for corroboration and contradiction.[61] Where the deposition of a witness after his deat was admitted in another proceeding under Section 33, and was sought to be proved through anothe witness, and the witness was asked what information the deceased gave him soon after the occurrence, i was held that such question was admissible under this section to corroborate the deposition of th deceased witness.[62] Where the deceased person stated five years back that his vision was poor an blurred and in the present proceeding the deceased stated the names of the assialants in his dyin declaration, it was held that the previous statement five years back is admissible to contradict th statement in his dying declaration which is admissible under Section 32.[63]

In a suit for malicious prosecution the depositions recorded in a criminal court can be made use of a substantive evidence, if the parties agreed to treat those depositions as evidence in the suit or if they ar admissible under Section 33 of the Evidence Act. Otherwise the deposition in the criminal case can b made use of only under Sections 157 and 158 of the Evidence Act.[64]

Refreshing memory.

S. 159. A witness may, while under examination, refresh hi memory by referring to any writing made by himself at th time of the transaction concerning which he is questioned, or so soon afterward that the Court considers it likely that the transaction was at that time fresh in hi memory.

The witness may also refer to any such writing made by any other person, an read by the witness within the time aforesaid, if when he read it he knew it to b correct.

When witness may use copy of document to refresh memory.

Whenever a witness may refresh his memory by referenc to any document, he may, with the permission of the Court refer to a copy of such document:

Provided the Court be satisfied that there is sufficien reason for the non-production of the original.

An expert may refresh his memory by reference to professional treatises.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope	... 1329	9. Panchanamas	... 133
2. Sections 159 & 160—Compared	... 1329	10. Police Diaries	... 133
3. May refresh his memory	... 1330	11. Special Diary	... 133
4. Any writing	... 1330	12. Dying Declaration	... 133
5. Horoscope	... 1330	13. At the time of the transaction	... 133
6. Age Certificate	... 1331	14. Inadmissible documents	... 133
7. Account Books	... 1331	15. Copy of the document	... 133
8. Post Mortem Reports	... 1331

---

60. Ramrati Kuer v. Dwarika Prasad Singh, AIR 1967 SC 1134.
61. Sudhershana v. Sitharamamma, 1933 Mad WN 1148.
62. Fool Kissory v. Nobin Chunder, ILR 23 Cal 441.
63. State v. Sheo Babu Singh, 1964 All LJ 1134.
64. S.T. Sahib v. Hasan Ghani Sahib, AIR 1957 Mad 646.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Section 157 states that the former statements whether oral or documentary can be proved to corroborate the testimony of the witness whereas this section allows the witness to refresh his memory by a reference to an earlier document.

TAYLOR ON EVIDENCE (Section 1406) observes: "A witness is sometimes permitted to refresh and assist his memory by the use of written instrument, memorandum or entry in a book. But this course,—except in the case of scientific witness referring to professional books as the foundation of their opinion,—can only be adopted where the writing has been made, or its accuracy recognised, at the time of the fact in question, or, at furthest, so recently afterwards, as to render it probable that the memory of the witness had not then become defective."

"A witness may refresh his memory in the witness-box by reference to any writing made or verified by himself concerning the facts to which he testifies provided that it was made or verified by him while the facts were fresh in his memory.[65] The principle is one of practice only and not part of the substantive law.[66] The reason for the rule was stated to be that a witness should not suffer from a mistake and may explain an inconsistency.[67]

If a witness has become blind, the document may be read over to him."[68] (PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), page 267 (para 11-45)).

It was held by FIELD J. that in the interests of truth it would be desirable to recognise the full benefit of recollection of the witness as to the whole of the facts; writing is a more reliable means of preserving the truth than simply memory; that to revive a faded memory, this section permits a witness to refresh his memory respecting the facts about which he speaks, by anything written by himself contemporaneously with the transaction in which he testifies or soon afterwards when the facts were fresh in memory, a witness may also refresh his memory by referring to writing made by any other person very shortly after the date on which the event in question occurred and read by him shortly after the event if, when he heard it he knew that the same was correctly stated in writing.[69]

Section 159 and 160 should be read together for a proper understanding of their scope. When a witness gives his evidence in court about the facts which might have taken place sometime before, Section 159 says he can refresh his memory by referring to the document, whereas section. 160 says that he can testify the facts contained in the document by looking into the document. The only condition under Section 160 is that he had no recollection of the facts but he is sure that whatever contained in the document was correctly recorded.

There is some distinction between Section 159 and Section 160 though the object is the same for the both the sections.

2. SECTIONS 159 & 160—COMPARED

SECTION 159	SECTION 160
1. The witness refreshes his memory by looking into document and gives his evidence in the ordinary way.	1. The memory of the witness is not refreshed with the help of the document.

---

65. R. v. Mills & Rose, (1962) 46 Cr App R 336 at 342; Groves v. Redbart, (1975) Crim LR 158.
66. R. v. Governor of Gloucester Prison, ex p. Miller, (1979) 1 WLR 537.
67. Halliday v. Holgate, (1868) 17 LT 18, per MONTAGUE SMITH J.
68. Catt v. Howard, (1820) 3 Stark R 3; Vaughan v. Martin, (1796) 1 Esp 440.
69. Emperor v. Jhubboo Mahton, ILR (1882) 8 Cal 739, 742.

2. The document is not tendered in evidence. So the witness's memory or recollection is the evidence, after looking into the document.[70]

The mere handing over of a document to a witness for the purpose of refreshing his memory does not make the document a piece of evidence in the case.[71]

3. The witness can even refer to a copy of the document with the permission of the court.

4. There is no evidentiary value of the document.

2. The document is tendered in evidence. So the document is the evidence of facts contained therein and which were spoken to by the witness. The document would be tendered only when the witness states that (1) he had no specific recollection of the facts stated in the document and (2) that he is sure that the facts were correctly recorded in the document. Even if he omits to say in evidence that he had no recollection of facts and that he is sure that the facts were correctly recorded, it would not make the document inadmissible, provided he states on oath that the facts were correctly stated in the document.[72]

3. The copy of the document cannot be tendered. But see commentary under Section 160.

4. There is some evidentiary value because of its being tendered in evidence.[73]

3. MAY REFRESH HIS MEMORY

The section says that a witness may refresh his memory as stated. He is not bound to do so; and the accused cannot compel him to do it.[74]

4. ANY WRITING

In this section it is stated that the witness can refresh his memory by referring to any writing. The word "any writing" includes also printed matters.[75]

It is immaterial what the document is, whether it be a book of account, letter, tradesman's bill, notes made by the witness, or any other document which is likely to assist the memory of the witness. Where the question was whether a candidate appealed to voters on the ground of religion, short and long-hand notes made by persons who heard the speeches were permitted to be used by them for refreshing memory.[76] Their contents can also be brought on record by direct oral evidence in the manner prescribed by Section 160.

A witness may refresh his memory by referring to any writing made by himself at the time of the transaction concerning which he is questioned.[77] Where a Commissioner's inspection report in respect of a property was cancelled and a party sought to examine witness, not in the capacity of a Commissioner but an ordinary witness, he could be allowed to refer to his report to refresh his memory as he was being examined after a long lapse of time.[78]

5. HOROSCOPE

The Privy Council in Banwarilal v. Mahesh, (1918 P.C. 118) held that a horoscope can be used to help the witness in proving the date of birth stated in it under Section 159 or Section 160.[79]

---

70. Dharma v. State, AIR 1966 Raj 74.
71. Tribhuvan Ojha v. Ramchandra Dube, (1934) 14 Pat 233.
72. Pratap Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1926 Lah 310.
73. Man Mohan Singh v. Bhanwarlal, AIR 1964 MP 137, 146.
74. In the matter of the Petition of Kali Churn Chunari, ILR (1881) 8 Cal 154.
75. See General Clauses Act 10 of 1897 Section 3 (58); Ram Chandra v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Lah 371.
76. Ziyaudin Burhanuddini v. Brij Mohan Ramdass, AIR 1975 SC 1788.
77. In Re Subramanian, 1979 Mad LJ (Cri) 546.
78. V.P. Padmanabhan Nair v. M/s Grasim Industries, Mavoor, AIR 1997 Ker 356. See also State of Karnataka v. A Yarappa Reddy, 2000 Cr LJ 400 (paras 21-22) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 185.
79. Shanker Gir v. Chinnuji, AIR 1923 Nag 164; Harbahadur Lal v. Chandraj Bahadur, AIR 1918 Oudh 371; Savit Bhai v. Sitaram, AIR 1986 MP 218.

6. AGE CERTIFICATE

An age certificate given by a person can be used to refresh his memory.[80]

7. ACCOUNT BOOKS

It was held by the Supreme Court that where a witness has to depose to a large number of tnasactions contained in an account book or some other documents, there is nothing wrong in allowing him to refer to the account books and documents to refresh his memory while answering the questions put to him; he cannot be expected to remember every transaction and its details, he can use it to refresh memory under Section 159, though he had no recollection of those transactions, provided he is sure that those facts are correctly recorded in the account books or documents. In such case Section 160 specifically permits him to testify to those facts.[81] Though account books produced at a late stage are not admitted in evidence, the party may be allowed to refresh his memory by reference to them and such procedure is proper.[82] In a prosecution under Section 409, I.P.C., it was held that loose sheets of accounts which are used by the auditor when he audited the accounts would be admissible under Section 63(3) or to refresh his memory under Section 159 or Section 160 of the Evidence Act.[83]

8. POST MORTEM REPORT

A medical man in giving evidnece may refresh his memory by referring to a report which he has made of his post-mortem examination, but the report itself cannot be treated as evidence.[84]

(See cases under the same head noted in Section 157, such reports can be used under Section 159 also).

9. PANCHANAMAS

Even if a panchanama contained a statement made by a witness as to the crime committed, it is not admissible in evidence, a panch witness can make use of it for the purpose of refreshing his memory, where the panchanama is made by the police but is immediately read over to the panch and admitted by him to be correct.[85]

When a search was conducted by the police in the presence of the witnesses which is obligatory, and a panchanama was prepared, it was held that it cannot be used to corroborate the evidence either of the Police Officer or of the Panch, and it cannot be referred by the witness panch to refresh his memory, as it is hit by Section 162, Cr PC, and Section 159 is not intended for that purpose.[86] However, it was held that a search witness attesting the Mahajan prepared immediately after the raid can be used under Section 159 by the attesting witness to refresh his memory, and can also be used as corroboration of his evidence under Section 157.[87]

See also commentary under the head Panchanama in Section 157.

10. POLICE DIARIES

Police diaries are not admissible as substantive evidence or for corroborating the Police Officer, but are admissible for the only limited purpose of contradicting him or for refreshing his memory.[88]

---

80. Venkata Rangappa v. Subba Raya Goundan, 33 IC 142.
81. State of A.P. v. Ganeshwara Rao, AIR 1963 SC 1850.
82. Jewanlal Daga v. Nilmani Choudhary, AIR 1928 PC 80 : 55 IA 107.
83. State of Orissa v. Harish Chandrakar Mohapatra, AIR 1966 Ori 189.
84. Roghuni Singh v. R. ILR (1882) 9 Cal 455; Loku Basappa Pujari v. State, (1959) 61 Bom LR 1271.
85. Emperor v. Mahadeo Dewoo, (1945) 47 Bom LR 992 : AIR 1946 Bom 189.
86. State of Gujarat v. Raji Bhai, AIR 1960 Guj 24; Mia Bhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1963 Guj 188; Kajaji Ramji v. State of Gujarat, 1966 CrLJ 331 (Guj); Ramdeo v. State, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 198 (All)(DB); Tanu Kayputra v. State, 1977 CrLJ (NOC) 119 (Cal).
87. 1972 Mad LJ (Cri) 321 (Mys).
88. Dalsingh v. King Emperor, ILR 44 Cal 876 (PC) : AIR 1917 PC 25; Queen Empress v. Mannu, ILR 19 All 390 (FB); Achhaibat Singh v. Emperor, 22 Cr LJ 374 (Pat).

11. SPECIAL DIARY

The special diary may be used by the Police Officer who made it, and by no witness other than such officer, for the purpose of refreshing his memory.[1]

This case was approved by the Privy Council in Dalsingh v. R.[2]

12. DYING DECLARATION

The dying statement of a deceased person may be proved in the ordinary way by a person who heard it; and the writing may be used for the purpose of refreshing the witness's memory.[3]

13. AT THE TIME OF THE TRANSACTION

In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Ed. (2000), Para 11-49, Page 271 it is observed: "Whether a document is contemporaneous is a matter of fact and degree.[4] The document must have been written either at the time of the transaction or so shortly afterwards that the facts were fresh in witness's memory[5]. This definition was accepted by SACHS L.J., in delivering the judgment of the Court of Appeal in R. v. Richardson[6] . He added that it provided a measure of elasticity and "should not be taken to confine the witness to an over-short period." A delay of a fortnight may not be fatal[7], but an interval of four weeks[8] or three months,[9] has been held to exclude."

Where a doctor wants to refresh his memory from the slip of paper which his pleader gave him, as to the injuries on the person of the complainant, it must be shown that the writing was made by the deponent at the time when he examined the complainant, or so soon after that and the court considers it rightly that the transaction was at that time fresh in his memory.[10]

Notes containing a summary of discussions held at different times prepared by a party which do not in any manner serve his interest cannot be considered self-serving notes and are admissible to corroborate the maker under Section 157 and he can refresh his memory by looking at them under Section 159.[11]

"In R. v. Da Silva,[12] the Court of Appeal considered whether the judge has a discretion to permit a witness to refresh his memory, after commencing his evidence, from a document that is not contemporaneous. The Court said :

> "In our judgment, therefore, it should be open to the judge, in the exercise of his discretion and in the interests of justice, to permit a witness who has begun to give evidence to refresh his memory from a statement made near to the time of events in question, even though it does not come within the definition of contemporaneous, provided he is satisfied :
>
> (1) that the witness indicates that he cannot now recall the details of events because of the lapse of time since they took place;
>
> (2) that he made a statement much nearer the time of the events and that the contents of the statement represented his recollection at the time he made it;
>
> (3) that he had not read the statement before coming into the witness-box;

---

1. Queen-Empress v. Mannu, ILR (1897) 19 All 390 (FB); King-Emperor v. Nga Lun Thoung, ILR (1935) 13 Ran 570 (FB).
2. AIR 1917 PC 25. See also: Dadan Gazi v. R. ILR (1906) 33 Cal 1023; Experora v. Dharam Vir, AIR 1933 Lah 498.
3. In the matter of the Petition of Samiruddin, ILR (1882) 8 Cal 211.
4. R. v. Simmonds, (1967) 51 Cr. App. R. 316 at 330.
5. Burrough v. Martin, (1809) 2 Camp. 112; Whitefield v. Aland, (1849) 2 C&K 1015; Talbot v. Cusack, (1864) 17 Ir.C.L.R. 213; R. v. Mills and Rose, (1962) 46 Cr. App. R. 336 at 342.
6. (1971) 1 WLR 889, 894.
7. R. v. Langton, (1877) 2 QBD 296.
8. R v. Graham, (1973) Crim. LR 628; R. v. Kinloch, (1795) 25 How. St. Tr. 892 (several weeks).
9. R. v. Woodcock, (1963) Cri. LR 273.
10. Pannalal Shaw v. Nani Gopal Biswas, AIR 1949 Cal 103.
11. Hari Das Mundhra v. State, ILR (1962) 1 All 451.
12. (1990) 90 Cr App R 233. Cf. earlier dicta in R. v. Cheng, (1976) 63 Cr App R 20 CA.

(4) that he wished to have an opportunity to read the statement before he continued to give evidence.

We do not think that it matters whether the witness withdraws from the witness-box and reads his statement, as he would do if he had the opportunity before entering the witness-box, or whether he reads it in the witness-box. What is important is that if the former course is adopted, no communication must be had with the witness, other than to see that he can read the statement in peace, Moreover, if either course is adopted, the statement must be removed from him when he comes to give his evidence and he should not be permitted to refer to it again, unlike a contemporaneous statement which may be used to refresh memory while giving evidence."[13] (PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), pages 271-272 (para 11-51)).

14. INADMISSIBLE DOCUMENTS

For the purpose of refreshing the memory under this section, it is not necessary that the document which is looked into should be legally admissible in evidence e.g., unstamped document.[14] or insufficiently stamped document.[15] or any statement falling under Section 162, Cr PC.[16] The reason being that such documents would not be tendered in evidence and no question of their admissibility would arise.

But a Court should not take cognizance of the terms of a document which is inadmissible in evidence and has been referred to by a witness merely in order to refresh his memory as to a date.[17]

In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), Para 11-48, Page 270 it is observed: "The document need not be admissible per se. Thus the fact that an invalid lease,[18] or an irregular deposition,[19] may be referred to and used for this purpose does not make it evidence in the case.[20]

15. COPY OF THE DOCUMENT

Markby on Evidence (P. 111) observes: "Section 159, deals with a case in which the witness refreshes his memory. He is sure not only that the facts were correctly recorded, but of the facts themselves, and prepared to swear that they existed, and this explains why in Section 159 reference to a copy is allowed, but not in Section 160."[21]

The Act does not require that this copy shall have been made by the witness himself, or in his presence, or so as to enable him to swear to its accuracy[22]. A register which is not a secondary evidence of the contents of a bond may be referred to by a witness for the purpose of refreshing his memory.[23]

Testimony to facts stated in document mentioned in Section 159

S. 160. A witness may also testify to facts mentioned in any such document as is mentioned in Section 159, although he has no specific recollection of the facts themselves, if he is sure that the facts were correctly recorded in the document.

---

13. Ibid., at 238. See also R v. S. Ribble Magistrates' Court, ex p. Cochrane, (1996) 2 Cr App R 544, where the Divisional Court expressed the view that the statement should not necessarily be removed from the witness.
14. Birchall v. Bullough, (1896) 1 QB 326; or an Maugham v. Hubbard, (1828) 8 B&C 14; invalid lease Bolton v. Tomlin, (1836) 5 A&E 856.
15. Tribhuvan Ojha v. Ramchandra, ILR (1934) 14 Pat 233.
16. Bhondu v. R., AIR 1949 All 364. See also Emperor v. Mahadeo Dewoo, AIR 1946 Bomb 189; Abdulla v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Lah 716.
17. Bhogilal v. Royal Insurance Co. Ltd., ILR (1927) 6 Ran 142 : 30 Bom LR 818 (PC) : AIR 1928 PC 54.
18. Bolton v. Tomlin, (1836) 5 A&E 836.
19. R. v. Mann, (1885) 49 JP 743.
20. Alcock v. Royal Exchange Assurance, (1849) 13 QB 292; Payne v. Ibbotson, (1859) 27 LJ Ex. 341.
21. See also Abdul Satar v. Emperor, ILR 49 Cal 573.
22. STROKES, Vol. II, p. 932, f.n.3.
23. Taruck Nath Mullick v. Jeamat Nosya, ILR (1879) 5 Cal 353.

ILLUSTRATION

A book-keeper may testify to facts recorded by him in books regularly kept in the course of business, if he knows that the books were correctly kept, although he has forgotten the particular transactions entered.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

The principle of Section 159 is carried a step further in Section 160. A witness may refresh his memory by a document even though he has no specific recollection of the facts themselves; but he must be sure that the facts were correctly recorded in the document.

MARKBY ON EVIDENCE (p. 111) observes: "A, a grocer, sues B for the price of goods sold sometime previously, in small quantities, on a great many different occasions, in fact, on an ordinary running account. The shop-man is called, who says that, though he knows B to be a customer, he has no recollection of the particular transactions, but they are all contained in a book which he holds in his hand. The book is not admissible in evidence, but if the conditions as to the writing and so forth of the entries in the book as stated in Section 159, be satisfied, then under Section 160, the witness may look at the book and if he is prepared to state upon oath that the entries are correct, he may read them out of the book."

"It is not essential that the witness has any independent recollection of the facts recorded in the document used to "refresh" memory."[24] (PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), page 272 (para 11-52)).

That a document may be used as the refresher of memory it is by no means necessary that the witness, after having seen it, should have an independent recollection of the facts mentioned therein or connected therewith. It will suffice if he remembers that he has seen the paper before, and that, when he saw it, he knew its contents to be correct, or even if, entirely forgetting the circumstances themselves, and the fact of his having seen the paper, he can still, in consequence of recognising his signature or writing upon it, vouch for the accuracy of the memorandum, or swear to the particular fact in question.[25]

The Supreme Court, however held that the witness need not, in so many words state specifically that he has no specific recollection of the facts or that he is sure that the facts were correctly recorded; it would be sufficient if it appears from his evidence that the conditions prescribed by Section 160 are fulfilled.[26]

A witness testifying to large number of transactions contained in account books or in other documents can be permitted to testify by referring to them.[27]

The Supreme Court repelling the contention that it would be an abuse of the provisions of Section 159, if the approver was allowed to refresh his memory by referring exclusively to the account books and various documents, observed: "In our opinion, where the witness has to depose to a large number of transactions, and those transactions are referred to or mentioned either in the account books or in other documents, there is nothing wrong in allowing this witness to refer to the account books and the documents, while answering the questions put to him in his examination. He cannot be expected to remember every transaction in its details, and Section 160 specifically permits a witness to testify the facts mentioned in the documents referred to in Section 159 although he has no recollection of the facts themselves, if he is sure that the fats were correctly recorded in the documents."

Having no specific recollection of the facts he can only testify regarding the contents of the document before him and explain that he recorded correctly what the deponent said at the time.[28] A witness may refresh his memory from a writing made by another person and inspected and signed by him, at the close of the day on which it was made, when it brings to his mind neither any recollection of

---

24. See R. v. Bryant & Dickson, (1931) Cr App R 146, 150; Maugham v. Hubbard, (1828) 8 B & C 14; R v. Guinea, (1841) Ir Cir Rep 167; R v. St. Martin's, (1834) 2 A & E 210; Topham v. McGregor, (1844) 1 C & K 320.
25. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 1412, pp. 896-897.
26. Kanti Prasad v. Purushottam Das, AIR 1969 SC 851 : (1969) 3 SCR 400. See also Krishnama v. R., AIR 1931 Mad 430; Pratap Singh v. R., AIR 1926 Lah 310; Dharma v. State, AIR 1966 Raj 74.
27. State of Andhra Pradesh v. Ganeswara Rao, AIR 1963 SC 1850.
28. Partap Singh v. Crown, ILR (1925) 7 Lah 91 : AIR 1926 Lah 310.

the facts mentioned therein not of the writing itself but when it nevertheless enables him to testify to a particular fact from the conviction of his mind on seeing the writing which he knows to be genuine.[29]

If the witness had not correctly recorded the words used by the speaker but only his impression, then the notes made by him would be inadmissible to prove the words used.[30]

The notes of a speech taken at the time by a Police Officer should be proved in the following way: The Police Officer should describe his attendance at the place where the speech was made by the accused and the making of the relevant speech and give a description of its nature so as to identify his presence there and his attention to what was going on. After that it is quite enough if he says: "I wrote down that speech and this is what I took down."[31] If the police officer had not refreshed his memory under Section 159 from those notes and did not testify orally as to the speech then it would not be admissible in evidence.[32] When the transcribed notes of the police were given to the adverse party, it was held that the notes cannot be said to be inadmissible merely because they were in shorthand which the adverse party cannot decipher and they can be made use of under Section 160.[33]

The Supreme Court observed: "though these reports had not been used for the purpose of refreshing the memory of any witness under Section 159, they were used under the Section 160 of the Act. It might be implied that the witnesses had no specific recollection of the facts. The witnesses being in a position to correctly record the facts in the document, both the conditions required by Section 160 had been complied with, though the report was strictly speaking not substantive evidence as such; and the document could only be used as a part of the oral evidence sanctified by the oath."[34]

In HALSBURY 4th Ed., Vol. 17, Para: 274, Page: 191 it is stated: "The document need not have been made by the witness personally, but if it was not made by him it must have been checked by him while the facts were fresh in his memory.[35]

Documents may be used by a witness to refresh his memory even if they would not be admissible in evidence if tendered as such.[36] Documents may be read over to a witness who has become blind to refresh his memory.[37]

For cases in which the delay in making the document was held to be too long.[38]

---

29. Abdul Salim v. Emperor, ILR (1921) 49 Cal 573.
30. Per WALLIS J., in Mylapore Kirishnasami v. Emperor, ILR (1909) 32 Mad 384, 395.
31. Public Prosecutor v. Venkatarama Naidu, ILR (1944) Mad 113 : AIR 1943 Mad 542.
32. Omprakash v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Lah 867; Emperor v. Balaram Das, AIR 1922 Cal 382.
33. Lakshminarayan v. Returning Officer, AIR 1974 SC 66, 80.
34. Kantiprasad v Purushotham Das. AIR 1969 SC 851 approving Public Prosecutor v. Venkatarama Naidu, AIR 1943 Mad 542.
35. Rambert v. Cohen, (1802) 4 Esp 213 (receipt which witness saw given money was paid); Burrough v. Martin, (1809) 2 Camp 112 (log book examined by witness from time to time shortly after events in it were recorded). See also Anderson v. Whalley, (1852) 3 C&K 54; Burton v. Plummer, (1834) 2 A&E 341 (entries copies daily from waste book to ledger and checked by the witness); Lord Bolton v. Tomlin, (1836) 5 A&E 856 (document assented to in witness's presence); Smith v. Morgan, (1839) 2 Mood & R 257 (deposition signed by witness after examination by bankruptcy commissioner). following Vaughan v. Martin, (1796) 1 Esp 439. See also Wood v. Cooper, (1845) 1 C&K 645; R v. Mullins, (1848) 32 Cox 526 (reports dictated by witness and afterwards read over and signed by him); Dyer v. Best, (1866) LR 1 Exch 152 (witness who had read in newspaper shortly afterwards of event at which he had been present allowed to refresh his memory from newspaper as to date of event); Niscox v. Batchelor, (1867) 15 LT 543; R v. Langton, (1877) 2 QBD 296 (time sheet used every week by witness in paying wages); R v Dexter, (1899) 19 Cox CC 360 (transcript of shorthand note made by clerk and afterwards read over to witness); R v. Bass, (1953) 1 QB 680 : (1953) 1 All ER 1964, CCA (police notes of interview made after interview); R. v. Mills, (1962) 3 All ER 298, (1962) 1 WLR 1152, CCA (notes made by police officer from tape recording of conversation which the officer heard); and B v. B., (1962) Times, 29th May.
36. Jacob v. Lindsay, (1801) 1 East 460 (unstamped receipt); Catt v. Howard, (1820) 3 Stark 3; Maugham v. Hubbard, (1828) 8 B&C 14; Lord Bolton v. Tomlin, (1836) 5 A&E 856 (invalid lease); Birchall v. Bullough, (1896) 1 QB 325 (unstamped document).
37. Catt v. Howard, (1820) 3 Stark 3. It is uncertain whether this would be so if the document is not proved to have been made or checked by the witness while the facts were fresh in his memory.
38. See Anon (1753) 3 Term Rep 752; Doe d Church and Phillips v. Perkins, (1790) 3 Term Rep 749 at 752; Jones v. Stroud, (1825) 2 C&P 196 (six months too long); Steinkeller v. Newton, (1838) 9 C&P 313.

2. DISTINCTION BETWEEN SECTION 159 AND 160

It was held the M.P. High Court that the witness refreshes his memory by looking into the document under Section 159 and gives evidence in the ordinary way; under Section 160 the memory of the witness is not refreshed with the help of the document, but the document itself could be tendered and the witness testifies to the facts mentioned therein if he has no specific recollection of facts and if he is sure that the facts were correctly recorded in the document. Regarding the notes of speech taken by witness at the meeting, if he admits that the notes contain his impression of the speech delivered the notes are inadmissible to prove the words used and cannot be used as such.[39]

Where a witness merely refreshed his memory by looking into a certified copy of a document, and spoke to the various details of the dates etc., such procedure was not hit by Section 159. If that document was insisted to be tendered in evidence then the conditions of Section 160 have to be complied with, then only that document can acquire some evidentiary value.[40]

See also commentary under Section 159.

3. COPY

Whether the expression "a witness may also testify to facts mentioned in any such document as is mentioned in Section 159" is wide enough to permit the witness to depose to a fact by referring to a copy of the original, is a question open to some argument.

In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE 15th Ed. (2000), Para 11-47, Pages 269-270 it is observed: "As to the use of copies of the original writing, the result of the cases seems to be as follows :

(a) Where the copy was made or verified by the witness while the facts were fresh in his recollection, it may be used, on the footing of a duplicate or a quasi-original. Thus a sale was allowed to be proved by a clerk who refreshed his memory from a ledger, copied under his supervision from a waste-book kept by himself[41]; and a surveyor has been allowed to refer to a printed copy of a written report made by him to his employers, which report was substantially but not literally transcribed from rough notes taken by him at the time.[42] A police officer was allowed in a trial in 1975 to refer to a statement made for committal proceedings from detailed notes kept during observations in 1972; the defendant had absconded and the police officer's notebook had been lost.[43]

(b) Where the original is in existence, and the witness has no recollection of the facts otherwise than from it, a copy may not be used, and the original must be used.[44]

(c) Where the original has been lost or destroyed, a copy proved to be correct either by the witness or some third person may be used. Thus a journalist has been allowed to refresh his memory from a copy of the paper 14 years old, although he had no recollection of the facts, proof being given by the editor that the manuscript was lost, and that the paper as a copy of it and proof being given by the witness, that he had no doubt the facts stated therein were true.[45]

---

39. Manmohan Singh v. Banwarilal, AIR 1964 MP 137 relying on Jagan Nath v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Lah 7; Sodh Pindi Das v. Emperor, AIR 1938 Lah 629; Mylapore Krishnasami v. Emperor, AIR 32 Mad 384.
40. Ashwini Kumar v. Union Territory of Tripura, 1969 Tri 26.
41. Burton v. Plummer, (1834) 2 A & E 341.
42. Horne v. MacKenzie, (1839) 6 C & F 628; contra, Murray v. Mahon, (1884) 18 Ir TLR 8.
43. R. v. Cheng, (1976) 63 Cr App R 20 CA. In Att.-Gen.'s Reference No. 3 of 1979, (1979) 69 Cr App R 411, it was held that a police officer who took jottings during the course of an interview and within a short time made a full note in his notebook incorporating and expanding the jottings should have been permitted to refresh his memory from the notebook. Such a course may fall foul of the provisions of Code of Practice C under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984: R. v. Chisnell, (1992) Crim LR 507 (where the Court of Appeal upheld the exercise of discretion to permit the use of a statement made from notes which had been lost).
44. Doe v. Perkins, (1790) 3 TR 749; Tanner v. Taylor, (1756) 3 TR 754; R. v. St. Martin's, (1834) 2 A & E 210; R. v. Harvey, (1869) 11 Cox 546.
45. Topham v. McGregor, (1844) 1 C & K 320; Burton v. Plummer, ante, per PATTESON J.; Talbot v. Cusack, (1864) 1 Ir CLR 213. Contra, Jones v. Stroud, (1825) 2 C & P 196.

(d) Where the copy is either not proved to be correct,[46] or consists of an imperfect extract made by the witness,[47] or has been revised and transcribed with the help of the solicitor to the case,[48] it cannot be used to refresh memory, whether the original is in existence or not."

Under Section 159 reference to a copy is permissible only with the permission of the Court. Section 160 says nothing as to such permission; but since Section 160 refers to Section 159, it follows such permission is required to enable the witness to refer to the copy.

Right of adverse party as to writing used to refresh memory.

S. 161. Any writing referred to under the provisions of the two last preceding sections must be produced and shown to the adverse party if he requires it; such party may, if he pleases, cross-examine the witness thereupon.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that, whenever a witness is testifying to the documents or any writing, according to the provisions of Section 159 and 160, if the opposite party requires the document, it must be produced for the inspection of the opposite party; this is a right given to the opposite party under this section; if the opposite party wants to cross-examine the witness with reference to those documents, he can do so.

2. RIGHT TO INSPECTION AND CROSS-EXAMINATION BY OPPOSITE PARTY

FIELD. J., observed: "The opposite party may look at the writing to see what kind of writing it is, in order to check the use of improper documents; but I doubt whether he is entitled, except for this particular purpose, to question the witness as to other and independent matters contained in the same series of writings."[49] It was further held that the opposite party had a right to look into any particular writing either before or at the moment when the witness uses it for refreshing his memory, in order to answer a particular question; but if the opposite party neglects to exercise that right, he cannot continue to retain it through out the whole examination of the witness.

It was held that sometimes an inspection of the documents may be necessary to ascertain its true character; it is a check against the use of improper document, when a document is once put into the hands of the opponent, it is hardly possible to devise a method by which his vision may be restricted or confined to those portions which were referred to by the witness for the purpose of refreshing his memory.[50] In the case of police diaries, which are privileged documents, the accused is entitled to see that portion only which was referred to for refreshing the memory and no more.[51] The accused would not have a right to call for such diaries or use them, unless they are used by Police Officer to refresh his memory or the court uses them for contradicting such Police Officer.[52]

Where a defence witness uses a private notebok for refreshing his memory and deposing, the prosecution can insist on the production of that document for using it in cross-examination.[53]

In all cases where documents are used to refresh the memory of a witness, it is usual and reasonable—and if the witness has no independent recollection of the fact, it is necessary—that they should be produced at the trial, and that the opposite counsel should have an opportunity of inspecting them, that, on cross or re-examination, he may have the benefit of the witness's refreshing his memory by every part. Neither is the adverse party bound to put in the document as part of his evidence, merely because he has looked at it, or examined the witness respecting such entries as have been previously

---

46. Alcock v. Royal Exchange Assurance, (1849) 13 QB 292; Talbot v. Cusack, (1864) 17 Ir CLR 213.
47. Doe v. Perkins, (1790) 3 TR 749, explained by PATTESON J. in R. v. St Martin's, (1834) 2 A & E 210.
48. Anon., cited by Lord KENYON in Doe v. Perkins, (1790) 3 TR 749.
49. In re Jhuboo Mahton, ILR (1882) 8 Cal 739.
50. R. v. Mannu, ILR 19 All 890 (FB).
51. Hafiz Mohammad Sani v. Emperor, AIR 1931 Pat 150; Subhash Chandra v. Union of India, 1988 Crl LJ 1077.
52. Gurcharan Singh v. State, ILR (1984) 2 Del 627 : 1985 Cr LJ (NOC) 56 (Del).
53. Republic of India v. G.A.N. Rajan, AIR 1967 Ori 115; See also, Hardy's trial, 24 How ST 824.

referred, to, but, if he goes further than this, and asks questions about other parts of the memorandum, seems that he thereby makes it his own evidence.[54]

In HALSBURY 4th Edn., Vol. 17, Para 275, Page 192 it is stated: "Production of the document at th trial:— Where a witness uses a document in the witness box to refresh his memory, the document ma be seen by the opposing party[55]. If only part of the document is used, then all of the document which relevant to the facts in issue must be made available to the other party.[56] Thus, documents should not b fastened in such a way that other parts, besides those referred to by the witness, cannot be read.[57]

Where a witness has used a document to refresh his memory before going into the witness box. should be produced if he has no independent recollection of the facts, and it is customary, though n necessary, to produce it in all cases in order to make it available to the other party.[58] However, it is n customary to produce proof of evidence which a witness has made on a previous occasion and fro which he refreshes his memory before going into the witness box.

The other party may not see the document at all where the witness is unable to refresh his memo even with its assistance, or where it is used only for the purpose of enabling a witness to identi handwriting[59], except for the purposes of examination as to the handwriting.[60]

Production of documents.

S. 162. A witness summoned to produce a document shall, it is in his possession or power, bring it to Cour notwithstanding any objection which there may be to it production or to its admissibility. The validity of any such objection shall b decided on by the Court.

The Court, if it sees fit, may inspect the document, unless it refers to matters c State, or take other evidence to enable it to determine on its admissibility.

Translation of documents.

If for such purpose it is necessary to cause any document t be translated, the Court may, if it thinks fit, direct translator t keep the contents secret, unless the document is to be given i evidence: and, if the interpreter disobeys such direction, he shall be held to hav committed an offence under Section 166 of the Indian Penal Code (XLV of 1860).

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope ... 1338
2. Whether the court has right to inspect the document when privilege is claimed on ground of public interest... 1340
3. Admissibility ... 134
4. Writ of certiorari and privilege ... 134
5. Instances of privileged and not privileged documents ... 134

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section deals with the production of documents when summoned by a court. It is obligatory o the part of the person to produce when summoned by the court, the document which is in his possessio and power notwithstanding any objection he may have with regard to its production or admissibility the word "shall" is used in the section. While producing the documents he can raise his objection for

---

54. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 1413, p. 897.
55. See Senat v. Senat, (1965) P, 172, (1965) 2 All ER 505.
56. Loyd v. Freshfield and Kaye, (1826) 2 C&P 325.
57. Betts v. Betts and Broadrick, (1917) 33 TLR 200.
58. Sinclair v. Stevenson, (1824) 1 C&P 582; Howard v. Canfield, (1836) 5 Dowl 417; Deputy v. Truman, (1843 Y&C Ch Cas 341; Beech v. Jones, (1848) 5 CB 696.
59. Sinclair v. Stevenson, (1824) 1 C&P 582; Russell v. Rider, (1834) 6 C&P 416.
60. Holland v. Reeves, (1835) 7 C&P 36; R v. Duncombe, (1838) 8 C&P 369; Peck v. Peck, (1870) 21 LT 670.

production or admissibility. When an objection is raised, the court shall decide about the validity of the objection.

The second paragraph of the section provides that when a document, in respect of which an objection to production or admissibility is raised, refers to matters of State, the court has no power to inspect the document. With regard to other documents in respect of which privilege is claimed, the Court, if it thinks fit, may inspect the documents.

The principle underlying in this section is similar to the rule of English law, namely when a witness is served with a summons to produce documents (Subpoena Duces Tecum), he is bound to attend the court with the document required to be produced. If he is having any objection, the court shall decide the validity of such objection.[61] The jurisdiction of the court to decide the validity of the objections covers not only the objections raised under Section 123 and 124, but also other objections.[62] An objection to the production or admissibility of evidence specified in Section 162 of the Evidence Act, relates to all claims of privilege provided by the relevant sections of Chapter IX of part III of the Act. Section 123 is only one of such privileges, so the jurisdiction is given to the court to decide the validity not only of the objection raised under Section 123 but of all other objections as well.[63]

When a witness is summoned to produce a document which is in his possession or power, he must bring it to court, notwithstanding any objection that he may have with regard to its production or admissibility. Under the provisions of O. XVI, R. 6 of the Civil Procedure Code, a person may be summoned to produce a document without being summoned to give evidence. He may either attend the court personally or may depute another to produce it.

In neither case is he liable to be cross-examined (S. 139). If the document be in his possession or power, he is bound under this section, to bring the document with him to Court notwithstanding any objection he may have to its production or admissibility. Having brought it to court, he is entitled to raise his objection to its production or admissibility. The Court has then to decide the validity of any such objection. For the purpose of deciding on the validity of the reason that may be offered for withholding them, the court may receive evidence,[64] and in so doing it is entitled to inspect the document. If the document in question happens to be in a language not known to the Presiding Officer, he may get it translated, and call upon the translator to keep its contents secret (vide paragraph 3).

The court has always had the power to inquire into the objections raised for the disclosure of the documents and then decide whether or not it should call for the documents.[65]

It was at one time held that the jurisdiction of the Court is confined to the narrow limits provided by the second clause of Section 162 namely, it is open to court to take evidence to decide the character of the documents but it cannot inspect and peruse the document.[66]

The statement that the court cannot inspect and peruse the document is no longer good law in view of the decision in AIR 1982 SC 149. (See discussion infra under the head 'whether the court has right to inspect the document when privilege is claimed in public interest.)

A person summoned under Section 162, Evidence Act to produce a document is bound to bring it to the court or to send it through another, and a claim for privilege in respect of it can be made at the time of production of the document which will be determined by the court under Section 162, Evidence Act.[67]

Ordinarily a document is bound to be produced when summoned by the Court, unless it relates to the affairs of the State. It is the supreme duty of the court to protect the privilege when it exists, but in order to determine the validity of the objection, the court has power to inspect in the appropriate cases.[68]

---

61. Orient Papers Mills v. Union of India, AIR 1979 Cal 114.
62. Orient Papers Mills v. Union of India, AIR 1979 Cal 114.
63. Orient Papers Mills v. Union of India, AIR 1979 Cal 114.
64. Venkatachella Chettiar v. Sampathu Chettiar, ILR (1908) 32 Mad 62, 64.
65. Robinson v. State of South Australia, AIR 1932 PC 254; Conway v. Rimmer, (1968) 1 All ER 874 (HC); State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukhdev Singh, AIR 1961 SC 493; S.P. Gupta v. Union of India, AIR 1982 SC 149.
66. State of A.P. v. Ramu Naidu, (1964) 2 An LT 251.
67. In Re Mantu Bhai Mehta, AIR 1945 Bom 122; Bhal Chandra v. Chanbasappa, AIR 1939 Bom 237; Haravana Swamy v. State, AIR 1953 Mad 228; Public Prosecutor v. M.S. Menoki, AIR 1939 Mad 914; Gangaram v. Habibulla, ILR 58 All 364; Chandu Bhai v. State, AIR 1962 Guj 290.
68. Iqbal Ahmad v. State, AIR 1954 Bhopal 9; Tilak v. State, AIR 1959 All 543.

2. WHETHER THE COURT HAS RIGHT TO INSPECT THE DOCUMENT WHEN PRIVILEGE IS CLAIMED ON GROUND OF PUBLIC INTEREST

In regard to the question whether the court can inspect the document there is divergence of opinion

According to the first view where an officer is summoned to produce an official document he bound to produce it in court. The officer claiming privilege for a document, that he is summoned produce, must appear and produce the document in court and must satisfy the court that his claim is we founded. It is for the court to decide whether the claim should be allowed or not. But once the co holds that the document is one with regard to which privilege can be claimed, in other words, that it is communication made to a public officer in official confidence or that it is an unpublished official recc relating to affairs of State which it would not be in the public interest to disclose, the question whetl privilege should be claimed for it or not, is entirely within the discretion of the officer-in-charge of t document, The court for the purpose of deciding whether the claim to previlege is well-founded or not not entitled to look at the document. It must decide the question of the validity of the objection witho looking at the document.[69]

The view was reiterated in State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukh Deo Singh.[70] It was held that where privilege is claimed at the Stage of inspection and the Court is required to adjudicate upon its validity t relevant provisions of the Evidence Act under which the privilege is claimed, as well as the provisions Section 162 which deal with the manner in which the said privilege has to be considered are equa applicable; if the court is precluded from inspecting the privileged document under the second clause Section 162, the said prohibition would apply as much to a privilege claimed by the State through witness at the trial as to a privilege similarly claimed by it at the stage of inspection. The provisions Order 11, Rule 19(2), C.P.C. must therefore, be read subject to Section 162 of the Evidence Act.

The second view is that the court is competent to hold a preliminary enquiry and determine t validity of the objection to the production and this necessarily involves an enquiry into the question as whether the document relates to the affairs of the State.[71] It is the duty of the court to protect t privilege when it exists, but in order to determine the validity of the objection, the court has got t power to inspect the document and then decide.[72]

It was held by the Supreme Court that the court has residual power to look into the document a decide whether the disclosure of the documents is in the interest of the public, and that the statement the head of the department that the disclosure would injure public interest is not final.[73] The House Lords held that the documents which were opposed from disclosure, should be produced for inspecti as it would not be possible to decide whether the balance of public interest lay for or against disclosure

3. ADMISSIBILITY

The word "Admissibility" involves all sorts of objections to production relevancy, and admissibil or even claiming any privilege in respect of the document.[75]

Where a copy of a document in respect of which privilege is claimed by the defendant, is filed the plaintiff, the court, without deciding the claim of privilege cannot call upon the defendant to admit deny the same.[76]

---

69. In Re Mantu Bhai Mehata, (1943) 46 Bom LR 802: Dinabai Petti v. Dominion of India, (1950) 53 Bom LR 229.
70. AIR 1961 SC 493.
71. Amarchand v. Union of India, AIR 1964 SC 1658: State of A P v. Ramu Naidu, (1962) 2 An LT 251: State Maharashtra v. O V Pawer, 1986 Cr LJ 1467 (Bom)(DB): Subba Rao v. Brahmananda Reddy, AIR 1967 AP 1 Choudary v. Chandkakati, 1060 Assam 210: State of U P. v. Raj Naram, AIR 1975 SC 865: S.P. Gupta v. Unio India, AIR 1982 SC 149 X4 (X5) see commentary 123 and 124 of this Act.
72. Om Prakasash Gupta v. State, ILR (1967) 1 All 239.
73. S.P. Gupta v. State, AIR 1982 SC 149, para 1184 overruling State of Punjab v. Sodhi Sukh Deo Singh, AIR 1961 493.
74. Burmah Oil Co. v. Bank of England, 1980 AC 1090. See also Lonrho Ltd v. Shell Petroleum Co. Ltd., (1980) 1 W 627.
75. Mehta v. Nanevathi, (1983) 2 Bom Court R 45.
76. Union of India v. Rajkumar Gujral, AIR 1967 Punj 387.

When the question of the conduct of a public servant is in issue, it was held that privilege cannot be claimed by the State to screen such conduct from judicial scrutiny.[77]

4. WRIT OF CERTIORARI AND PRIVILEGE

In an application for certiorari under Art. 226 of the Constitution, when notice to produce the record was issued by the Court, the respondent without producing records filed a counter affidavit and produced some document for evidence on behalf of the State. It was held that the State should have produced the records forming the subject-matter of the writ of certiorari; the Government cannot claim absolute privilege and withhold the production.[78]

When the court directs the production of a document subject to any objection, it might be taken that such a direction will not be interfered with in revision by the High Court.

In Criminal cases, the protection under Section 126 afforded to communications by a client to lawyers cannot be availed of against an order to produce the document, the document must be produced, and then under this section it will be for the court, after inspection of the document, if it deems fit, to consider and decide any objections regarding its production or admissibility.[79]

5. INSTANCES OF PRIVILEGED AND NOT PRIVILEGED DOCUMENTS

When a clerk of the sales tax department was summoned to produce certain documents, the Sales Tax Officer claimed privilege. It was held that, in view of the provisions of Section 25(1) of the Sales Tax Act, the Officer was justified in claiming the privilege.[80]

In regard to the transcript of public speeches, it was held that the fact, that the record was made by a Police Officer, did not render it privileged documents.[81] Statements made and documents produced by assessees before the Income-tax Officer for the purpose of showing the income of such assessees do not refer to matters of State.[82] Report of a conciliator, regarding his findings in an industrial dispute, was held not a privileged document or confidential document.[83]

This section is applicable to both official and private documents.[84]

Giving, as evidence, of document called for and produced on notice.

S. 163. When a party calls for a document which he has given the other party notice to produce, and such document is produced and inspected by the party calling for its production, he is bound to give it as evidence if the party producing it requires him to do so.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

When a party issues notice to the other party to produce any document, the other party has to produce the same if the document is in his possession or power. When it is produced by the opposite party and it is inspected by the party calling for its production, he is bound to give it as evidence if the opposite party requires him to do so.[85]

---

77. Niranjan Das Sehgal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1968 Punj 255.
78. P. Joseph John v. State, AIR 1953 Tra/Co 363 (FB); Ramanana v. State of A.P., AIR 1971 AP 196.
79. Gangaram v. Habib Ullah, (1935) 58 All 364.
80. Pratap v. State, (1967) 69 Punj LR 222.
81. Rama Srinivasan v. Shanmugan.
82. Venkata Chella Chettiar v. Sampathu Chettiar, ILR (1908) 32 Mad 62; Jadobram Dey v. Bulloram Dey, ILR (1899) 26 Cal 281.
83. Haralal Sadasheorao Bande v. State Industrial Court, Nagpur, AIR 1967 Bom. 174.
84. In Re Mantu Bhai Mehta, AIR 1945 Bom. 122; Joseph John v. State, AIR 1953 Tra/Co. 363 (FB); Balchandra Dattatraya v. Chanbasappa Mallappa, AIR 1939 Bom 237.
85. Union of India v. Firm Vishudh Ghee Vyapar Mandal, AIR 1953 All 689; Mahomed v. Abdul, (1903) 5 Bom LR 380.

TAYLOR ON EVIDENECE (12th Ed. Section 1817, p. 1126) observes: "The production of papers, upo notice does not make them evidence in the cause unless the party calling for them inspects them, so as become acquainted with their contents; in which case he is obliged to use them as his evidence, at least they be in any way material to the issue. The reason for this rule is, that it would give an unconscionab advantage to a party to enable him to pry into the affairs of his adversary, without at the same tin subjecting him to the risk of making whatever he inspects evidence for both parties."

This section is applicatble, and the party is bound to give the opponents the document as evidence the case, if three conditions are fulfilled. The first condition is that the document should be required b the party to be produced in evidence. The second condition is that it should be inspected by the par who had given the notice. The third condition is that the party producing the document should require th party calling for it to put in evidence. Where only the first of these conditions has been satisfied, but th others have not been satisfied, the document cannot be treated as evidence of the party.[86] When the thr conditions are fulfilled, no further proof is necessary before its admission in evidence.[87]

However, it was held that this section does not render proof of the document which is to b exhibited, unnecessary or alter the normal incidence of the burden of proof as contained in other sectio of the document.[88]

The Privy Council dealt with a case where the defendant wanted to prove her defence from th account books of the plaintiff and so gave notice for production of the account books. After inspectio only certain extracts were taken from those books as defence evidence leaving the rest. The Priv Council observed: "It would be a monstrous thing if the party sued were allowed to call for the accoun of the plaintiff, and extract from them just such items as prove the matters of defence on her part an were not to allow those items which make in favour of the plaintiff. The High Court held that the boo must be admitted in toto. Their Lordships think that the High Court was entirely right."[89] Relying on th last observation of the Privy Council, it has been held that when the party inspects the documents, th entire document should be taken in evidence.[90] Records of statements made not on oath in the course a departmental inquiry by Government, are not public documents. But, when the defence had called f their production and they were, thereupon, produced and inspected and used for the cross-examination the prosecution witnesses, it was held that the Crown could insist on the entire statements being put under this section.[91]

It was held that in the Presidency Town of Calcutta, the accused has no right for the copies of th statements of witnesses made to police during the investigation, which have been reduced to writin But, the accused can call for the document under Section 163 which is subject to the remainin provisions of the Evidence Act. Therefore, only such portion of the record of the previous statement can be used under Section 154 or 157 of the Evidene Act will be relevant.[92]

The party inspecting the document is bound to give it as evidence only if the party producing th same requires him to do so.[93]

Objection to the mode of proof must be taken before the document is exhibited and not for the fi time in the appellate court.[94]

The High Court of Madras raised, but did not decide, the question whether S. 163 was applicable documents produced under the discovery procedure enacted in this rule or whether it only applied documents produced after the trial had begun.[95] But the Allahabad High Court has held that the notice

---

86. Liladhar Ratanlal v. Holkarmal Sohanlal, AIR 1959 Bom 528.
87. Govt. of Bengal v. Shanthi Ram Mondal, 1930 Cal 370; Kishan Ghule v. Puransa, AIR 1928 Nag 119.
88. Rajgopala Iyengar v. Ramanuja Iyengar, 1923 Mad WN 292 : AIR 1923 Mad 607.
89. Rajeshwari Kuar v. Rai Bal Krishan, ILR 9 All 713 PC.
90. Mahammad Khan v. Abdul Rehman, (1903) 5 Bom LR 380; Kisan Ghule v. Puransa, AIR 1928 Nag 119; Govt Bengal v. Shanti Ram Mandal, AIR 1930 Cal 370; Emperor v. Makhan Lal, AIR 1940 Cal 167.
91. Government of Bengal v. Shantiram Mandal, ILR (1930) 58 Cal 96 : AIR 1930 Cal 370.
92. Natabar Jana v. State, AIR 1955 Cal 138.
93. Shri Narain v. Chunnilal, AIR 1957 Raj 159; Badri Prasad v. Shantilal Seth, AIR 1941 Lah 228; Union of India Firm Vishudh Ghee Vyapar Mandal, AIR 1953 All 689; Calvert v. Flower, (1836) 7 C&P 380; Stroud v. Stro (1963) 1 WLR 1080.
94. State of Maharashtra v. Bankat Lal Murlidhar Bhatt, ILR 1977 Bom 312.
95. Rajgopal Iyengar v. Ramanuja Ayengar, AIR 1923 Mad 607.

produce documents mentioned in Section 163 of the Evidence Act clearly referred to a notice to produce as mentioned in Order XI, which may be given by a party privately to the other party concerned, and that the applicability of Section 163 of the Evidence Act was not affected by the mere fact that due to the non-production by the other party, an order to produce the documents had to be passed by the Court.[1]

This section is applicable to both Civil and Criminal proceedings.[2]

In criminal matters, production of a document at the instance of one party or the other cannot bind the party that got it on the record, unless it is proved in accordance with the provisions of law. Mere production of a document, therefore, is not sufficient to treat it as evidence unless it is duly proved.[3]

Using, as evidence of document production of which was refused on notice.

S. 164. When a party refuses to produce a document which he has notice to produce, he cannot afterwards use the document as evidence without the consent of the other party or the order of the Court.

ILLUSTRATION

A sues B on an agreement and gives B notice to produce it. At the trial A calls for the document and B refuses to produce it. A gives secondary Evidence of its contents. B seeks to produce the document itself to contradict the secondary evidence given by A, or in order to show that the agreement is not stamped. He cannot do so.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

If a party having a document in his possession refuses to produce it when called upon at the hearing to do so, he is not at liberty afterwards to give the document in evidence for any purpose without (1) the consent of the other party, or (2) the order of the court. This is meant as a penalty for unfair tactics. The Civil Procedure Code, O. XI, R. 15, makes a similar provision.

The illustration under this section makes clear the principle and the object of the section.

"The party who refused to produce the writing could not afterwards be at liberty to give it in evidence.[4]

WIGMORE ON EVIDENCE (Section 1210, Vol. 3, p. 381) observes: "This section is in one sense a proper penalty for unfair tactics; but the original refusal may also be regarded as a judicial admission, in advance, of the correctness of the first party's evidence to this extent."

This section does not contemplate the production of a document for inspection. It contemplates that one party should call upon another in Court to produce a document of which the first party has given the other notice to produce. It does not give him any right, at any stage of the case, to call upon his opponent to produce the document and, after inspecting it, use it or not as he sees fit. It is doubtful if this section applies to criminal proceedings.[5]

If a party has a document in his possession he will not be permitted to prove its contents in the cross-examination of the witness.[6]

Where a landlord could not produce the rent deed, when ordered to do so, on the ground that it was not traceable but, later, on finding it, applied for its admission for evidence, it was held that the rent deed could not be disallowed by the Rent Controller on a technical ground; that, in order to resolve the controversy between the parties, and to do full justice the Rent Controller should have allowed the

---

1. Union of India v. Firm Vishudh Ghee Vyapar Mandal, AIR 1953 All 689.
2. Govt. of Bengal v. Santhi Ram Mandal, AIR 1930 Cal 370; R. v. Makhan, AIR 1940 Cal 167.
3. State of Rajasthan v. Babulal, AIR 1965 Raj 90.
4. Doe v. Hodgson, (1840) 12 A&E 135.
5. Shyam Das Kapur v. Emperor, ILR (1932 60 Cal 341 : AIR 1933 Cal 65.
6. Sivasubramania v. Theerthapathi, AIR 1933 Mad 451.

production of the rent deed, and the other side could have been compensated by ordering payment cost.[7]

2. SECTIONS 164 AND 89 OF EVIDENCE ACT

Section 89 of this Act states that the court shall presume that every document, called for, and produced after notice to produce, was attested, stamped, and executed in the manner required by la The presumption under Section 89 is based on the principle that no one shall be allowed to ta advantage of his own wrong.

Once a presumption is drawn under Section 89, it cannot be easily rebutted by the production of t document at a later stage. Section 164 provides that the party cannot use that document as eviden without the consent of the other party or the order of the court.[8]

This section has been held not to apply to criminal cases;[9] but the correctness of this view doubtful.[10]

Judge's power to put questions or order production.

S. 165. The Judge may, in order to discover or to obta proper proof of relevant facts, ask any question he pleases, any form, at any time, of any witness, or of the parties abo any fact relevant or irrelevant; and may order the productio of any document or thing; and neither the parties nor their agents shall be entitl to make any objection to any such question or order, nor, without the leave of t Court, to cross-examine any witness upon any answer given in reply to any su question:

Provided that the judgment must be based upon facts declared by this Act to relevant, and duly proved:

Provided also that this section shall not authorize any Judge to compel a witness to answer any question, or to produce any document which such witne would be entitled to refuse to answer or produce under Sections 121 to 131, bo inclusive, if the question were asked or the document were called for by t adverse party; nor shall the Judge ask any question which it would be improp for any other person to ask under Section 148 or 149; nor shall he dispense wi primary evidence of any document, except in the cases hereinbefore excepted.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1344
2. Power of judge to call witness ... 1346
3. Ask any question in any form ... 1347
4. About any fact relevant or irrelevant ... 1348
5. At any time ... 1348
6. Of any witness ... 1349
7. May order the production of any document or thing ... 1350
8. Parties not entitled to cross-examine a court witness without leave of the court ... 1
9. Judgement must be based on relevant and proved facts [Proviso-I] ... 1
10. Witness shall not be compelled to answer any question or to produce any document in certain cases [Proviso-II] ... 1

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section is intended to arm the Judge with the most extensive power possible for the purpose getting at the truth. The effect of this section is that in order to get to the bottom of the matter before

---

7. (1971) 1 Rent LR 58 (Punj).
8. Kashibai Mastand v. Vinayaka Ganesh, AIR 1956 Bom 65.
9. Sham Das Kapur v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Cal 65.
10. Emperor v. Makhan Lal, AIR 1940 Cal 167.

the Court will be able to look at and enquire into every fact whatever.[11] Each party in a case is interested in setting up his own case and demolishing the one set up by his adversary. There is danger in some cases that the whole truth may not come out before the Court. The Judge, in order to discover, or to obtain proper proof of relevant facts, may exercise very wide powers indeed; but they all pivot upon the ascertainment of relevant facts. He may approach the case from any point of view, and is not tied down to the ruts marked out by the parties. He can ask (1) any question he pleases, (2) in any form, (3) at any time, (4) of any witness, (5) or of the parties, (6) about any fact relevant or irrelevant. No party is entitled to object to any such question or order, or to cross-examine the witness without the leave of the Court. But out of the evidence so brought out, the Judge can only use that which is relevant and duly proved. There are three exceptions to the very wide powers given to the Judge. The witness cannot be compelled to answer (1) any question or to produce any document contrary to Ss. 121 to 131; or (2) any question contrary to S. 148 or 149; and (3) the Judge shall not dispense with primary evidence of any document except as provided before.

In civil as well as in criminal proceedings the Legislature has vested ample powers in the courts to exercise this power (Civil Procedure Code, O. X, Rr. 2, 4; O. XVI, R. 14; S. 311, Criminal Procedure Code).

SIR JAMES STEPHEN, while presenting the report of the Select Committee, at the time of passing of this enactment (Indian Evidence Act) observed; "It is absolutely necessary that the judge should not only hear what is put before him by others, but that he should ascertain by his own inquiries how the facts actually stand. In order to do this, it will frequently be necessary for him to go into matters which are not themselves relevant to the matters in issue, but may lead to something that is, and it is in order to arm judges with express authority to do this that Section 165, which has been so much objected to, has been framed."

In his introduction to the Evidence Act (p. 162, 163) SIR JAMES STEPHEN stated "A judge or Magistrate in India frequently has to perform duties which in England would be performed by Police Officers or attorneys. He has to sift out the truth for himself as well as he can, and with little assistance of a professional kind. Section 165 is intended to arm the judge with the most extensive power possible for the purpose of getting at the truth. The effect of this section is that, in order to get to the bottom of the matter before the court, he will be able to look at and enquire into every fact whatever.

BEST ON EVIDENCE (8th Ed. Section 86 p. 70) observed: "The Judge has a certain latitude allowed him with respect to the rules of forensic proof. He may ask any question in any form, and at any stage of the cause and to a certain extent even allow parties or their advocates to do so. This, however does not mean that he can receive illegal evidence at pleasure; for if such be left to the jury, a new trial may be granted even though the evidence were extracted by questions put from the Bench, but it is a power necessary to prevent justice being defeated by technicality to secure indicative evidence, and in criminal cases to assist in fixing the amount of punishment, and it should be exercised with discretion.....Discretion is a science or understanding to discern between falsity and truth, between wrong and right, between shadow and substances, between equity and colourable glosses and pretences, and not to do according to their wills and private affections."

"In a great number of cases—probably, the vast numerical majority—the judge has to conduct the whole trial himself. In all cases he has to represent the interests of the public much more distinctly than he does in England. In many cases he has to get at the truth, or as near to it as he can, by the aid of collateral inquiries, which may incidentally tend to something relevant; and it is most unlikely that he should ever wish to push an inquiry needlessly, or to go into matters not really connected with it. We have accordingly thought it right to arm Judges with a general power to ask any questions, upon any facts of any witness, at any stage of the proceedings irrespective of the rules of evidence binding on the parties and their agents and we have inserted in the bill a distinct declaration that it is the duty of the Judge, especially in criminal cases not merely to listen to the evidence put before him, but to inquire to the utmost into the truth of the matter. We do not think, that the English theories, that the public have no interest in arriving at the truth and that even criminal proceedings ought to be regarded mainly in the light of private questions between the prosecutor and the prisoner, are at all suited to India, if indeed they are the result of any thing better than carelessness and apathy in England.

"In India, in an enormous mass of cases, it is absolutely necessary that the Judge should not only hear what is put before him by others, but that he should ascertain by his own inquiries how the facts

---

11. STEPHEN, 162; Ramachandra Reddy, 1957 Andhra 742.

actually stand. In order to do this, it will frequently be necessary for him to go into matters which are themselves relevant to the matter in issue, but may lead to something that is, and it is in order to Judges with express authority to do this that this has section has been framed.[12]

The relative inactivity of the Judge is a feature of English proceedings going back to the mi ages. Speaking of the medieval trial, Pollock and Maitland said that it often reminds one of a cri match; "The judges sit in court, not in order that they may discover the truth, but in order that they n answer the question, "How's that?"; this passive habit seems to grow upon them as time goes on. It indeed the original method of criminal trial in all European countries, being the regularisation of primitive come back, but only in England has it survivied essentially in its original form.[13]

2. POWER OF JUDGE TO CALL WITNESS

The trial Judge has the power to call a witness not called by either the prosecution or the defen without their consent, if he considers that that course is necessary in the interests of justice[14]

Where in a suit for declaration of title to property the defended, claiming himself to be the own applied for recalling the plaintiff whom he alleged to be a labourer working on his land and receiv charges for the same so as to prove the receipts issued by him (the plaintiff), rejection of his applicat was held to be illegal.[15]

This section, and Section 540 Cr.P.C. (old), which corresponds to Section 311 of Cr.P.C. of 19 empowers the judge to call any witness or to produce any document in the interest of justice. Section 5 (old) Cr.P.C. (now 311 Cr. P.C.) and Section 165 Evidence Act, confer a wide discretion on the court act, as the exigencies of justice required.[16]

The powers under Section 540, (old) Cr.P.C. though wide enough, must not be exercised to disadvantage of the accused, particularly after his defence is over.[17] It would be an improper exercise power of the court under Section 540, (old) Cr.P.C. to do so merely because the evidence on rec supported the case of the prosecution and it would not help the accused in any way. Unless there absolute necessity for doing justice in the case, the power should not be exercised to examine a person a court witness.[18]

The power under Section 540, (old) Cr.P.C. is to be exercised to arrive at a just decision, and it d not mean a decision in favour of the accused.[19]

A liberal interpretation has to be given in favour of the court's powers under this section, and th can be exercised at any time during the proceedings.[20]

The Supreme Court held that the ban imposed by Section 162, Cr.P.C. in regard to the previ statements of the witnesses made to the police during investigation, does not operate against the pow of the court under Section 165 of Evidence Act. The language of Section 162, Cr.P.C. though wide not explicit or specific enough to extend the prohibition to the use of the wide and special powers of court to question a witness, expressly and explicitly given by Section 165 of the Act, in order to sec the ends of justice. A narrow and restrictive construction of Section 162, Cr.P.C. to confine it to the of statements to the proceedings before the court would reconcile or harmonize the two provisions also serve the end of justice.[21]

---

12. Proceedings of the Legislative Council.
13. PER GLANWILLE WILLIAMS, quoted in Ibrahim Husen v. State, AIR 1969 Goa 68.
14. R. v. Liddle, (1928) 21 Cr. App Rep 3, CCA; R. v. McMohan, (1923) 24 Cr App Rep 95, CCA.
15. Satinder Singh v. Sukhdev, AIR 1999 HP 72 (para 8).
16. Jamatraj Kewalji v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 178, following Rex v. Harris, (1927) 2 KB 587; Go Raghunath v. B.A. Kakade, ILR 1975 Bom 829; State of Sikkim v. Permba Sherpa, 1981 Cr LJ 856 (Sikkim).
17. In re, K.V.R.S. Mani, AIR 1951 Mad 707; Shreelal Kajaria v. State, AIR (1964) Bom 165; In re V. Mahade (1964) 2 Mad LJ 587.
18. In re, K.K. Narayanan Namiar, AIR 1942 Mad 223.
19. Kesava Pillai v. Emperor, AIR (1929) Mad 837.
20. In re, Narayanan Nambiar, AIR 1942 Mad 223; State v. Shaikh Mohamad Abdulla, (1964) 2 Cr LJ 88 (J Ratnakar Das v State, AIR 1966 Ori 102; Ram Jeet v. State, AIR 1958 All 439.
21. Raghunandan v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 463.

Although a statement made by an accused person to a Police Officer on which the defence wished to rely is shut out by Section 162, Criminal Procedure Code a court having a case diary in its possession, at the request of the defending counsel, would be justified in putting a question to a Police Officer to elicit what the accused told him purely in the interest of the accused, within its wide powers under this section.[22] A Judge can himself look into previous statements of witnesses recorded in the police diary, even though the defence neither requested him to do so nor applied for copies of such statements and if the interests of justice demand, the Judge may himself under this section, put questions to witnesses to bring out discrepancies of a vital nature between such statements and the evidence of those witnesses in court.[23]

Under the Criminal Procedure Code, the accused has no right to get copies of the statements of witnesses made to police during investigation, which were reduced to writing and were entered in the police diary, but, the Magistrate can order the granting of such copies under the provisions of Section 145 read with Section 165 Evidence Act, without making the accused go through the formalities of Section 163 of the Evidence Act, i.e., issuing notice for production, provided the Magistrate feels that it should be granted in the interest of justice.[24]

Whenever all the facts necessary for a proper determination of the points in issue have not been elicited, inadvertently or otherwise by the Public Prosecutor or the defence counsel, it behoves the judge to exercise his, power under Section 165, and get elucidated what is left obscure or unintelligible.[25] The Court cannot cross-examine the prosecution witness beyond the extent of its powers under Section 165, as it would create, a reasonable apprehension that a fair and impartial trial may not be possible. The exercise of the power should be judicious.[26] When the accused is undefended, the only way in which the court may protect the accused in such a situation is to put necessary questions itself to the prosecution witness, on all matters requiring clarification, in exercise of its wide powers under Section 165.[27] It is not the province of the Court to examine the witnesses, unless the pleaders on either side have omitted to put some material question or questions, and the Court should, as a general rule, leave the witnesses to the pleaders to be dealt with as laid down in Section 138.[28]

The commentaries show clearly that the object of allowing the judge to ask irrelevant questions under this section is to obtain "indicative evidence" which may lead to the discovery of relevant evidence.[29]

The judges are not computers. In assessing the value to be attached to oral evidence, they are bound to call into aid their experience of life.[30]

A reference to this section is irrelevant in respect of judicial precedents and the binding nature of decisions of co-ordinate and superior authority.[31]

3. ASK ANY QUESTION IN ANY FORM

Under the Anglo-Saxon System of Law followed in this country, if the judge is of the opinion that the case has not been properly dealt with, he can put as many questions as he likes, relying on the provisions of Section 165 of the Evidence Act, in order to discover the truth; but, by and large, he should leave it to the parties to examine their witnesses.... The presiding judge has to be careful so as not to identify himself with any party.[32]

---

22. Molagan, (1953) Mad 284.
23. Emperor v. Lal Miya, ILR (1943) 1 Cal 543 : AIR 1943 Cal 521.
24. Natabar Jana v. State, AIR 1955 Cal 138; Sunil Kumar Datta v. State of W B., AIR 1963 Cal 431.
25. Damusetti Subbanna v. State of A P., 1976 Cr LJ 1242 AP; Mukta Kumar Ghosh v. State of W B., 1975 Cr LJ 838 (Cal). Subbanna v. State, (1975) 2 An WR 255.
26. State of Mysore v. Hanmantha, AIR 1966 Mys 231.
27. Sessions Judge Nellore v. Ramana Reddy, 1972 Cr LJ 1485 (AP).
28. Noor Bux Kazi v. R. ILR (1880) 6 Cal 279, 283.
29. Krishna Ayyar v. Balakrishna Iyyar, ILR (1933) 57 Mad 635.
30. Chaturbhuj Panda v. Collector, Raigarh, AIR 1969 SC 255.
31. Tribhuvan Das v. Ratilal Motilal Patel, AIR 1968 SC 372.
32. Ibrahim Husen v. State, AIR 1969 Gao 68; See also Mohinder Singh v. State, ILR (1970) 2 Del 854.

No doubt under Section 165 a court has got power to put any question it pleases in any form at an time to any of the witnesses or the parties about any fact relevant or irrelevant, but that power is to b exercised in order to discover or obtain proper proof of relevant facts.[33]

The Court while exercising powers under S. 165 of the Act should guard itself against causin prejudice to the defence or to the prosecution. But that is no reason to pre-empt the right of a party t adduce proper and relevant evidence which through any inadvertence one party would have missed o overlooked at an earlier stage.[34] It is the duty of prosecution to bring the contradiction on record b confronting the hostile witness with his previous statement made to the police and if the prosecution fai to do so, it is the duty of Court to put such questions as are necessary to ascertain the truth[35] but in th course of judgment, under Section 165 the Court cannot permit the prosecution to re-introduce evidenc to cover up obvious lacuna.[36] Section 165 confers vast and unrestricted powers on the trial Court to pu any question he pleases in any form at any time, to any witness or to the parties, about any fact, relevan or irrelevant, in order to discover relevant facts. The use of the word 'any' could only have been inspire by legislative intent to confer unbridled power on the trial Court to use the power whenever it deem necessary to elicit the truth. A trial judge is expected to actively participate in the trial. If a judge felt th a witness had committed an error or a slip, it is his duty to ascertain whether it was so, for to err is huma and the chances of erring may accelerate under stress of nervousness during cross-examination.[37] judge is expected to actively participate in the trial, elicit necessary materials from witnesses at th appropriate context which he feels necessary for reaching the correct conclusion, even during their cross examination and even when a witness in a bit of confusion.[38]

4. ABOUT ANY FACT RELEVANT OR IRRELEVANT

The Calcutta High Court observed that, while theoretically, the powers of the judge are limitless an unfettered, certain principles have to be recognised, which he must follow as to the manner in which h exercises the power. It need hardly be pointed out that he must not take sides, but he must not als "descend into the arena" and show the zeal of a combatant. If he does so, and questions witnesses in th spirit of beating them down or encouraging them to give an answer, his action may have an intimidatin or inflatory effect upon them, and their evidence may not be the evidence they would have given, if n so intimidated or encouraged..... The judge may always intervene, in the course of examination b counsel, to put a question in a clear form, or to have an obscrure answer clarified, or to prevent a witne being unfairly misled; but if he does more, and stops counsel again and again to put a long series of h own questions, he makes an effective examination or cross-examination impossible and diverts the tri from its natural course."[39]

The judge should exercise powers under Section 165 and put relevant questions for the purpose o ascertaining the truth. No duty is cast on the judge under Section 165 to put questions for the purpose o filling up the lacunae in the matter of examination and/or cross-examination of the witness. [40]

5. AT ANY TIME

In HALSBURY 4th Ed., Vol. 11, Para: 296, Page: 172 it is stated: "He should not call such a witne after the evidence for the defence is closed, except in a matter "arising ex improviso which no huma ingenuity could foresee.[41]

---

33. Nepal Chandra Roy v. Netai Chandra Das, (1971) 3 SCC 303.
34. Suja P. Chacko v. State of Kerala, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 292 (Ker).
35. State of Rajasthan v. Bhera, 1997 Cr LJ 1237 (Raj).
36. Omprakash Shankarlal Sharma v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3175 (para 4) (Bom).
37. State of Rajasthan v. Ani, AIR 1997 SC 1023 : 1997 Cr LJ 1529, following Ram Chander v. State of Haryana, A 1981 SC 1036 : 1081 Cr LJ 609.
38. State of Rajasthan v. Ani, AIR 1997 SC 1023 : 1997 Cr LJ 1529, following Chander v. State of Haryana, AIR 19 SC 1036 : 1981 Cr LJ 609.
39. Sunil Chandra Roy v. State, AIR 1954 Cal 305 (paras 32 & 33) relying on Yuill v. Yuill, (1945) 1 All ER 183; No Bux Kazi v. Emperor ILR (1880) 6 Cal 279; Yusuf H. Yusuf H. Abbas v. Bhagwan Dass P. Nangpal, 1949 Bom 346
40. ILR (1977) 2 Cal 669; Ibrahim Husen v. State, AIR 1969 Goa 68.
41. R. v. Harris, (1927) 2 KB 587, CCA, applying the test laid down by Tindal CJ in R. v. Frost as reported in (1839 States Tr NS 85 at 386, for evidence in rebuttal (but see R v. Owen, (1952) 2 QB 362 : (1952) 1 All ER 1040, CC and para 294, note 4, ante. See also R. v. Howarth, (1918) 13 Cr App Rep 99, CCA (recall after summing up; cro

The trial judge is entitled to ask a witness, at any stage of the proceedings, questions directed to ascertaining whether he has a sense of responsibility and of the obligations imposed by an oath.[42]

This section is not intended to be used by the judge during cross-examination of a witness, as it would be embarrassing to the counsel examining a witness, and it may take the lawyer away from the trend of his examination.[43] The court has got power to allow further evidence after the closure of the prosecution case; there is no infirmity or illegality in such a procedure.[44]

It has been held that a judge had complete discretion, in regard to whether a witness should be recalled and that the court of Criminal Appeal would not interfere unless it was made to appear that injustice had been caused. It was a case where court called further evidence after completion of the defence by the accused.[45]

Rejection of an application filed by the public prosecutor, to call for a letter lying in the High Court on the ground of delay was held not proper.[46]

6. OF ANY WITNESS

In the insterest of justice, the court has got power to examine any one as a court witness.[47]

The court can, under Section 165, examine the material witnesses left over by the prosecution without assigning any reason, if the court thinks fit that they are material witnesses who can throw light in the interest of justice.[48]

Lord ESHER observed: "If there be a person whom neither party to an action chooses to call as a witness, and the judge thinks that the person is able to elucidate the truth, the judge, in my opinion, is entitled to call him; and I cannot agree that such a course has never been taken by a judge before."[49]

Under order XVI, Rule 14, C.P.C., if the court thinks it necessary to examine any person, other than a party to the proceeding and a person not named by the party as a witness in the proceeding, it may, of its own motion, summon such person to give evidence or to produce any document in his possession. Order X, Rule 2, C.P.C., enables the court to examine any party appearing in person, or present in court, or any person who will be able to answer any material question relating to the suit. Order X, Rule 4, C.P.C. enables the court to direct any party to appear in person to answer any material question relating to the suit. Under Section 540 Cr. P.C. (old) corresponding to Section 311 of Cr. P.C. of 1973, the court has got the power to summon any witness after the close of the proceedings in a criminal case, in the interest of justice. This section also enables the court to order the production of any document, or to put any question at any time during the proceeding, in order to discover, or to obtain proper proof of, relevant facts.

---

examination); R. v. Liddle, (1928) 21 Cr App Rep 3, CCA (alibi); R v McMahon, (1933) 24 Cr App Rep 95, CCA (defamatory libel; questions put after defence suggesting words complained of were true); R v. Day, (1940) 1 All ER 402, CCA (forgery; evidence of handwriting expert called after defence; R. v. Davis, (1960) 44 Cr App Rep 235, CCA (communication between clerk and jury); R. v. Cleghorn, (1967) 2 QB 584 : (1967) 1 All ER 996, CA; cf. R. v. Tregear, (1967) 1 All ER 989, CA), and only where no injustice or prejudice could be caused to the defendant R. v. Cleghorn, (1967) 2 QB 584, (1967) 1 All ER 996, CA, applying R v. Harris, (1927) 2 KB 587, CCA). Once the summing up is concluded no further evidence ought to be introduced to the jury, R. v. Owen, (1952) 2 QB 362 : (1952) 1 All ER 1040, CCA; R. v. Wilson, (1957) 41 Cr App Rep 226, CCA; R. v. Gearing, (1968) 1 All ER 579 : (1968) 1 WLR 341 CA; R. v. Corless, (1972) 56 Cr App Rep 341 CA; cf. R v. Nixon, (1968) 2 All ER 33 : (1968) 1 WLR 577 CA. As to the right of the trial judge to recall a witness for the prosecution after a submission of no case to answer on behalf of the defence, see R. v. Sullivan, (1923) 1 KB 47, CCA; R v. McKenna, (1956) 40 Cr App Rep 65, CCA (except in very exceptional circumstances in favour of the defence) R. v. Sanderson, (1953) 1 All ER 485, (1953) 1 WLR 392, CCA. See also R. v. Nixon, (1968) 2 All ER 33 : (1968) 1 WLR 577 CA (inspection by jury after summing up at request of defence); cf. R. v. Lawrence, (1968) 1 All ER 579 : (1968) 1 WLR 341. CA (inspection by jury after summing up; conviction quashed).

42. R. v. Wilson, (1924) 18 Cr App Rep 108, CCA).
43. Nanjappa Goundan v. Periakkal, AIR 1951 Mad 772.
44. 1983 All Cr. LR 21 (P&H).
45. John Mckenna (1956) 40 Cri App. Rep 65. See also Gurudeo Singh v. State of Punjab, (1982) 2 Cr LJ 2211 (P&H).
46. Bhagaban Behara v. Maaeshwar Behara, (1980) 50 Cut LT 443.
47. Jamatraj Kewalji Gavani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 178.
48. Habeeb Mohammad v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1954 SC 51.
49. Coulson v. Disborough, (1894) 2 QB 316, 318.

The above powers given to the court should not be exercised to save the parties from trouble an expense.[50]

7. MAY ORDER THE PRODUCTION OF ANY DOCUMENT OR THING

The power of the Court to direct production of any document under this section is subject to th proviso at the beginning of that section that the direction must be "in order to discover or obtain prop proof of relevant facts."

This section empowers the court to order production of any document or thing, if it conside necessary.[51] It was held, that for fixation of liability for the accident and the claim for the compensatio when parties did not produce the required material, the court under Section 165, should get at th evidence by calling for documents, or should give further opportunity to the parties to produce necessa evidence.[52] Section 60 states that, if oral evidence refers to the existence or condition of any materi thing, other than a document, the court may, if it thinks fit, require the production of such a materi thing for its inspection.[53]

But, under the second proviso, the court has no power to compel the production of any documen for which privilege is claimed as contained in Sections 121 to 131 of the Evidence Act.

8. PARTIES NOT ENTITLED TO CROSS-EXAMINE A COURT WITNESS WITHOUT LEAVE OF THE COURT

When the court examines a person as a court witness under Section 165, the parties have no right cross-examine him except with the permission of the court; no doubt, the discretion will have to b exercised judicially, and ordinarily the judge would give the requisite permission, if the answers give are adverse to the party who seeks the said permission.[54] Cross-examination of a court witness can b permitted if the answers given by a witness in such examination are adverse to the party.[55] If what th witness has said in answer to the questions put to him by the Judge is adverse to either of the parties, th Judge ought to allow the witness to be cross-examined upon his answers. A general fishing cros examination ought not to be permitted.[56] The accused should be given an opportunity to cross-examine witness on the answers to questions put by the Court.[57]

The last part of this section says that, without the leave of the court, one cannot cross-examine an witness upon any answer given in reply to any question put by the court. This is to be considered only cases when the court puts questions during the examination of a witness in the witness box. So far as an person summoned by the court and examined is concerned, there is nothing in the section which wou debar the party from proceeding with the cross-examination of the witness summoned by the court.[58]

The granting of permission for examining the witness on the answers given to the questions put b the court would arise when a party produces a witness, and such permission would ordinarily be grant by the Court.[59]

"When the counsel for the prisoner has examined or declined to cross-examine a witness, and th Court afterwards, of its own motion, examines him, the witness cannot then, without the permission the Court, be subjected to cross-examination. When after the examination of a witness by th complainant and the defendant, the Court takes him in hand, he is put under special pressure as the Judg is empowered to ask any question he pleases, in any form about any fact relevant or irrelevant...and he

---

50. In re K.V.R.S. Mani, AIR 1951 Mad 707.
51. Ghurey Lal v. State, AIR 1965 All 206; 1964 Mad WN 356.
52. Rajeswari v. Hotel Imperiol, AIR 1989 Mad 34.
53. Vide commentary under the proviso 2 of Section 60.
54. In re Mukhesh Ramchandra Reddy, AIR 1958 AP 165; R. v. Sakharam Mukundji, 11 BHCR 166; Gopal Lall Manik, ILR (1897) 24 Cal 288.
55. 1983 All Cr. LR 15 (P&H).
56. Coulson v. Disborough, (1894) 2 QB 316.
57. In the matter of the R v. Girish Chunder Talukdar, (1879) 5 Cal 614; Mohendra Nath Das Gupta v. Emperor, I (1902) 29 Cal 387.
58. Gopal Lall v. Manicklall, ILR 24 Cal 288; R v. Girish Chander Talukdar, ILR (1897) 5 Cal 614.
59. In re Mukhesh Ramachandra Reddy, AIR 1958 AP 165.

therefore, at the same time placed under the special protection of the Court, which may, at its discretion, allow a party to cross-examine him, but this cannot be asked for as a matter of right. This principle applies equally whether it is intended to direct the examination to the witness's statements of fact, or to circumstances touching his credibility, for any question meant to impair his credit tends (or is so designed) to get rid of the effect of all his answers, and of each of them just as much as one that may bring out an inconsistency or contradiction. It is then a cross-examination upon answers upon every answer given to the Court, and is subject to the Court's control."[60]

It is entirely in the discretion of the court to allow cross-examination of a court witness to whom questions are put under Section 165.[61]

Where a witness was called by the court, after the close of the case in exercise of the power under Section 540, (old) Cr. P.C. (now Section 311), it was held that both parties had a right to cross-examine him freely.[62]

9. JUDGEMENT MUST BE BASED ON RELEVANT AND PROVED FACTS [PROVISO - I]

This proviso says that the judgement must be based upon facts declared by this Act to be relevant (Ss. 5-55) and duly proved (Ss. 56-100).

The Privy Council held that, under the Evidence Act before the facts can be treated as relevant under some specific provisions of the Act, they must also be proved as laid down in the Act; facts which are not properly proved cannot be considered by the judge and cannot form the basis of a judgement.[63] It is only those facts which are declared to be relevant and duly proved, which can be the basis of a judgment as provided by this section.[64] It would be intolerable that the Court should decide rights upon suspicion unsupported by testimony.[65] Consent of the parties, admitting certain evidence cannot form the basis of a judgment, as it cannot take the place of determination of the facts by the Evidence Act.[66] However, it was held that when the parties consented to the admission of the evidence, it can form the basis of the judgment, and it is not vitiated even if the conditions prescribed in Section 33 of the Act were not complied with.[67]

When evidence was admitted which was inadmissible per se, even though there was omission to object to the admissibility, it cannot form the basis of the judgment.[68] The omission to object to the admission of irrelevant evidence cannot possibly make it relevant, and such irrelevant evidence cannot form the basis of a judgment.[69]

10. WITNESS SHALL NOT BE COMPELLED TO ANSWER ANY QUESTION OR TO PRODUCE ANY DOCUMENT IN CERTAIN CASES [PROVISO - II]

This proviso states that this section does not empower any judge to compel any witness to answer any question, or to produce any document, if such witness is entitled to refuse to answer, or to produce the document by claiming privilege; he shall also not ask any improper questions as contained in Sections 148 and 149 of this Act.[70]

---

60. R v. Sakharam Mukundji, (1874) 11 BHC 166, 168.
61. Dwarka Dass v. State of J&K, 1979 Cr LJ 550 (J&K).
62. R. v. Pith, 47 All 147.
63. Shris Chandra Nandy v. Rakhalannada, AIR 1941 PC 16; Miyana Hasan Abdulla v. State of Gujarath, AIR 1962 Guj 214; Baldeo Singh v. Sheoraj Kueri, AIR 1920 Pat 116; Modi Nathubhai v. Chhotubhai Manibhai, AIR 1962 Guj 68.
64. Miyana Hasan Abdulla v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1962 Guj 214.
65. Sreemutty Mohun Bibee v. Sharat Chander Mitter, (1897) 2 CWN 18, 27.
66. Ponnuswami Pillai v. Sihgaram Pillai, AIR 1919 Mad 848.
67. Vijayasinghji v. Kashikchandra, (1978) 19 Guj LR 980; See also Sri Rajah Prakasarayanim Garu v. Venkatrao, ILR (1916) 38 Mad 160.
68. Moksh Builders and Financiers Ltd. v. Union of India, (1968) 70 Punj LR (D) 71.
69. Miller v. Madhodas, ILR 19 All 76 (PC); Nanakchand v. Mian Mohammad Shahbaz Khan, AIR 1936 Lah 114.
70. Municipal Corporation of Greater Bombay v. Lala Pancham, AIR 1965 SC 1008.

The proviso subjects the judge to the provisions contained in Ss. 121-131, S. 148 and S. 149. Th judge has the power of asking irrelevant questions to a witness, if he does so in order to obtain proof relevant facts, but if he asks questions with a view to criminal proceedings being taken against th witness, the witness is not bound to answer them, and cannot be punished for not answering them und Section 179, Indian Penal Code.[71] A witness should not be coerced to answer a question.[72] Where judge rebuked a witness and threatened him with prosecution for perjury if he changed his statement, th Supreme Court held that the proceeding was vitiated.[73]

Where privilege was claimed for production of the document, it was held by the Full Bench Gauhati High Court, in Tridib Sharma v. State of Assam[74], that only such documents, statements, or par thereof as are necessary for the ends of justice, be allowed to be disclosed. However, the party is n allowed to use the disclosed documents, statements or part thereof out of context or divulge them for an other purpose.

Power of jury or assessors to put questions.

S. 166. In cases tried by jury or with assessors, the jury o assessors may put any questions to the witnesses, through or b leave of the Judge, which the Judge himself might put an which he considers proper.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section has lost its importance as trial by jury or assessors has been abolished in this country.

---

71. Queen-Empress v. Hari Lakshman, ILR (1885) 10 Bom 185.
72. Queen-Empress v. Ishri Singh, ILR (1886) 8 All 672, 675.
73. Ram Chander v. Haryana, AIR 1981 SC 1036.
74. (1985) 2 Gau LR 229 (FB).

CHAPTER XI

OF IMPROPER ADMISSION AND REJECTION OF EVIDENCE

No new trial for improper admission or rejection of evidence.

S. 167. The improper admission or rejection of evidence shall not be ground of itself for a new trial or reversal of any decision in any case, if it shall appear to the Court before which such objection is raised that, independently of the evidence objected to and admitted, there was sufficient evidence to justify the decision, or that, if the rejected evidence had been received, it ought not to have varied the decision.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 1353
2. Decision ... 1354
3. In any case ... 1354
4. Civil ... 1354
5. Letters patent, Clause 26 ... 1355
6. Criminal ... 1355
7. The Court before which such objection is raised ... 1355
8. Omission to consider relevant evidence ... 1357

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Principle.—The improper (a) admission, or (b) rejection of evidence is no ground for a new trial, or reversal, of any decision, if,

(i) in the case of improper admission—

there is sufficient evidence to justify the decision independently of the evidence objected to and admitted; or

(ii) in the case of improper rejection—the decision could not be varied, if the rejected evidence had been received.

Object.—The object of the section is that the Court of appeal or revision should not disturb a decision on the ground of improper admission or rejection of evidence if in spite of such evidence, there are sufficient materials in the case to justify the decision.[1] In other words, technical objections will not be allowed to prevail, where substantial justice appears to have been done.

The main function of the court is to do substantial justice between the parties and see if there is sufficient evidence to justify its conclusion. If the evidence, after omitting such portion of the evidence which should not have been admitted, is sufficient to decide a case, then according to this section, such decision shall not be reversed nor shall a new trial ordered.[2]

The Privy Council held that it was the duty of their Lordships who were judges of the fact in such a case as this, to consider whether, throwing aside such evidence, there still remained sufficient evidence to support the decree.[3] Where there is evidence to convict the accused, besides other evidence of doubtful credibility, or improperly admitted evidence, the High Court, is competent and is entitled to convict the accused, even in an appeal against acquittal.[4] The decision on inadmissible confession would

---

1. Mohur Singh v. Ghuriba, (1870) 6 Beng LR 495, 499 PC 15 WR (PC) 8; Dwijesh Chandra Roy Choudari v. Naresh Chandra Gupta, ILR (1946) 1 Cal 149.
2. Goshain Tota v. Ruckminee Bullab, 13 MIA 77 PC.
3. Mohur Singh v. Ghuriba, 6 BLR 495. See also K. Sarkara Chenna v. K. Manappa, AIR 1925 Mad 245; Maharaja Koowar v. Nundlal, 8 MIA 199; Bunseedhur v. Govt of Bengal, 9 BLR 341 PC; Goshain Tota v. Ruckminee Bullub, 13 MIA 77; Womma Kant v. Ganga Narain, (1973) 20 WR 384.
4. Dhondu v. R, 1950 PC 30.

not be interfered with, if other evidence on record is sufficient to sustain conviction, after excluding the inadmissible confession.[5] When no prejudice is caused to the party by reason of admission of inadmissible evidence and the case can be decided on the rest of the material on record the decision need not be set aside or the case need not be remanded for fresh trial or rehearing.[6]

It was held by the Supreme Court that as regards the rejected evidence, the question under Section 167, is not so much whether the evidence rejected would not have been accepted against the other testimony on record; it is whether that evidence "ought not to have varied the decision". Where it is clear from the record that the prosecution, though it had cited certain person as a witness, was not very keen to examine him and when that person objected to giving evidence, the prosecution dropped him, it is not a case in which evidence can be said to have been rejected by the court within Section 167; in such a case, the prosecution does not in fact tender the person as a witness.[7]

The appellate Court is entitled to examine the evidence for itself and to substitute its own verdict for the verdict of the jury if on examining the record for itself it comes to the conclusion that the verdict of the jury was erroneous or that there has been a failure of justice in the sense that a guilty man has been acquitted or an innocent man has been convicted.[8]

Statement under Section 313 of Cr.P.C. cannot be taken as evidence, hence Section 167 of Evidence Act was not attracted.[9]

2. DECISION

The word 'decision' is more generally used as applicable to civil proceedings, but it is by no means inappropriate to criminal cases; and if it was the intention of the Legislature to use an expression which would apply equally to civil as to criminal proceedings, there is probably no other word which would have answered their purpose better.[10]

3. IN ANY CASE

These words are very wide and include criminal trials by jury.[11]

When a part of the evidence which has been allowed to go to the jury is found to be irrelevant and inadmissible, it is open to the High Court in appeal either to uphold the verdict upon the remaining evidence on the record under this section or to quash the verdict and order a retrial.[12]

4. CIVIL

In the case of first appeals the provisions of this section have to be read with Section 99 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908) which provides "No decree shall be reversed or substantially varied nor shall any case be remanded, in appeal on account of ..... any error, defect or irregularity in any proceeding in the suit not affecting the merits of the case ..." see also O. XLI, Rr. 27 to 29.

In second appeals, one of the grounds justifying the appeal is "a substantial error or defect in the procedure... which may possibly have produced error or defect in the decision of the case upon the merits [S. 100(1)(c) of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908].

---

5. Nika Ram v. State of H.P., AIR 1972 SC 2077; Jago v. State of Rajastan, 1953 All 406 (inadmissible evidence); Abdul Rahim v. R, AIR 1946 PC 82; State v. Ram Prasad Singh, AIR 1953 Pat 354; In re. Moorthy, 1956 Mad 536; Ram Kishan v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 104; Amalesh Chandra v. State, AIR 1952 Cal 481; Kasim Ali v. King, 1950 Assam 75; Sudhindra Nath v. State, AIR 1953 Cal 339; Sunil Chandra Roy v. State, AIR 1954 Cal 305; Danda Pani Das v. Mohan Nayak, AIR 1954 Ori 67.
6. Jagabandhu Sahu v. Girdhari Swain, (1970) 36 Cut LT 1194.
7. Narayan v. State of Punjab, AIR 1959 SC 484.
8. Ramkishan v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 104.
9. Ranjit Mondal & Sajal Barui v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 1586 (Cal). The Court referred to State v. Sukhdev, AIR 1992 SC 2100 : 1992 Cr LJ 3454.
10. Queen v. Hurribole Chunder, ILR (1876) 1 Cal 207.
11. Queen Emperor v. Ramachandra Govind Harshe, ILR (1895) 19 Bom 749, 762.
12. Queen-Empress v. Ramachandra Govind Harshe, ILR (1895) 19 Bom 749 CONTRA, Wafadar Khan v. Queen Empresses, (1894) 21 Cal 955; Dal Singh v. King Emperor, (1917) 19 Bom LR 510 44 IA 137; ILR 44 Cal 876; Ramesh Chandra Dass v. Emperor, ILR (1919) 46 Cal 895.

Where a document was admitted by the Court with direction to the party to pay the necessary amount of the stamp duty and was acted upon while pronouncing judgment, the said judgment could not be challenged in appeal in view of this section.[13]

5. LETTERS PATENT, CLAUSE 26

The provisions of this section apply to the High Court when acting under Clause 26 of the Letters patent.[14]

6. CRIMINAL

In Criminal Cases also the Legislature has provided a similar safeguard "No finding, sentence or order passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction shall be reversed or altered..... on appeal or revision, on account of any misdirection in any charge to a jury unless such error omission, irregularity, or misdirection has in fact occassioned a failure of justice (S. 465 of the Criminal Procedure Code).

7. THE COURT BEFORE WHICH SUCH OBJECTION IS RAISED

The Court which is to decide upon the sufficiency of the evidence to support the conviction is the court of review or the appellate court,[15] but not the Court below.[16]

Where the first Court improperly admits evidence the High Court has power to interfere and remand the case for a new trial.[17] The Omission to receive an important document,[18] or to examine a material witness,[19] justifies a reversal of the decision. Where admission of inadmissible evidence had seriously influenced the minds of the jury or the court in giving the verdict, the High Court has to set aside the verdict and conviction.[20] Where the findings of the lower appellate court were based on irrelevant evidence and also on relevant evidence it is not possible to say whether conclusions were based upon consideration of the relevant evidence alone and the case has to be remanded for retrial in such cases. The Court can interfere where the trial court refused to receive evidence which ought to have been admitted.[21] Where the court acts on material, partly relevant and partly irrelevant, it is not possible to say to what extent the mind of the Court was affected by the irrelevant material in giving a finding, such a finding is vitiated because of the use of inadmissible material.[22]

Disregarding of a Commissioners report constitutes no error or defect in procedure, nor does it affect, the merits of the case within the meaning of Section 100(1)(c), C.P.C. to justify interference in second appeal, if there was other evidence on record, sufficient for the disposal of the case and there was proper exercise of jurisdiction by the court.[23] Even in a second appeal, the High Court has to see whether there is other evidence justifying the decision, after excluding the irrelevant evidence admitted in the trial Court.[24]

Section 167 bars a fresh trial, unless it could be established that there would have been a material difference in the result if the evidence allegedly rejected improperly had been allowed to be produced.[25] Where the court examined the accused as a court witness against his protest, to prove a fact which prosecution was bound to prove, it was held that the act of the Magistrate was in direct contravention of

---

13. Babulal v. Mohammad Sharif, AIR 1996 MP 147 (para 8).
14. Queen v. Hurribole Chunder Ghose, ILR (1876) 1 Cal 207; Imperatrix v. Pitamber Jina, ILR (1877) 2 Bom61; Emperor v. Narayan, (1907) 9 Bom LR 789, 32 Bom 111, FB. See Emperor v. Panchu Das, (1920) 47 Cal 671 (FB).
15. PER WESTROPP, CJ, in Imperatrix v. Pitambar Jina, ILR (1877) 2 Bom 61, 65
16. Queen v. Hurribole Chunder Ghose, ILR (1876) 1 Cal 207, 217.
17. Palakdhari Raj v. Manners, ILR (1895) 23 Cal 179.
18. Devidas Jagjivan v. Pirjada Begm, ILR (1884) 8 Bombay 377; Talwar Singh v. Bhagavan Dass, ILR (1907) 12 CWN 312 : 8 CLJ 147.
19. Moni Lal Bandhopadhyaya v. Khiroda Dass, ILR 1893 20 Cal 740.
20. Gokul Chandra Chatterjee v. State, AIR 1950 Cal 306; Amalesh Chandra v. State, AIR 1952 Cal 481; Kashmiri Ali v. King, (1950) Assam 75.
21. Palakdhari Roy v. Manners, ILR (1895) 23 Cal 179.
22. Kalappa Saidappa v. Bhima Govind, AIR (1961) Mys 160.
23. Bibhuti Bhushan Bank v. Sadhan Chandra, AIR (1965) Cal 199.
24. Gajadhar v. Nanda Lal, AIR 1934 Pat 55; Hari Ahir v. Sat Sanghat Chacha, 1934 Pat 617.
25. Jasoda Haldar v. Sailendra Nath Somanatha, AIR 1957 Cal 372.

Section 342A, (old) Cr.P.C. [now Section 315(1)] and the question of correctness of the conviction should be examined by eschewing the evidence of the accused, and there was no ground to quash the entire proceedings in view of Section 167 Evidence Act.[26] Mere exclusion of evidence by the trial court would not be a sufficient ground for reversing the decree, unless the appellate Court comes to the conclusion, that if the evidence which was refused had been received, it would have varied the decision.[27] Where the Court refused to allow the use of confessional statement to contradict or corroborate the evidence of the witness approver, it was held that when there was other evidence corroborating the testimony of the approver and on facts, there was no prejudice to the accused, the order of refusal would not be interfered with in revision.[28] In a case of departmental enquiry under the Central Reserve Police Rules 1965 in respect of unauthorised overstay after leave, the delinquent did not deny the allegation of overstay and did not produce evidence to show that his overstay was for reasons beyond his control, which burden he had to discharge. But, he contended that he was not given an opportunity to cross-examine the officer who made a report against him behind his back. It was held that the enquiry would not be said to be vitiated, for non-cross examination of the officer, as no prejudice was shown to have been caused by such non cross-examination.[29] Where statement of two witnesses had been wrongly admitted under Section 288 Cr.P.C. (old), it was held that it could not affect the verdict, as other evidence of the eye-witness if believed, would have sustained the charge. Hence the objection as to improper admission of that evidence was of no avail.[30] It is not in every case in which something extraneous has been taken into consideration that the High Court would upset a finding. Where it is patently clear that there could have been no other decision, taking into account the extraneous circumstances alone would not vitiate the order.[31] Where the Magistrate was not satisfied with the voluntariness of the confession, and the accused did not understand language in which the questions were put to him or with the answers were attributed to him such a confession must be excluded from the evidence. But if the exclusion of the confession did not affect the value of the circumstantial evidence against the accused the conviction can be up held.[32] Where there was improper admission or rejection of evidence but even if it is excluded, if the other independent evidence is sufficient the decision need not be varied.[33]

When the court took into consideration all documentary evidence before recording a finding, the finding would not be vitiated by reason of the fact that one of such documents was not duly proved.[34]

The accused was originally charged for certain offences and also for the offence of waging war against the State which was later given up by the prosecution. During evidence some evidence was given to prove earlier incidents to bring out the political views of the accused. It was held that the evidence could not have prejudiced the accused, since the trial was concerned only with the criminal acts done by the accused on the date of occurrence. In such cases unnecessary evidence can be excluded.[35]

The Lower Court upheld the jurisdiction of the Municipality to levy cart tax by invoking a presumption under Section 99(4) of the Madras District Municipality Act. It was held that the presumption under Section 99(4) was confined to carriage and had no application to a cart but as the presumption was not the only basis and there was evidence of facts and circumstances to justify its jurisdiction to levy the tax, the decision of the lower court cold not be interfered with (1961 Mad LJ (Cri) 306. When the court refused to summon a defence witness, it was not a case of rejection of proper evidence and so Section 167 is not attracted. (1976 Chand LR (Cri) : 1977 Sim LC 145 (HP).....).

The reception of inadmissible evidence is less injurious than the rejection of admissible evidence, because, in the former case in arriving at the decision, the evidence wrongly admitted can well be excluded from consideration whereas the evidence wrongly excluded can only be brought on record by

---

26. John v. Shertally Municipality, AIR (1959) Ker 323 : ILR 1950 Ker 150.
27. De Souza v. Pestanji, ILR 8 Bom 408.
28. Birendra Chandra De v. State, AIR (1957) Assam 168.
29. Shyam Singh v. D.I.G. Central Reserve Police, AIR (1965) Raj 140.
30. Chhotka v. State, AIR 1958 Cal 482.
31. Madanlal Chawla v. H.B.T. Institute, Kanpur, AIR 1962 All 166.
32. 1957 Jab LR 460.
33. Gopi Harachandan v. Rama Krishna Paltan Singh, ILR 1967 Cut 862 : 33 Cut LT 1098.
34. Sukh Ram v. Ram Swarup, (1969) All LJ 129.
35. Kandan Narayanan v. State, (1952) Tra/co 459.

having recourse to further proceeding, necessitating thereby the prolongation of the trial, and possible harrasment to the persons concerned.[36]

It is the duty of the court to apply its mind to the question whether after discarding the evidence improperly admitted, there is left sufficient evidence to justify the conviction.[37]

8. OMISSION TO CONSIDER RELEVANT EVIDENCE

Where a decision was given without considering certain recitals in a document, it was held that the decision is not vitiated if it would not have been different even if those recitals had been considered by the court.[38] Where the finding is one of fact, and it is based on the trivial error of record but the rest of the material on record is sufficient to justify that finding, it cannot be said that the finding is vitiated.[39]

Where the court excluded the main evidence in support of a party's case, and there was no evidence apart from the rejected evidence the court would be justified in ordering a fresh hearing of the case.[40]

---

36. State v. Mysore v. Sampangramiah, AIR 1953 Mys 80; In re S.N. Appannaiengar, 9 Mys LJ 69.
37. Bihari v. State, (1956) All LJ 182.
38. Gangadhar Mohanti v. Priyanath Das, (1963) 29 Cut LT 357.
39. Gangadhar Mahanti v. Priyanath Das, (1963) 29 Cut LT 357.
40. Channoo Mahto v. Jang Behadur Singh, AIR 1957 Pat 293.

SUBECT INDEX

A

Abandonment
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 883

Abetment
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 884 suicide by married woman, of, presumption as to, s. 113A, p. 962

Academic Text Book document of title, is not, s. 35, p. 483

Acceptor
bill of exchange, estoppel of, s. 117, p. 1145

Accession of sovereign of United Kingdom, of judicially noticed, s. 57, p. 597

Accident fact showing, s. 15, p. 229

Accidental Act facts bearing on question whether act was, relevancy of, s. 15, p. 229

Accomplice
competent witness, s. 133, p. 1230 evidence of, confession of accused, distinguished, s. 133, pp. 1219-1222, 1236
——corroboration of, bribery charge on accused, s. 133, pp. 1226-1228, 1230-1233 ——murder case, in, s. 133, p. 1233
——when related to accused, weightage of, s. 133, p. 1233
——when turns approver, weightage of, s. 133, pp. 1233-1236 partisan witness, s. 133, p. 1228 trap witness, s. 133, pp. 1228-1230 who is or who is not, as witness, s. 133, pp. 1222-1225 witness, as, accessory after fact, s. 133, p. 1225 ——competent, when, s. 133, p. 1218

Accounts
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 884

Accused of any offence
meaning of, s. 25, p. 321

Accused
admission by, ss. 18, 21, pp. 253, 273 claim of his good character by, rebuttal by prosecution, s. 54, p. 592 conduct of, relevancy, s. 8, p. 128 confession by, s. 24, p. 295 injuries to person of, s. 3, p. 62 previous conviction of, if relevant as evidence of bad character of, s. 54, p. 594 silence of, evidence in, s. 8, p. 135

Acquiescence
burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 884

Acts accidental, s. 15, p. 230
Central Legislature of, relevancy, s. 37, p. 487 order, etc. of Government, proof of, s. 78, p. 732 statements as to fact made in recitals of, relevancy of, s. 37, p. 487

Admiralty Jurisdiction
final judgement, order or decree in, relevancy of, s. 41, p. 498 letters patent, conferred by, s. 41, p. 507

Admissibility
dying declaration, of, s. 32, p. 410 relevancy and, distinction, ss. 3, 5, pp. 23, 105

Admission(s) accused, by, ss. 18, 21, pp. 253, 273 affidavit in, of, s. 17, p. 249 agent of party, by, s. 18, p. 256 agreement between parties, referee's statements under, binding nature of, s. 20, p. 266
——resiling from, when, s. 20, p. 266 agreement, necessity of, parties between, s. 20, p. 266 binding nature of, s. 17, p. 243
burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 884
by co-defendants person to whom matter referred, s. 20, p. 263 cases in, dealt separately, s. 17, p. 250 civil cases in, when relevant, s. 23, p. 281 classification of, s. 17, p. 239 clear and precise, to be, s. 17, p. 244 co-accused, against, s. 17, p. 248 conclusive proof, not but may estop, s. 31, p. 385 conclusiveness of, s. 17, p. 247 conditions, subject to, s. 17, p. 245 conduct of suit, during, s. 31, p. 388 confession and, distinction, s. 17, p. 245
——distinguished, s. 24, p. 292
confession during investigation and, s. 21, p. 274 confession to magistrate and, s. 21, p. 274 construction of, s. 17, p. 247 contradiction in, s. 21, p. 272 co-owner, by, s. 18, p. 254

Admission(s) (contd.)
co-plaintiffs and co-defendants, by, s. 18, p. 255 counsel, by, s. 18, pp. 256, 257 counter, s. 17, p. 248 criminal cases, in, estoppel and, s. 31, p. 387 defendant, by, s. 18, p. 253
definition of, s. 17, p. 237
denial or, by lunatic, s. 18, p. 261 different kinds of, s. 17, p. 239 disapproval of, s. 17, p. 245 document, in, reliance on, ss. 31, 92, pp. 388, 804 documents, of, s. 58, p. 617 effect of, s. 17, p. 239 fact of clear and specific, to be, s. 58, p. 616 facts admitted need not be proved, s. 58, p. 613 facts of, court's discretion to call for proof of, s. 58, p. 619
——criminal cases, in, s. 58, p. 619
——implied, s. 58, p. 615
——at hearing, s. 58, p. 618
——compromise and, s. 58, p. 617
——to be taken as a whole, s. 58, p. 616 general principle of, exceptions to, s. 17, p. 241 gratuitous, withdrawal of, s. 17, p. 250
implied, s. 17, p. 243
infant, by, s. 17, p. 248 law on point of, s. 17, p. 249 letter between husband and wife, privileged document when, s. 23, p. 284 letter containing does not require stamp, s. 16, p. 235
meaning of, s. 17, p. 238
mental or physical state of person making, exception in, s. 21, p. 278 officers, subordinates, etc., by, s. 18, p. 258 opinions as to custom, of, s. 17, p. 249 oral, content of document, as to, relevant when, s. 22, p. 279
——contents of electronic record, as to, s. 22A, p. 280 parties from whom interest derived, of, s. 18, p. 260
——to proceedings, by, s. 18, p. 252 ——proprietary or pecuniary interest of, statements against, s. 18, p. 259 partners, by, s. 18, p. 257 party to attested document, by, execution of document, of, s. 70, p. 695 ——proceeding or his agent, by, s. 18, p. 251 party, interested in subject-matter, by, s. 18, p. 251
——by, prior proceedings, in, s. 21, p. 270
——of, previous suit, in, relevancy of, s. 145, p. 1276 person, expressly referred to by party to suit, by, s. 20, p. 263
——from whom interest derived, by, s. 18, p. 251 ——making them, against, proof of, exception, maker of, dead, s. 21, p. 277 ——whose position must be proved as against party to suit, by, s. 19, p. 262
——expressly referred to by party in suit, by, English Law, s. 20, p. 264 ——expressly referred to by person to suit, by, principle of, applicability to criminal cases, s. 20, p. 264 ——making them, against, proof of, exception, mental or physical state, s. 21, p. 278 pleadings in, other suits, use in, s. 17, p. 247

Admission(s) (contd.)

point of law, effect, s. 17, p. 249 presumption as to genuineness of, s. 17, p. 240 principal and surety by, s. 18, p. 259 proof of, against person making them, and by or on their behalf, ss. 17, 21, pp. 240, 267 reference akin to arbitration, s. 20, p. 265 reference, by, binding value of, s. 20, p. 266 relevancy of, otherwise than as, s. 21, p. 278
§ SEE ALSO "ORAL ADMISSION" § SEE ALSO "WRITTEN ADMISSION" silence, by, s. 18, p. 252
solicitors and counsel, by s. 18, p. 256 statements made in representative capacity, in, s. 18, p. 258 strangers, to a suit, by, not relevant, s. 20, p. 263 suitor in representative character, by, s. 18, p. 251 tenant, by, s. 18, p. 255 third parties, not conclusive against, s. 17, p. 247
——statement by, of, s. 18, p. 261
——not binding on, s. 21, p. 271 use of, against persons making, s. 21, p. 276 value of, ss. 17, 21, pp. 249, 276 voluntary, s. 17, p. 248 whole to be considered, ss. 17, 31, pp. 245, 388 without prejudice rule of whether waiver of privilege, s. 23, p. 284 witness, by, s. 18, p. 255

Adoption

burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 884
estoppel by conduct in, s. 115, p. 1122 illatom, estoppel in, s. 115, p. 1123 presumption by court, as to, s. 114, p. 1025

Adverse party right and opportunity to cross-examine, s. 33, p. 454

Adverse Possession

burden of proof of, s. 102, p. 885

Affairs of state affairs which are not, s. 123, p. 1183 evidence as to, "except with the permission" unpublished of, ss. 122, 123, pp. 1188, 1176-1179

——"who shall give.... thinks fit" interpretation of, s. 123, p. 1185 ——claim of privilege manner of, s. 123, p. 1188
——privilege, who can, s. 123, p. 1184
——constitutional validity of provisions on, s. 123, p. 1187
——head of department, permission by, s. 123, p. 1184
——permission of head of department necessary, s. 123, p. 1176
——unpublished official records, s. 123, p. 1180
——unpublished official records, s. 123, p. 1188
——meaning of, s. 123, pp. 1180-1183
——disclosure as to official communication, distinguished, s. 124, p. 1190

Affidavit
admission by, s. 17, p. 249
allegation in, evidence, if, s. 33, p. 446
applicability of Act to, s. 1, p. 11 evidence given by witness, not, s. 33, p. 445
meaning of, s. 3, p. 29

Age
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 891

Agent
notice through, s. 14, p. 220 party, of, admission by, s. 18, p. 256 principal and, burden of proof as to relationship in case of, s. 109, p. 934

Agreement
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 885

Agricultural Extension Officer expert on use of fertilisers, s. 45, p. 554

Agricultural Relief Act
burden of proof under, s. 101, p. 878

Alibi
applicability of, civil cases, in, s. 11, p. 185
——evidence in, s. 11, p. 186
burden of proof as to, s. 101, p. 872 evidence of, appreciation, s. 11, p. 186
meaning of, s. 11, p. 185
plea of, plea of self defence and, s. 11, p. 187 ——very early stage, to be taken at, s. 11, p. 185
proof of, s. 11, p. 185

Alienation burden of proof, s. 102, p. 886

Ambiguous Document latent, construction of, s. 93, p. 847 oral evidence, exclusion of, to explain or amend, s. 93, p. 844 patent, exclusion of, evidence in, s. 93, p. 847

AP Land Reforms (Ceiling on Holding) Act
burden of proof, under, s. 101, p. 877

Appeals
burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 866

Appellate Court
signature, comparison by, s. 73, p. 707

Application after arbitrator, proceedings before, to, s. 1, p. 12

Application of Act, s. 1, p. 7 affidavit, to, s. 1, p. 11 contempt proceedings, to, s. 1, p. 10

Appreciation of evidence question of law, s. 3, p. 63
§ SEE UNDER "EVIDENCE"

Approver
discharge of, when, s. 132, p. 1215 testimony of, s. 157, p. 1320

Arbitration burden of proof, s. 102, p. 886

Arbitrator
proceedings before, applicability after to, s. 1, p. 12 witness, as, s. 121, p. 1172

Art
opinions of experts on point of, s. 45, p. 526

Article of War
Indian Army, Navy or Air Force, of, § SEE UNDER "JUDICIAL NOTICE"

Asserted transaction in relation to, meaning of, s. 13, p. 213

Assessor or jury, power of, to put questions, s. 166, p. 1352

Assets value of, burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 887

Attachment
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 888

Attested document admission of execution of, certified copies of, s. 70, p. 698
——party, by, s. 70, p. 697 ——unqualified to be, s. 70, p. 698

Attesting witness(es) denial of execution by, proof by other evidence, s. 71, p. 698 document, proof of, not found, where, s. 69, p. 694 identifying witness as, s. 68, p. 692 production of, s. 68, p. 683 scribe as, s. 68, p. 692

Attorney
insulting questions put by, s. 150, p. 1293

Authentication
meaning of, s. 85, p. 752
power-of-attorney, of, s. 85, p. 752
presumption as to, s. 85, p. 752

Automatic photographs evidence, as, s. 45, p. 562

B

Bad Character
relevancy of, s. 14, p. 221

Bailee
estoppel of, s. 117, pp. 1145, 1146

Bailment
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 888

Ballistic Expert report of, workability of weapon, on, s. 45, p. 544 § SEE UNDER 'EXPERT'

Barrister insulting questions put by without reasonable grounds may be reported to High Court, s. 150, p. 1293

Benami* Transaction Act
burden of proof under, s. 102, p. 888
oral evidence as to, s. 92, pp. 815-818

Bengal Regulation
enquiry under, relevancy of, s. 13, p. 212

Bihar Money Lenders Act
burden of proof under, s. 101, p. 877

Bill of Exchange
acceptor of, extoppel of, s. 117, p. 1145 estoppel, acceptor of, s. 117, p. 1146 original more than one, proof of one sufficient, s. 91, p. 799
presumption by court as to, s. 114, p. 984

Bill of lading original more than one, proof of one sufficient, s. 91, p. 799

Birth
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 891

Blood Test
paternity of child, permissibility of, to prove, s. 112, p. 960

Bodily feeling facts showing existence of, relevance of, s. 14, pp. 214, 216 state of mind, or, mental phenomena, simple and complex in, s. 14, p. 216

Bonds
construction of, s. 94, p. 848

Book
statement forming part of, what evidence to be given, s. 39, p. 491 maps, charts and, presumption as to, s. 87, p. 753

Books of Account entries in, absence of, inference, s. 34, p. 468
——poof of, s. 34, p. 464
——relevant, when, s. 34, p. 460
——when relevant, s. 33, p. 460
meaning of, s. 34, p. 462
regularly kept in course of business, meaning of, s. 34, p. 463
"such statement alone shall not be sufficient in evidence" meaning of, s. 34, p. 466

Bribery
accomplice's evidence on charge of, s. 133, pp. 1226-1228

Burden of proof
A.P. Land Reform (Ceiling on Holdings) Act, under, s. 101, p. 877 abandonment, in, s. 102, p. 883 abetment, s. 102, p. 884 accounts, s. 102, p. 884
acquiescence, admission, estoppel and waiver, in, s. 102, p. 884
adoption, s. 102, p. 884
adverse possession, s. 102, p. 885 agreement, s. 102, p. 885
Agricultural Relief Act, under, s. 101, p. 878 alibi, as to, s. 101, p. 871
alienation, s. 102, p. 886 appellants in, s. 101, p. 866 arbitration, s. 102, p. 886 assessment of tax, s. 102, p. 886 assets, conversion into stock-in-trade, s. 102, p. 887 ——value of, as to, s. 102, p. 887 attachment, s. 102, p. 888 bailment, s. 102, p. 888
benami transaction between father and son, s. 102, p. 891 Benami Transactions Act, under, s. 102, pp. 888-890 benami transactions between spouses, s. 102, p. 890
benami transactions, s. 102, p. 891 Bihar Money Lenders' Act, under, s. 101, p. 877 birth, death and age, s. 102, p. 891 blind, execution of document by, s. 111, p. 948 carriers, s. 102, p. 892
caste, s. 102, p. 892
civil cases, in, s. 101, p. 867
claim cases, in, s. 101, p. 876 Companies Act, under, s. 102, p. 909 company resolution, in, s. 101, p. 876 compromise, s. 102, p. 892 confession, s. 24, p. 299 consideration, monetary, s. 102, pp. 892-894
Constitutional restrictions, reasonableness of, s. 102, p. 895

Burden of proof (contd.)

Constitutional validity, s. 102, p. 894 contempt of court, as to, s. 101, p. 873 contraband, presumption as to, s. 101, p. 879 Contract Act, under, bailor-bailee, s. 101, p. 881 contracts, s. 102, p. 895 court's jurisdiction, ouster of, s. 102, p. 904 criminal cases, in, s. 101, p. 868
custom, s. 102, p. 896
damages, s. 102, p. 896 death of person known to have been alive within thirty years, as to, s. 107, p. 929 declaratory suits, s. 102, p. 897 defamation and libel, in s. 101, p. 873 discharge and payment, s. 102, p. 897 disciplinary proceedings, s. 102, p. 898 discrimination, charge of, s. 101, p. 872 ——on charge of, s. 101, p. 872 document, execution of, s. 102, p. 900 documents not proved, of, s. 89, p. 759 domicile and citizenship, s. 102, p. 898 driving licence, validity of, s. 102, p. 908 easements, s. 102, p. 898
ejectment, s. 102, p. 899 election cases, s. 102, p. 899 Essential Commodities Act offences under, of, s. 101, p. 876 estoppel, on person who pleads, s. 102, p. 884 Evacuee Property Act, under, s. 101, p. 877 execution of decree, in, s. 101, p. 877 exemption to, Ruler, as to, s. 101, p. 877 fact especially within knowledge, as to, s. 106, p. 915 fact to be proved to make evidence admissible, as to, s. 104, p. 910 facts especially within knowledge of, alibi, plea of, as to, s. 106, p. 920
——Prevention of Corruption Act, under, s. 106, p. 921
——prohibition cases, s. 106, p. 920
——customs act, under, s. 106, p. 920
——intention mens rea constituent part of crime, in, s. 106, p. 919
——election petition, s. 106, p. 925
——Essential Commodities Act, under, s. 106, p. 921
——eviction petition under Slum Areas (Improvement and Clearance Act) 1956-proof of income of tenant, s. 106, p. 928 ——husband and wife, s. 106, p. 927 ——master and servant relationship, s. 106, p. 925
——mesne profits claim for, s. 106, p. 924
——miscellaneous cases, s. 106, p. 927
——N.D and P.S. Act, under, s. 106, p. 922 ——negligence in driving, s. 106, p. 924
——non-delivery or short delivery of goods, s. 106, p. 922 ——Railway Act, under, s. 106, p. 922 tax laws, s. 106, p. 926 Food Adulteration Act, under, s. 101, p. 880 fraud, s. 102, p. 902

Burden of proof (contd.)

gambling offences, in, s. 101, p. 872 good faith, transaction, in, of, s. 111, p. 942
grant, s. 102, p. 903
Indian Penal Code, exception in, case of accused comes under, of, s. 105, p. 911
——general exceptions, s. 105, p. 913
Industrial Dispute Act, under, s. 101, p. 878 insanity, plea of, in, s. 105, p. 915 Insolvency Act, under, s. 101, p. 877 intention, knowledge, mens rea, s. 102, p. 906 judgement debtor, on, s. 101, p. 877 land grabbing, as to, s. 101, p. 882 Landlord and tenant, rent, s. 106, p. 924 landlord-tenant dispute, s. 102, p. 904 landlord-tenant relationship, s. 109, p. 935 legitimacy of child, Mohammadan Law, presumption under, s. 112, p. 952 legitimacy of offspring of married couple, paternity presumption as to, s. 112, p. 953 legitimacy, s. 102, p. 905 lies, on whom, s. 102, p. 882 limitation, s. 102, p. 905 literate women, good faith in cases of active confidence, s. 111, p. 948 maintenance proceedings in, ss. 101, 102, pp. 867, 906 mala fide and bona fide transactions, as to, s. 102, p. 888 matrimony, desertion, s. 102, p. 905 meaning of, ss. 4, 101, pp. 100, 860
mortgage, s. 102, p. 906
MRTP Act, under, s. 101, p. 879 negligence, as to, ss. 101, 102, pp. 872, 906 Negotiable Instruments Act, under, s. 101, p. 880 notice, service of, s. 102, p. 907 offence under s. 420 Penal Code, s. 101, p. 873
——s. 182 Penal Code, s. 101, p. 872 ownership, as to, English law, s. 110, pp. 936, 937 ——Specific Relief Act, under, s. 110, p. 937 particular fact, as to, s. 103, p. 910 partners' relationship, s. 109, p. 935 partnership, s. 102, p. 907 person alive who has not been heard of for seven years, as to, s. 108, p. 929 presumption of court as to, s. 114, p. 1027
Prevention of Corruption Act and, s. 101, p. 874 preventive detention, in, s. 101, p. 876 principal-agent relationship, s. 109, p. 935 prohibition cases, as to, s. 101, p. 880 property of Hindu joint family, s. 102, p. 903 prosecution malicious, s. 102, p. 906 Railways Act, under, carriers. s. 101, p. 881 record of rights, as to, s. 101, p. 879 re-existence of facts, s. 101, p. 859 relationship in the case of partners, landlord and tenant, principal and agent, as to, s. 109, p. 934

Burden of proof (contd.)

Rent Acts, under, s. 101, p. 878 right of private defence, as to, s. 105, p. 915 sale deed, cancellation of, s. 102, p. 891 sanction for prosecution, as to, s. 101, p. 874 see Customs Act, under, of, s. 101, p. 875 seizure and auction, in, s. 101, p. 882 sexual offence, in, s. 101, p. 874
signature on blank paper, s. 102, p. 902 Specific Relief Act, s. 19(6), under, s. 102, p. 909 stolen property, in, s. 101, p. 873 succession, s. 102, p. 907
Trade Marks and Patents, as to, s. 101, p. 879
Transfer of Property Act, under , s. 101, p. 880 trust-trustee, s. 102, p. 907 unauthorised construction, s. 102, p. 908 Urban Laws (Ceiling and Regulation) Act, under, s. 101, p. 877 vehicle involved in accident, identity of, s. 102, p. 908 vicarious liability, s. 102, p. 892 will, competency of testator, as to, s. 102, p. 908

Business

common course of, things done in, s. 16, p. 233 course of, existence of, relevant fact, when, s. 16, p. 233 presumption from common course of, s. 16, p. 234

C

Carriers

burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 892

Case Diary

statement in, not substantive evidence, s. 35, p. 483

Caste

burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 892

Certified copies presumption as to genuineness of, ss. 79, 90, pp. 736, 767 public document, proof of, production of, by, ss. 76, 77, pp. 728, 729

Certifying Authority

meaning of, s. 3, pp. 14, 16

Certiorari

writ of, document, production of and, s. 163, p. 1341

Character

affecting damages, as, civil cases, in, s. 55, p. 594 criminal cases, in, previous good, relevant, s. 53, p. 587 definition of, for purposes of, ss. 52-55, p. 595 evidence as to, affecting damages, s. 55, p. 595

Character (contd.)
irrelevant, in civil cases to prove conduct imputed, s. 52, p. 585
meaning of, s. 53, pp. 587, 595
previous bad, not relevant, except in reply, s. 54, p. 589 witness to : § SEE UNDER "WITNESS"

Charts
books, maps and, presumption as to, s. 87, p. 755 presumption as to accuracy, s. 87, p. 756 relevancy of statements in, s. 36, p. 484

Chemical examiner report of, weightage to, s. 45, p. 552

Child
paternity of, blood test, s. 152, p. 960

Circumstantial evidence
meaning of, s. 3, p. 30
oral evidence not excluded, s. 60, p. 630

Citizenship
domicile and, burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 898

Civil Cases
admission in, relevant, when, s. 23, p. 281 character affecting amount of, damages in, s. 55, p. 595 character to prove conduct imputed, not relevant in, s. 52, p. 585 corroboration of testimony in, s. 3, p. 78 criminal character, of, proof in, s. 3, p. 91 proof in, s. 3, p. 91
similar facts, relevancy of, application to, s. 14, p. 226

Civil Courts criminal courts, findings of, not binding on, s. 14, p. 229

Civil Proceedings
criminal proceedings and, evidence in, difference, s. 3, p. 87

Claim cases
burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 876

Claimed transaction, in relative to, meaning of, s. 13, p. 213

Clergy man statement by, as to marriage, relevant fact, s. 32, p. 389

Co-accused confession of, s. 24, p. 296

Co-defendants
co-plaintiffs and, admission by, s. 18, p. 255

Collection of Laws printed or published under authority of Government, presumption as to genuineness of, s. 83, p. 748

Collusion fraud or, judgment obtained by, meaning of, s. 44, p. 522 judgment obtained by, or fraud, proof of, s. 44, p. 519

Commission of offence
Magistrate of police officer not to be compelled to disclose source of information as to, s. 125, p. 1195
Revenue officer not to be compelled to disclose source of information as to commission of offence against public revenue, s. 125, p. 1195 source of information as to, "police officer" interpretation of, s. 125, p. 1197
——meaning of, s. 125, p. 1196

Communications
confidential with legal advisers, s. 129, p. 1207 official § SEE UNDER 'OFFICIAL COMMUNICATION' professional, s. 126, p. 1198 professional, see under "Professional Communication" § SEE UNDER 'PROFESSIONAL COMMUNICATIONS

Company Resolution
burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 876

Company
estoppel against, s. 115, p. 1065

Complaints
immediate, illustration (j) and (k) of section 8, s. 8, p. 134 original evidence, admissibility as, s. 8, p. 134 statement against offender and, s. 8, p. 133 statement and, difference, s. 8, p. 133

Compromise deed unregistered, oral agreement as to, s. 92, p. 835

Compromise
burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 892

Computers
evidence as, s. 45, p. 563

Conclusive proof
admission not, but may estop, s. 31, p. 385 birth during marriage, 'during the continuance of a valid marriage between his mother and any man" meaning of, s. 112, p. 952
——in blood test, DNA fingerprinting, s. 112, p. 960
——in, "unless it can be shown that the parties to the marriage had no access to each other" meaning of, s. 112, p. 955
——in, "within two hundred and eighty days after its dissolution, the mother remaining unmarried" meaning of, s. 112, p. 954
——in, evidence of husband and wife, s. 112, p. 958
——in, maintenance, question of, s. 112, p. 959

Conclusive proof (contd.)
——medical evidence as to, s. 112, p. 954
——of legitimacy, s. 112, p. 950 Conclusive proof, meaning of, s. 4, p. 99
definition of, s. 4, p. 93
final judgement, order, etc., s. 41, p. 498 judgements, orders or decrees, not conclusive proof, when, s. 42, p. 509 when not, s. 4, p. 100

Conduct accused of, s. 8, p. 128
——relevancy, s. 8, p. 128
admitted as relevant, instance of, s. 8, p. 138 antecedent to commission of offence, s. 8, p. 130 contemporaneous, as evidence, s. 8, p. 130 definition of, for purpose of s. 8, s. 8, p. 118 eye-witness of, s. 8, p. 129 instances where admitted as relevant, s. 8, p. 138 meaning of, s. 8, Expln. 1, p. 127 previous or subsequent, motive or preparation, relevancy of, s. 8, p. 118 silence of accused, s. 8, p. 135 statement not included in, s. 8, p. 134 subsequent, types of, s. 8, p. 130

Confession
acceptance as a whole, s. 24, p. 316 accused under police custody, by, s. 26, p. 330
——extra-judicial, s. 26, p. 335
——magistrate's presence, in, s. 26, p. 332-335 accused, by affecting himself and co-accused, consideration by court, s. 30, p. 378
——at trial as prosecution evidence, s. 30, p. 378
——retraction of, effect of, s. 30, pp. 381-385
——corroborative evidence, s. 30, p. 380
——by self-exculpatory, implicating other co-accused, not admissible, s. 30, p. 377 ——affecting himself and co-accused, applicability of provisions as to, s. 30, p. 372 ——strict construction of, s. 30, p. 373 ——extent of proof of, constitutional validity of provisions as to, s. 27, p. 338
——not recorded, relevancy of, s. 29, p. 368
——phone received by police officer, admissibility as evidence, s. 27, p. 342
——to be reduced to form of document, s. 91, p. 785
——to be reduced to form of document, s. 92, p. 805
——while in custody of police, not to be proved against, s. 26, p. 327
——police officer to, s. 25, p. 318 ——evidence of accomplice, distinguished, ss. 24, 133, pp. 295, 1236 admissible or not admissible, knowledge of fact gained from, provable, s. 27, p. 343 admission and, distinction, s. 17, p. 245
——distinguished, s. 24, p. 292
admission or, discretionary powers of court, s. 39, p. 492

Confession (contd.)

burden of proof, s. 24, p. 299
co-accused, of, evidence, whether, ss. 3, 24, pp. 37, 296 consideration of proved, affecting person making it and other jointly under trial for same offence, s. 30, p. 370 corroboration of, necessity for, s. 24, p. 315 custody of police officer, while in, s. 26, p. 328 essentials of, s. 24, p. 292
evidentiary value of, s. 24, p. 313
extra-judicial, meaning, ss. 24, 26, pp. 308-313, 335
——stock witness, to, s. 24, p. 313 FIR by accused, if, s. 25, p. 320 inducement, by, temporal nature of, s. 24, p. 297 ——threat or promise caused by, s. 24, p. 301 ——threat or promise, by, when irrelevant in criminal proceeding, s. 24, p. 285 influenced, exclusion of, object of, s. 24, pp. 286-291 ——removal of impression as to, relevancy of, s. 28, p. 364 information received from accused, how much, may be proved, s. 27, p. 335 investigation, during, admission and, s. 21, p. 274 involuntary, s. 24, pp. 296, 297 made after removal of impression caused by inducement, threat or promise, relevancy of, s. 28, p. 363 magistrate, to, admission and, s. 21, p. 274
meaning of, s. 24, p. 292
police officer, in the presence of, s. 25, p. 322
——to, admissibility as evidence, s. 25, p. 317
——to, not to be proved against accused, s. 25, p. 316 ——presence, in, to private individual, s. 25, p. 323 police restraint, under, s. 26, p. 331 private individuals, to, in police officer's presence, s. 25, p. 323 promise of secrecy, under, s. 29, p. 366 recording of, s. 24, p. 292 relevant otherwise, not to become irrelevant because of promise of secrecy, etc., s. 29, p. 366 relevant, otherwise, not to become irrelevant and s. 164 Cr.P.C., complied, s. 29, p. 368 relevant, when, principles, s. 24, p. 286 retracted, s. 30, p. 381
retraction of, effect of, s. 24, pp. 305-308
TADA, under, s. 25, p. 322 use against maker prohibited, s. 25, p. 327 use in favour of maker not prohibited, s. 25, p. 327 value of, joint trial of all accused – for some offence, s. 30, pp. 373, 375, 377 voluntary, party not true, ss. 17, 24, pp. 249, 297 what does not amount to, s. 24, p. 294

Confidential Communication

legal adviser, with compelled, meaning of, s. 129, p. 1208 ——communication with third parties, s. 129, p. 1208

Conjecture

suspicion or, cannot take place of proof, s. 3, p. 85

Consideration
monitary, burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 892

Consolidating Act
Evidence Act, p. 4

Conspiracy act or statements by co-conspirator in reference to common design, as evidence of, s. 10, pp. 166-170 antecedent conduct of conspirators, s. 10, p. 176 anything said or done or written by co-conspirator, meaning of, s. 10, p. 173 charge of, agreement as to, s. 10, p. 171 common intention, s. 10, p. 174 components of, s. 10, p. 171 confession by co-accused, retraction of, s. 10, pp. 177, 178 criminal breach of trust and, s. 10, p. 180
English and Indian law, difference, s. 10, p. 175 evidence of approver in, s. 10, p. 178 evidence of, time element as to adducing facts, s. 10, p. 178 hearsay evidence of, s. 10, pp. 174, 180 Indian Penal Code, under, s. 10, pp. 179-180
meaning of, s. 10, p. 171
one, by, against other, s. 10, p. 176 prima facie evidence of, s. 10, p. 170
proof of, s. 10, p. 172
two or more persons, by, s. 10, p. 171

Conspirator
things said, done, etc., by, in reference to common design, s. 10, p. 166

Constitution waiver and, s. 115, p. 1104

Constitutional validity
s. 102, of, s. 102, p. 894
s. 27 of, s. 27, p. 338

Construction of Statute preamble, object and role in, p. 4
Statement of objects and reasons as, p. 3

Constructive notice
meaning of, s. 14, p. 220

Contemporaneous agreement varying terms of document, evidence, who may give, s. 99, p. 857

Contemporaneous statements forming part of same transaction res gestae, of, s. 6, p. 110

Contempt of court
burden of proof, in, s. 101, p. 873

Contempt proceedings
Applicability of Act to, s. 1, p. 10
document, in, secondary evidence as to, s. 65, p. 661

Contraband Articles
burden of proof as to, s. 101, p. 879

Contract Act burden of proof under, bailor-bailee, s. 101, p. 881

Contract
burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 895 evidence of terms of, etc., reduced to form of document, evidence of, s. 91, p. 777 reduced in writing, oral evidence, exclusion of, s. 91, p. 784 terms contained in several documents, exclusion of oral evidence as to, s. 91, p. 799 terms of, s. 92, p. 812

Conversation statement forming part of, s. 39, p. 491 ——document, electronic record, books or series of letters, what evidence to be given, s. 39, p. 491

Co-owner
admission by, s. 18, p. 254
——one of the, s. 18, p. 254

Co-plaintiffs co-defendants and, admission of, s. 18, p. 255

Corroboration
civil cases, in, s. 3, p. 78
confession of, necessity for, s. 24, p. 315
dying declaration, of, s. 32, p. 407
evidence by accomplice, of, s. 133, p. 1230

Corroborative evidence, s. 30, p. 380
civil cases, in, s. 3, p. 78
meaning of, s. 3, p. 77

Counsel
admission by, s. 18, p. 257
rights and responsibility of, s. 150, p. 1294 solicitors and, admissions by, s. 18, p. 256

Counterparts documents executed in, s. 62, p. 634

Course of Business books of account regularly kept in, meaning of, s. 34, p. 463 Certificate of posting presumption as to, s. 16, p. 236 computer print, hearsay if, s. 16, p. 236 endorsement of refusal, relevancy of, s. 16, p. 235

Course of Business (contd.) examination of postman as to endorsement of refusal, s. 16, p. 236 existence of, presumption under other Acts, s. 16, p. 234 ——relevant fact, when, s. 16, p. 233
meaning of, s. 16, p. 233
non-return of posted letter, relevancy, s. 16, p. 235 post, articles sent by, s. 16, p. 234 postal mark, relevancy in, s. 16, p. 235 presumption as to letters sent by post in common, s. 16, p. 235 public or private office in, s. 16, p. 234 statements made in facts showing, relevant fact, s. 32, p. 389 unsigned acknowledgment receipt presumption of service, s. 16, p. 236

Court martial application to Act of, judicial proceedings before, s. 1, p. 7

Court
appellate, appreciation of evidence by, s. 3, p. 84
bill of exchange, s. 114, p. 984 common course of natural events, s. 114, p. 971 continuance of existence of facts, s. 114, p. 986 customs, recognise of, by, s. 13, p. 202 definition of, s. 3, pp. 13, 17
——legally authorised to take evidence, meaning of, s. 3, p. 20 discretion of, permit party to put question to own witness, s. 154, p. 1301 examination of witness by, s. 138, p.1261 facts, to take judicial notice of, § SEE UNDER "JUDICIAL NOTICE" government and official acts, s. 114, pp. 990-994 handwriting, comparison by, s. 73, p. 706 incompetency of, judgement by, proof of, s. 44, p. 519 issue of warrant, s. 114, p. 990 judicial and official acts, s. 114, pp. 986-990, 994 judicial proceedings held to be that of, tribunals, s. 3, p. 19
meaning of, s. 3, p. 17
non-examination of witnesses, s. 114, p. 973
notary public, endorsement by, s. 114, p. 994
Persona designata, test of, s. 3, p. 18 possession of stolen property, account for, s. 114, pp. 973-977, 979 ——extension of principle applicable to other charges, s. 114, pp. 980-982 ——joint, s. 114, pp. 977-979 powers of, limit time for examination of witness, to, s. 138, p. 1262
——put question to witness, to, s. 138, p. 1262 presumption by, existence of certain facts, as to, s. 114, pp. 971, 984, 986-995, 973-979, 997-1005, 980-982, 1007-1011, 1013, 1016, 1017
——accounts, s. 114, p. 1018
——adoption, s. 114, p. 1025
——agricultural operation, s. 114, p. 1042
——attestation, s. 114, p. 1018
——authenticity of document, s. 114, p. 1018
——benami cases, s. 114, p. 1018
——burden of proof, s. 114, p. 1027
——common course of business, s. 114, pp. 998-1002
——criminal law, under, s. 114, p. 1019

Court (contd.)

——custom, s. 114, p. 1021
——death, s. 114, p. 1022
——deeds, s. 114, p. 1022
——delay, sufficient cause, s. 114, p. 1042
——discharge of obligation, s. 114, p. 1017
——election, s. 114, p. 1023
——evidence, inconsistency in, s. 114, p. 1042 ——existence of certain facts, as to, judicial and official acts, s. 114, p. 994 ——existence of certain facts, as to, regd. postal article/letter, delivery of, s. 114, p. 994 ——existence of certain facts, as to, s. 114, p. 966 ——fact in dispute, s. 114, p. 1017
——failure of material witness to give evidence in criminal cases, s. 114, pp. 1007-1011
——failure to undergo medical examination, s. 114, p. 1016 ——general, s. 114, pp. 1034, 1040
——dishonour of cheque, s. 114, p. 1034 ——repeal of Act, in, s. 114, p. 1040
——grant, lost, s. 114, p. 1030
——grant, s. 114, p. 1023
——Hindu law, applicability of, s. 114, p. 1024
——insanity, s. 114, p. 1029
——intention or knowledge of action, s. 114, p. 1029
——interpretation of statute, in, s. 114, p. 1040
——joint property, s. 114, p. 1026
——judicial and official acts, s. 114, pp. 995, 997, 998
——notice under an Act, s. 114, p. 997
——order passed after regular inquiry, s. 114, p. 998
——public analyst's report, s. 114, p. 997 ——record of rights, entries in, s. 114, p. 995
——revenue records, entries in, s. 114, p. 995
——valid title of property, s. 114, p. 998
——landlord-tenant relationship, in, s. 114, p. 1040
——legitimacy, s. 114, p. 1033
——marriage, s. 114, p. 1031
——minutes of meetings, confirmation of, s. 114, p. 1042
——Mohammadan Law, under s. 114, p. 1034
——money transactions, s. 114, p. 1034
——mortgage, s. 114, p. 1034
——NDPS Act, under, s. 114, p. 1021
——negligence, s. 114, p. 1035
——non-production of records by detenue, s. 114, p. 1016
——notice, service of, s. 114, p. 1036
——order specifying society as co-operative society, s. 114, p. 1024 ——ownership and possession, s. 114, p. 1037
——partition of property, s. 114, p. 1028
——partnership, s. 114, p. 1033
——pledge, s. 114, p. 1034
——postal service, s. 114, pp. 999-1002
——Prevention of Corruption Act, under, s. 114, p. 1024
——principal-agent relationship, s. 114, p. 1033

Court (contd.)
——rape, prosecution for certain, absence of consent, s. 114-A, p. 1043 ——refusal to answer questions and claim of privilege, s. 114, p. 1016 ——religious endowments, s. 114, p. 1042
——settlement, s. 114, p. 1023
——signature on blank paper, s. 114, p. 1043
——statutory, s. 114, p. 1039
——student's performance in examinations, in, s. 114, p. 1042 ——title deeds, s. 114, p. 1034
——user, s. 114, p. 1037
——when cannot be drawn, as to, s. 114, pp. 1014, 1015
——account books, s. 114, p. 1015
——documents, s. 114, p. 1014
——wills, in, s. 114, p. 1038
——withholding alibi evidence, s. 114, p. 1016 ——evidence, s. 114, pp. 1002-1005 ——material witness, s. 114, p. 1005
——account books, s. 114, p. 1013
——documents by parties in civil proceedings, s. 114, p. 1011
——working order of gun, s. 114, p. 1021
——general, s. 114, p. 1024
——undivided Hindu family, state of union of members of, s. 114, p. 1024 procedure of, in case of question being asked without reasonable grounds, s. 150, p. 1293 proceedings not held to be that of, s. 3, p. 20 question to be asked, to decide, proper questions, s. 148, p. 1290 questions intended to insult or annoy, to forbid, s. 152, p. 1296 registering officer, record by, s. 114, p. 994 sanction orders, s. 114, p. 994 testimony of accomplice, s. 114, p. 982 to decide, "any such question" meaning of, s. 148, p. 1290 witness compelled by, to answer, proper questions, s. 148, p. 1290 ——refusal, adverse inference from, s. 148(4), p. 1288
——to decide, when, s. 148, p. 1288

Criminal Breach of Trust conspiracy and, s. 10, p. 180

Criminal cases
admissions in, estoppel, and, s. 31, p. 387
burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 868 judgment in, admissible in civil suit, s. 13, p. 209 previous good character relevant, s. 53, p. 587
proof in, s. 3, p. 88

Criminal Courts
findings of, not binding on civil court, s. 14, p. 229

Criminal Procedure Code same transaction in, s. 6, p. 113

Criminal Proceeding
civil proceeding and evidence in, difference, s. 3, p. 87

Criminal Proceeding (contd.)
confession caused by inducement threat or promise, not relevant in, when, s. 24, p. 285
document, in, secondary evidence as to, s. 65, p. 661

Criminal Prosecution
declarant exposed to, statement of, s. 32, p. 431

Criminal Rashness facts showing existence of, s. 14, p. 221

Criminal Trial enquiry or, proceeding, deemed to be, s. 33, p. 458

Crop valuation expert report on, deposition by expert, s. 45, p. 555

Cross-examination adverse party, by right and opportunity to, s. 33, p. 454 committing court statements, admissions of, s. 145, p. 1281 court witness, of, court's leave for, s. 165, p. 1350 delayed, s. 138, p. 1263
hostile witness, of, s. 138, p. 1260 improper questions in, s. 148, p. 1290 leading questions allowed in, s. 143, p. 1266 party, by, of his own witness, s. 154, p. 1301 person called to produce document, not a witness for, s. 139, p. 1263 previous statement, witness of, use of, for, s. 145, p. 1283 proper questions in, s. 148, p. 1290 relevant facts, must relate to, s. 138, p. 1253 witness called by court, of, s. 138, p. 1258 witness of, omission to, effect, ss. 137, 138, pp. 1250, 1258
——previous statements in writing, as to, s. 145, p. 1270
——protected, if, defamatory questions, putting, when, s. 149, p. 1292
——question lawful in, indecent and scandalous questions, in, s. 146, p. 1287
——s. 137, p. 1250
——witness to character, of, s. 140, p. 1265
——co-accused/co-defendant, of, s. 138, p. 1258
——absence of, opportunity to, s. 138, p. 1255 ——adverse party's right as to writing used for refreshing memory of, s. 161, p. 1337
——general, s. 138, p.1256
——previous written statements, as to, s. 145, p. 1271
——question lawful in, "to discover who he is, etc.", s. 146, p. 1285 ——question lawful in, 'shaking the credit by injuring the character", s. 146, p. 1286 ——question lawful in, s. 146, p. 1284
——range, s. 138, p. 1255
——several accused, defendant, s. 138, p. 1257
——tendering for, s. 138, p. 1259
——whom, by, s. 138, p. 1254
——no right to, s. 138, p. 1260

Custom
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 896
Courts recognise, when, s. 13, p. 202 existence of proving, s. 13, p. 197
——opinion of persons likely to know of, s. 48, p. 573
——Riwaj-i-am as to, s. 48, p. 574
——Wilson's Manual as to, s. 48, p. 574 family, proof of, s. 13, p. 198 forms of, family, proof of, s. 13, p. 198 ——usage of family and, difference, s. 13, p. 198 general and statutory, s. 13, p. 196
general, s. 13, p. 200
law and, s. 13, p. 196
local, s. 13, p. 200
meaning of, s. 46, p. 571
opinion as to existence of right or, s. 48, p. 571 opposed to morality or public policy, s. 13, p. 197 party setting up, proof of, s. 13, p. 202 proof of, s. 13, pp. 195, 201 recognised, meaning of, s. 13, p. 214 requisite of, reasonable and certain, s. 13, p. 197
——ancient, s. 13, p. 196
——opposed to morality and public policy, not, s. 13, p. 197 right or, deed or will, etc., statement in, creating, s. 32, p. 441
——when in question, relevant facts in, s. 13, p. 193
Riwaj-I-Am, of, s. 13, p. 203 special, s. 13, p. 200 trade, s. 13, p. 200
valid, requisites of, s. 13, p. 196
Wazib-Ul-Arz, of, s. 13, p. 204
what facts deemed relevant in proving existence of, s. 13, p. 196

Customary Right, s. 13, p. 203 statements giving opinion as to, s. 32, p. 431

D

Damages
assessment of, s. 12, p. 192
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 896
character affecting, amount of, s. 55, p. 594 character as affecting, relevancy of, s. 55, p. 595 suits for, facts tending to enable court to determine amount, relevancy of, s. 12, p. 192

Death
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 891
dying declaration as to cause of, relevant fact, s. 32(1), p. 389 person known to have been alive within 30 years, of, presumption as to, rebuttal of, s. 107, p. 930 poison, due to, medical opinion, s. 45, p. 549 presumption as to, does not extend to date of death, s. 108, p. 931 presumption of, date on which question raised, s. 108, p. 931 time of, medical opinion as to, s. 45, p. 548

Declaration maker, against interest of, s. 32, p. 429

Declaratory suits
burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 897

Decree holder judgment debtor questioning decree, estoppel of, s. 115, p. 1129

Decree consent/compromise, estoppel by, s. 115, p. 1124 execution of, burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 877 final, in probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction, relevancy of, s. 41, p. 498 judgements, orders or, not specified in ss. 40-42, relevancy of, s. 43, p. 513 judgment order or, other than those in s. 41, relevancy of, s. 42, p. 509 possession, as to, admissibility, s. 13, p. 210

Deeds family settlement, § SEE "FAMILY SETTLEMENT DEED" lease : see "Lease Deeds" mortgage, § SEE "MORTGAGE DEEDS".
oral evidence as to, s. 91, p. 794
sale, § SEE "SALE DEEDS" will or, family affairs, relating to, statement made in, relevant fact, s. 32, p. 389
——statement made in, family affairs, s. 32(6), p. 440

Defamation libel and, burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 873

Defamatory question cross-examination whether protected when putting, s. 149, p. 1292

Defendant
admission by, s. 18, p. 253

Departmental proceedings
applicability of rules of evidence to, s. 1, p. 8

Deposition matter required by law in form of document, whether, s. 91, p. 785 person authorised by law, before, admissibility, s. 33, p. 446 production of, necessary, if, s. 92, p. 805
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 905

Digital Signature Certificate
meaning of, s. 3, pp. 14, 15
presumption as to, s. 85-C, p. 754

Digital signatures certificate of, s. 73-A, p. 712
meaning of, s. 3, pp. 14, 16
opinion as to, certifying authority's, under Information Technology Act, s. 47A, p. 570

Digital signatures (contd.)
——relevant, when, s. 47, p. 570
presumption as to, s. 85-B, p. 753 proof as to verification of, controller, definition of, s. 73-A, pp. 712, 713 secure, proof of, s. 67-A, p. 679 verification of, proof as to, s. 73-A, p. 712

Direct Evidence
Indirect evidence and, comparison, s. 3, p. 34

Disciplinary Proceedings
burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 898 rules of evidence, applicability to, s. 3, p. 83

Disclosure statement accused, of, proof by independent witness, of, s. 27, p. 342 —recorded, absence of signature or thumb impression on, s. 27, p. 341
admissibility of, s. 27, p. 343
signature or thumb impression of accused, absence in, offer, s. 27, p. 341

Discovery information leading to, s. 27, p. 355 place of, information by accused leading to, s. 27, p. 354

Discrimination burden of proof to prove, s. 101, p. 872

Disproved facts, when, s. 3, p. 92

Document(s)
admission contained in, s. 31, p. 388 ambiguity patent, s. 93, p. 847 ambiguity, no, s. 93, p. 847 ambiguous, exclusion of evidence to explain or amend, s. 93, p. 844 attestation of, meaning of, s. 68, pp. 681-683
——witness of, s. 68, p. 683 attested, party to, admission of execution by, s. 70, p. 695 carbon copy of, primary evidence, as, s. 62, p. 635 carbon copy, secondary evidence, as, s. 63, p. 641 certified copies, secondary evidence, as, s. 63, p. 638 claim of privilege in public interest, as to, court's right to inspect, s. 162, p. 1340 conduct of parties as to, s. 91, p. 782 contents of, proof of, ss. 61, 67, pp. 631, 678 ——proved by oral evidence, when, s. 144, p. 1270 conterfoils, secondary evidence, as, s. 63, p. 640 copies made from or compared with original, secondary evidence, as, s. 63, p. 643 copies of copies, secondary evidence as, s. 63, p. 645 copies prepared by mechanical process, secondary evidence, as, s. 63, p. 640 counterparts, secondary evidence, as, s. 63, p. 645
definition of, s. 3, p. 14

Document(s) (contd.)

enforcement of, not to be used in suit for, s. 68, p. 690 evidence as to, in unmeaning reference to existing facts, s. 95, p. 851 evidence of agreement varying terms of, who may give, s. 99, p. 857 evidence of terms of contracts, etc., reduced to form of, s. 91, p. 774 executed in counterparts, s. 62, p. 635 execution of, burden of proof in, ss. 89, 102, pp. 760, 900
——denial of, s. 68, p. 688
——meaning of, ss. 67, 68, pp. 677, 687
——pardanashin women, by, s. 68, p. 684
——proof of, exceptions to rule of, s. 68, p. 689 genuineness of, proof of, s. 22, p. 280 giving, as evidence of, called for and produced on notice, s. 163, p. 1341 handwriting in, proof of execution of, s. 67, pp. 675-677 interpretation or construction of, s. 61, p. 633 matter required by law to be in form of, confession, s. 91, p. 785
——deposition, whether, s. 91, p. 785
——meaning of, ss. 3, 65, 91, 92, pp. 25, 653, 786, 804 not inter partes, relevancy of, s. 11, p. 191 not required by law to be attested, proof of, s. 72, p. 700 oral accounts of contents of document, secondary evidence, as, s. 63, p. 646 oral admission as to contents of, when relevant, s. 22, p. 279 oral evidence, exclusion against application to existing facts, s. 94, p. 848 person called to produce, no cross-examination of, s. 139, p. 1263 photograph, of, s. 62, p. 636
——primary evidence, as, s. 62, p. 636
——secondary evidence, as, s. 63, p. 640
presumption as to (see "Presumptions"), ss. 80-88, pp. 738, 743, 746, 748, 749, 754, 755, 756, 758 printed notices, primary evidence, as, s. 62, p. 636 private, s. 75, p. 713 production of, judge's power to order, must be based on relevant and proved fact, s. 165, p. 1351
——judge's power to order, witness not compelled for, when, s. 165, p. 1351
——refusal of, court's presumption u/s. 89, s. 164, p. 1344
——court's power as to, s. 165, p. 1350
——judge's power to order, s. 164, p. 1344
——privilege and writ of certiorari, s. 163, p. 1341
——refusal of, subsequent use of, s. 164, p. 1343
——witness, by, s. 162, p. 1338
——which another person having possession could refuse to produce, s. 131, p. 1212 proof of, objection to mode of, s. 67, p. 678 ——primary evidence, by, s. 64, p. 647 public, s. 74, p. 713 refreshing memory, witness, by, use of, in, s. 159, p. 1328 registered, proof of execution of, s. 68, p. 686 registration certificate, value of, s. 67, p. 678 registration copy, secondary evidence, as, s. 63, p. 647 registration of, proof of, if, s. 67, p. 678 required by law to be attested, meaning of, s. 68, p. 681 required to be attested, proof of execution of, s. 68, p. 680

Document(s) (contd.)
secondary evidence, as to inconvenience in examining original, s. 65, p. 665
——certified copy, s. 65, p. 663
——criminal proceedings, in, s. 65, p. 661
——existence of original admitted in writing, s. 65, p. 657
——lost will, s. 65, p. 662
——original a public document, s. 65, p. 663
——original destroyed or lost, s. 65, pp. 658-661
——original not easily moveable, s. 65, p. 663
——proof of execution, s. 65, p. 667
——may be given, s. 65, p. 650
——certified copy permitted under law, when, s. 65, p. 665
——contempt proceedings, in, s. 65, p. 662
——original consisting of several accounts,, s. 65, p. 665 signature or handwriting in, proof of, modes, s. 67, pp. 674, 679 signed or written, s. 47, p. 567 statement forming part of construction, electronic record, book series of letter, what evidence to be given, s. 39, p. 491 tape records, primary evidence, as, s. 62, p. 636
——————secondary evidence, as, s. 63, p. 642 terms of contracts, etc. reduced to form of, proved, evidence of oral agreement as to, excluded, s. 92, p. 800 terms of, varying, meaning of, s. 97, p. 857 testimony affects stated in, mentioned in s. 159, s. 160, p. 1333 thirty years old, may presume, meaning of, s. 90, p. 770 ——presumption, as to, rebuttable, s. 90, p. 771
——prima facie proof of, s. 90, p. 762 ——proper custody, meaning of, s. 90, p. 763 ——presumptions as to (see "Presumptions"), s. 90, p. 760 to contain all terms, s. 91, p. 780 translation of, s. 162, p. 1338 unregistered, admission of execution of, s. 58, p. 618 using, as evidence, of production of which refused on notice, s. 164, p. 1343 varying terms of, meaning of, s. 99, p. 857

Documentary evidence, s. 3, p. 35 exclusion of oral evidence by, s. 91, p. 780 objection to, stage of raising, s. 64, p. 650 production of original document, notice u/s. 66 for, failure, s. 65, p. 656 § SEE UNDER "DOCUMENT"

Documentation
attestation of, proof of, s. 68, p. 685

Documents
admission of, s. 58, p. 617 certified copies of, presumption as to genuineness of, s. 79, p. 736 contents of, exception to proof by oral evidence, s. 59, p. 621 counterparts of, s. 62, p. 635 executed in several parts, primary evidence in, s. 62, p. 634 inter parties not, admissibility, s. 13, p. 211 interpretation of, general principles, s. 93, p. 846 privileged and non-privileged, s. 162, p. 1341

Documents (contd.)
production of, privilege claimed on grounds of public interest, court, right of, in, s. 162, p. 1340 proof of, attesting witness not found, when, s. 69, p. 694 public, § SEE "PUBLIC DOCUMENTS" registered under Registration Act, evidence as to, s. 91, p. 792 secondary evidence as to, notice to produce, rule as to, in, s. 66, p. 670
——objections to, s. 65, p. 666
sham, not, s. 61, p. 633 withholding of, civil cases, in, presumption in, court, for, as to, s. 114, p. 1011

Domestic Tribunal proceedings before, applicability of rules of evidence to, s. 1, p. 8

Domicile
citizenship and, burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 898

Dowry death cruelty or harassment before, proof of, s. 113-B, p. 965 definition of, s. 113-B, p. 964
presumption as to, s. 113-B, p. 964

Driving Licence validity of, burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 908

Dumb witness : § SEE UNDER "WITNESS"

Dying declaration
proof of, s. 32, p. 406
admissibility of, s. 32, p. 410
cause of death as to, relevant fact, s. 32(1), p. 389 complete, should be, s. 32, p. 421 corroboration of, s. 32, p. 407
——if necessary, s. 32, pp. 407-410 corroborative evidence, as on survival, s. 157, p. 1323
evidence, as, s. 32, p. 393
expectation of death, in, s. 32, p. 398 first information report as, s. 32, p. 425 fitness of declarant, s. 32, p. 399 language of, s. 32, p. 396 medical evidence and, s. 32, p. 418 part of, use of, s. 32, p. 421 person making, clauses to live statement not admissible, s. 32, p. 396 plurality of, s. 32, p. 419 precision of, s. 32, p. 420 recording of, delay in, s. 32, p. 405
——doctor on duty, by, s. 32, p. 424 ——investigating officer, by, s. 32, p. 422
——magistrate, by, s. 32, p. 421
——police officer, by, s. 32, p. 422
——procedure for, s. 32, p. 405
relevancy of, s. 32, p. 410
scribe non-production of, effect, s. 32, p. 424

Dying declaration (contd.)
sole basis of conviction, when, s. 32, p. 417 statement as to cause of death, s. 32, pp. 396, 397 statement as to circumstances leading to death, s. 32, pp. 396, 401 time of, proximity between death and, s. 32, p. 403 tutored, s. 32, p. 425 weight of, s. 32, pp. 411-417

E

Easements right in, burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 898

Ejectment suit for, burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 899

Election cases
burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 899

Electoral Rolls
entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 477

Electronic agreements presumption as to, s. 85A, p. 753

Electronic data evidence of statement in, extent of proof, s. 39, p. 491

Electronic Form
entries in, relevant, when, s. 34, p. 461 gazette in, presumption as to, s. 81A, p. 745
meaning of, s. 3, pp. 14, 16

Electronic messages
presumption as to, s. 88A, p. 758

Electronic Records
admissibility of, s. 65B, p. 667
contents of, exception to proof by oral evidence, s. 59, p. 621 contents of, proof of, s. 65-B, p. 669 digital signature on, proof of, s. 67-A, p. 679
evidence, as, s. 3, p. 41
five years old, presumption of, s. 90A, p. 774
meaning of, s. 3, pp. 14, 16
oral admission as to contents of, relevant, when, s. 22A, p. 280 oral, admission of, contents of, s. 22A, p. 281
presumption as to, s. 85-B, p. 753 production of, which another person having possession could refuse to produce, s. 131, p. 1212 special provision as evidence re, s. 65A, p. 667 statement forming part of, what evidence to be given, s. 39, p. 491

England presumption as to document admissible in, without proof of seal or signature, s. 82, p. 746

English Law
admission by persons expressly referred to by party to suit, by, on, s. 20, p. 264 child witness, inquiry under, s. 118, p. 1157 conspiracy, on, Indian law, difference, s. 10, p. 175 ownership, burden of proof as to, s. 110, p. 937 similar facts, relevancy of, on, s. 14, p. 221

Escrow
oral evidence as to, s. 92, p. 832

Essential Commodities Act offences under, burden of proof, in, s. 101, p. 876

Estoppel, s. 115, p. 1045 acceptance of conditions, by, s. 115, p. 1073 accepting costs, by, s. 115, p. 1073 accepting earnest money, by, s. 115, p. 1074 acceptor of bill of exchange, bailee or licensee, of, s. 117, p. 1145 acquiescence, by, illegal or irregular procedure, in, s. 115, p. 1060 ——jurisdiction, to, s. 115, pp. 1058, 1060-1062
——standing by, s. 115, p. 1062
admission, may operate as, s. 31, p. 385 ——not conclusive proof but may operate as, s. 31, p. 385
——by, s. 115, p. 1131
adoption, conduct, by, in, s. 115, p. 1122 agreement, by, s. 115, p. 1126 alienation of joint family property widow, s. 115, p. 1121 allottee under West Bengal Co-operative Societies Act, of, s. 116, p. 1137
'and to act upon such belief' meaning of, s. 115, p. 1057 approbate and reprobate, s. 115, pp. 1067-1073 arbitration participation in, by, s. 115, p. 1114 attestation, by, s. 115, p. 1130 Bank, against, s. 115, p. 1117 benamidar by, s. 116, p. 1142
burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 884
causal statement, no, s. 115, p. 1092
Civil Procedure Code under, s. 115, p. 1116 company, against, s. 115, p. 1065 composite fee levy, of, against, s. 115, p. 1108 compromise decree, as to, s. 115, p. 1124 concession by party, in, s. 115, p. 1131 concession for counsel, by, s. 115, p. 1131 conduct, by, s. 115, pp. 1051-1053 consent decree, as to, s. 115, p. 1124 constructive, s. 115, p. 1048 contract, by, s. 115, p. 1126 co-shares of landlord, of, s. 116, p. 1137 deed, by, s. 115, p. 1079 education and, s. 115, p. 1093

Estoppel (contd.)

employment and, s. 115, p. 1097 equitable, s. 115, p. 1099
estoppel against, s. 115, p. 1049
Evidence Act under, s. 115, p. 1117
Excise Act under, s. 115, p. 1116 execution proceedings, in, s. 115, p. 1074 family arrangement and, s. 115, p. 1123 feeding the, principle of, s. 115, p. 1049 firm, against, s. 115, p. 1065 forged endorsement, s. 117, p. 1146 future promise, if, s. 115, p. 1054 illatom adoption, in, s. 115, p. 1123 in pais, s. 115, p. 1079
infant or minor, by, s. 115, p. 1050 instances of, s. 115, p. 1120
intentionally causing or permitting another to believe a thing to be ture, meaning of, s. 115, p. 1055 issue, s. 115, p. 1077 joint family, against, s. 115, p. 1066 judgment debtor and decree holder, by, s. 115, p. 1129 kinds of, s. 115, p. 1075 landlord and tenant, s. 115, p. 1127 landlord, garnishee, of, s. 116, p. 1137 legitimate/reasonable expectation, doctrine of, s. 115, p. 1100 maintenance allowance, as to, s. 115, p. 1123 minor, against, s. 115, p. 1066 mistake, facts and, s. 115, p. 1103 mortgage of trust property as own, in, s. 115, p. 1121 mortgagor and mortgagee, of, s. 116, p. 1142
Municipal Act under, s. 115, p. 1117 negligence and, s. 115, p. 1063 no waiver against constitution, s. 115, p. 1104 partner, against, s. 115, p. 1064 payment of instalments, in, s. 115, p. 1108 person claiming in different capacity, against, s. 115, p. 1067 pleadings and proof as to, s. 115, p. 1107 point of law, on, s. 115, p. 1117 pre-emption and, s. 115, p. 1129
presumption and, s. 115, p. 1049 principle, s. 115, pp. 1046-1048 promissory, applicability of, s. 115, pp. 1048, 1080 ——doctrine of, s. 115, p. 1088
——government and, s. 115, p. 1083
——principles governing, s. 11, p. 1083 proof, practice and procedure, as to, s. 115, p. 1133 provision not exhaustive, s. 116, p. 1145 public interest, against, s. 115, p. 1119 public policy against, s. 115, p. 1119 real facts if known to other person, not, s. 115, p. 1056 recital in deed, of, s. 115, p. 1053 record, by, res judicata, and, s. 115, p. 1075

Estoppel (contd.)

Rent Control Act under, s. 115, p. 1114 representation in, clear and unambiguous to be, s. 115, p. 1058 representatives, against, s. 115, p. 1064
s. 41 of Transfer of Property Act, under, s. 115, p. 1049
silence, by, s. 115, p. 1058
statute or law, individual benefit, for, s. 115, p. 1105 statutes, no, against, s. 115, p. 1109
Supreme Court direction, against, s. 115, p. 1119 tax law, no, against, s. 115, p. 1113 tenant and of licence of person in possession, of, s. 116, p. 1133 tenant precluded from denying landlord title during continuance of tenancy, s. 116, p. 1138 tenant of, possession of property necessary, whether, s. 116, pp. 1135, 1137
——immovable property, interpretation of, s. 116, p. 1138
——plea of eviction, s. 116, p. 1140 tenant, person claiming through, if, s. 116, p. 1138 trustee, against, s. 115, p. 1065 under other statutes, s. 115, p. 1048 valuation of suit/appeal, as to, s. 115, p. 1130 void transactions, against, s. 115, p. 1120 waiver and, difference, s. 115, p. 1102 waiver notice, by, s. 115, p. 1108 waiver, principles of, in, s. 115, p. 1101

Evacuee Property Act

burden of proof under, s. 101, p. 877

Evidence Act

consolidating Act, p. 4

Evidence

admissibility of, judges to decide, as to, s. 5, 136, pp. 104, 1248-1250
——objection to decided as it arises, s. 5, p. 107
——inadmissibility duty of court to give reasons for, s. 5, p. 107 admissible and inadmissible mixed, s. 5, p. 107 admission of, by parties consent, s. 5, p. 108 ——rejection of, improper, no new trial for, s. 167, p. 1353 ——rejection, improper, of, no new trial for, provisions applicable to action under letters patent, s. 167, p. 1355 admission/rejection, improper, of, no new trial for, provisions applicable to civil and criminal proceedings, s. 167, pp. 1354, 1355 affairs of state, as to § SEE UNDER "AFFAIRS OF STATE", s. 123, p. 1176 aggressor, of, determination, s. 3, p. 70 agreement between parties not to give, court's inference as to, s. 23, p. 284 agreement varying terms of document, who may give, of, s. 99, p. 857 application of, language to one of two sets of facts to neither of which whole correctly applies, as to, ss. 3, 97, pp. 63, 854
——language which can apply to one only of several persons, as to, s. 96, p. 853
——appellate court, by, s. 3, p. 84
——dacoity and murder, in, s. 3, p. 69
——in alibi, s. 11, p. 186

Evidence (contd.)

——place of occurrence, presence at, s. 3, p. 68
——source of light, s. 3, p. 69
——testimony of victim of sexual assault, s. 3, p. 69 automatic photographs, as, s. 45, p. 562 benefit of doubt and, s. 3, p. 90 books of account, entries in, as, § SEE ALSO "BOOK OF ACCOUNT", s. 34, p. 461 burden of proving fact to be proved to make, admissible, s. 104, p. 910 cases in which secondary relating to documents may be given, s. 66, p. 671 civil and criminal proceedings, in, distinguished, s. 3, p. 87
classification of, s. 3, p. 29
computers, as, s. 45, p. 563 conclusive proof in, s. 4, p. 99 conclusive, s. 3, p. 37
confession of co-accused, if, s. 3, p. 37 contemporaneous conduct as, s. 8, p. 130 counsel, not prevented from giving, s. 23, p. 285 credibility of witness, question of, in, s. 3, p. 79 criminal cases, in, waiver of consent, s. 5, p. 108
definition of, s. 3, p. 14 delay in lodging of FIR, s. 3, p. 70 delay or discrepancy in FIR, effect on, s. 3, p. 70 demeanour of witness in, s. 3, p. 81 direct and indirect, compared, s. 3, p. 34 document in unmeaning reference to existing facts, as to, s. 95, p. 851 documentary, s. 3, p. 35 dumb witnesses, writings and signs, by, deemed oral, s. 119, p. 1167 electronic records, as, s. 3, p. 41 exclusion of, for contradiction of answer to question testing veracity, witness, of, s. 153, p. 1297 exclusion of, of oral agreement, when, s. 92, p. 800 extrinsic, admissibility of, s. 94, p. 850 fact in issue and relevant facts, may be, s. 5, p. 104 fact of, by a person disentitled to prove, is not, s. 5, p. 109 facts in issue and relevant fact of, "and no other" meaning of, s. 5, p. 104 facts which could be, heard, of, s. 60,p. 627 ——perceived by sense, of, s. 60, p. 628
——seen, of, s. 60, p. 627
finger prints, presence of, at scene of occurrence, s. 3, p. 68 FIR, substantive piece of evidence, not, s. 145, p. 1276
——interpolated, s. 3, p. 71
first information report, as, s. 6, p. 116 giving, as of document called for and produced on notice, s. 163, p. 1341 hearsay, not admissible, exceptions, ss. 3, 32, pp. 37, 391 ——rule of inadmissibility of, exceptions to, s. 32, p. 391 hypnotism, by, s. 45, p. 564 inadmissibility of, s. 5, p. 105 injuries on body of victim, in, s. 3, p. 63 inquest report, as, s. 3, p. 41
——use of in, s. 145, p. 1276
instances of, s. 3, p. 39
judge, of, s. 3, p. 37

Evidence (contd.)

judicial proceeding, in, witness by, s. 33, p. 445
Last seen, s. 3, p. 39
law of, functions of, s. 3, p. 29
——historical background, s.1, p. 1
——preamble to, p. 1
——statement of objects and reasons, p. 3
——testimonial compulsion, s. 118, p. 1167 legal authority to take, s. 3, p. 20 light, presence of, s. 3, p. 69 lodging of FIR, police station, not of concerned, effect on, s. 3, p. 71 material thing, as to, s. 60, p. 630 matters in writing, as to, s. 144, p. 1269 meaning of illegible characters, etc., as to, s. 98, p. 855
meaning of, s. 3, p. 27
ministers and legislators, speech of, as, s. 3, p. 39
mis-appreciation of, s. 3, p. 69 misleading, by accused, s. 3, p. 82 mode of obtaining, s. 3, p. 70 modern scientific methods of, s. 45, p. 562 motive as, when loses its importance, s. 8, p. 121 objections to, waiver of, s. 5, p. 108 opinion expressed in treatise, s. 60, p. 629 oral, discrepancies, omissions and improvements in, s. 3, p. 71 panchnama, as, s. 3, p. 40 presumption is not, s. 4, p. 96 presumption, not, s. 4, p. 96 presumptive, s. 3, p. 37 previous and subsequent events, of, to show intention, s. 14, p. 218 prima facie, s. 3, p. 37 primary and secondary, s. 3, p. 34 primary, definition of, s. 62, p. 634 privilege not waived by volunteering, s. 128, p. 1206 probative value of, s. 3, p. 69 procedure, improper in, s. 3, p. 70 real, s. 3, p. 36
re-appreciation of, s. 3, p. 69 record of, presumption as to genuineness of, s. 80, p. 738 relevance and admissibility, s. 5, p. 105 relevant, omission to consider, s. 167, p. 1357 res gestae, s. 8, p. 119 secondary, s. 63, p. 636
seizure memo, as, s. 3, p. 41 silence of accused, s. 8, pp. 135-138 statements under influence of truth drug, inadmissibility of, s. 45, p. 564 sufficiency of, competent court for deciding, s. 167, pp. 1355-1357 tape recorded matter, of, s. 3, p. 41 tape recorder, as, s. 45, p. 563 terms of contracts, grants and other dispositions of property reduced to form of document, of, s. 91, p. 774 tracker dog, s. 3, p. 41

...ce (contd.)
...using, as of document production of which was refused on notice, s. 164, p. 1343 video tape, as, s. 45, p. 563 what, to be given when statement forms part of a conversation, document, book or series of letter or papers to be given, s. 39, p. 491 withholding of, presumption as to, s. 114, p. 1002 witness of, not cross-examined, s. 3, p. 38
——not named in FIR, s. 3, p. 82
——not named in inquest, s. 3, p. 82
——affidavit not, s. 33, p. 445
——not named in requisition memo, s. 3, p. 82
——belated examination of, s. 3, p. 38

Evidentiary value
hostile witness of, s. 154, p. 1306

Examination of witness witness when treated as hostile, s. 154, p. 1303

Examination-in-chief relevant facts must relate to, s. 138, p. 1252
witness of, leading questions in, prohibition as to, not absolute, ss. 137, 143, pp. 1250, 1267

Excise Inspector expert for identification of illicit or spurious liquor, s. 45, p. 554

Exclusion of oral evidence cases on fraud as to, s. 91, p. 798

Existence facts of, making probable or improbable, s. 11, p. 180

Expert opinion evidence as to, oral, s. 60, p. 628

Expert(s) ballistic, opinion of, s. 45, p. 542 evidence of, foreign law, s. 45, p. 531 examination of, rule as to, s. 45, p. 556 fingerprint, identification of, by, s. 45, pp. 538-540 footprint, identification of, by, s. 45, p. 540 handwriting, identification by, s. 45, p. 532 market value of land, s. 45, p. 554
meaning of, s. 45, pp. 529-531
medical opinion, s. 45, p. 544 opinion of, admissible as evidence, when, s. 45, p. 527
——conflicting with witness, s. 45, pp. 557-559
——when relevant, s. 45, pp. 526, 527
——conflicting, s. 45, p. 556 psychiatrists, s. 45, p. 563 science or art, in, meaning of, s. 45, p. 531

Expert(s) (contd.)
typewritten document, identification of, by, s. 45, p. 542 witness, as, value of, as, s. 55, pp. 559-562

Extra Judicial Confession, § SEE UNDER "CONFESSION"

Eye-witness conduct of, s. 8, p. 129

F

Fact in dispute
proof of, s. 3, p. 24

Fact(s) in issue
bad character, if, s. 54, p. 592 cause and effect of, s. 7, p. 118 fact constituting preparation and attempt for, is, s. 8, p. 126

Fact(s) admitted, need not be proved, s. 58, p. 613 cause or effect of relevant facts, s. 7, p. 118 conclusive proof of, s. 4, p. 100 conclusive proof, when, s. 4, p. 99 court may, presume, when, s. 4, p. 93 court shall presume a, when, s. 4, p. 93
definition of, s. 3, p. 13
discovery of, includes discovery of witness, s. 27, p. 342 disproved, when, s. 3, pp. 14, 92 dispute, in, proof of, s. 3, p. 24 disputed, proof of, s. 3, p. 24 existence of, burden of proof, as to, s. 101, p. 859 finding of, judgment in, relevancy of, s. 13, p. 210 forming part of same transaction, relevancy of, s. 6, p. 109 highly probable or improbable, meaning of, s. 11, p. 187 implied admission of, s. 58, p. 615 in issue, s. 3, p. 13 judicial notice by court, of, when obligatory, s. 57, p. 597 judicially noticed need not be proved, laws in force, s. 56, p. 597
meaning of, s. 3, p. 21 necessary to explain or introduce relevant facts, s. 9, p. 139 necessary to explain relevant fact, instances of, in civil cases, s. 9, p. 142 necessary to explain relevant facts, s. 9, p. 142 not proved, s. 3, p. 92 not proved, when, s. 3, p. 14 not relevant become relevant, when, s. 11, p. 180 occasion, cause or effect of fact in issue, s. 7, p. 116 of commission of, crime by third person, s. 11, p. 187 particular, burden of proof as to, s. 103, p. 910 presumption of, by court, meaning of, s. 4, p. 94
——when court may make, s. 4, p. 96
——shall make, s. 4, p. 97
proof of, oral evidence, by, s. 59, p. 621

Fact(s) (contd.)
proved, when, s. 3, p. 14
relevancy of § SEE "RELEVANCY OF FACTS' relevant to the issue, meaning of, s. 3, pp. 13, 25 showing existences of state of mind/body/bodily feeling, s. 14, p. 214 taken judicial notice of, need not be proved, s. 56, p. 597 when not proved, s. 3, p. 92

Facts in issue
definition of, s. 3, p. 13
evidence only on, s. 5, p. 104 facts connected with relevant facts, s. 7, p. 116
meaning of, s. 3, p. 24
proof by evidence, of, exceptions to rule of, s. 57, p. 598 relevant facts and, s. 5, p. 104

Falsus in uno/falsus in omnibus principle of, applicability of, s. 3, p. 75

Family Affairs
statement made in, will or deed relating to, s. 32, p. 440

Family Custom, s. 13, p. 198

Family settlement deed evidence as to, s. 91, p. 797

Feeding the estoppel principle of, s. 115, p. 1049

Fiduciary Relationship good faith, proof of, in, s. 111, p. 945

Finger impression opinion of expert as to, s. 45, p. 538 proof of, comparison with admitted, s. 73, p. 701

Fingerprint identification of, expert, by, s. 45, pp. 538-540

First Information Report
evidentiary value of, s. 145, p. 1276
admissibility of, s. 8, p. 133
admissibility, accused firing, s. 8, p. 133 confession in form of, s. 25, p. 320 contents of, s. 8, p. 133
corroborative evidence, as, s. 157, p. 1325 dying declaration, as, s. 32, p. 425 evidence of person not named in, s. 3, p. 82
evidence, as, s. 6, p. 116
evidentiary value of, s. 3, p. 70
interpolated, as evidence, s. 3, p. 71 interpolations in, effect of, s. 3, p. 71 lodging of, delay in, effect of, s. 3, p. 70

First Information Report (contd.) lodging of, not at concerned police station, effect of, s. 3, p. 71 omission in, affecting probabilities, s. 11, p. 190 sent to public prosecutor/magistrate, whether, not a matter for judicial notice, s. 57, p. 613
Statement in, substantive evidences, not, s. 35, p. 483 use of, for impeachment of witness, s. 155, p. 1314

Food Adulteration Act
burden of proof under, s. 101, p. 880

Footprint
identification of, expert, by, s. 45, p. 540 track evidence reliability of, s. 45, p. 541

Foreign expressions meaning of, evidence to show, s. 98, p. 856

Foreign Law
meaning of, s. 45, p. 531
relevancy of, s. 38, p. 490

Fraud charges of, burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 902 collusion or, judgment obtained by, meaning of, s. 44, p. 522 judgments obtained by collusion or, proof of, s. 44, p. 519

G

Gambling offences burden of proof of, as to, s. 101, p. 872

Gazettes electronic forms, in, presumption as to, s. 81-A, p. 745
evidence, as, s. 45, p. 555
London, or official, etc., presumption as to, s. 81, p. 743
presumption as to, s. 81, p. 743
statement made in, s. 37, p. 487

Gazetteers
presumption as to, s. 81, p. 744 statement in, presumption as to, s. 81, p. 744

General Custom or Right
definition of, s. 48, p. 571

General Custom, s. 13, p. 200

General Interest matter of, public right or custom, opinion as to, s. 32, p. 431

Goldsmith evidence of, s. 45, p. 533

Good faith gift deed, execution of, under influence of spiritual adviser, s. 111, p. 949
meaning of, s. 111, p. 942
presumption in, proof of, 'active confidence', meaning of, s. 111, p. 944 presumption of, execution of document, in, undue influence of spouse, s. 111, p. 949 ——gift by son to father, under influence of, s. 111, p. 949 relevancy of facts showing, s. 14, p. 221 transaction in, burden of proof of, s. 111, pp. 942, 943
——proof of, borrowings, s. 111, p. 944
——insolvency, s. 111, p. 945
——pardanashin ladies, s. 111, p. 945 ——solicitor and client, s. 111, p. 945
——trustee, s. 111, p. 945
——illiterate person, s. 111, p. 947 will, execution of burden to prove under influence on testation, s. 111, p. 949

Good will facts showing existence of, s. 14, p. 216

Government Act official act and, presumption by court. as to, s. 114, p. 990

Government Gazette
presumption as to, s. 81, p. 743

Government made under authority of, chittas, if, s. 36, p. 486
——maps, superimposition of, s. 36, p. 486
——survey maps, if, s. 36, p. 485
——thak bast maps, if, s. 36, p. 485

Guardian
admission by, s. 18, p. 258

H

Hair
identification by, s. 45, p. 554

Handwriting acquainted with, meaning of, s. 47, p. 567
——when said to be, s. 47, p. 570 court, comparison of, by, s. 73, p. 706 modes of proving, opinion of experts as to identity of, s. 45, p. 532 opinion of person acquainted with, evidentiary value of, s. 47, pp. 565, 569 proof of, comparison with admitted, s. 73, pp. 701-704
——method of, s. 47, p. 566

Hearsay evidence inadmissibility of, rule of, exceptions to, s. 32, p. 391
§ SEE UNDER "EVIDENCE"
meaning of, s. 60, pp. 623-627

Hindu Joint Family
property as to, burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 903

Hindu Law
applicability of, presumption by court, as to, s. 114, p. 1024 disappearance of person, relating to, superseded, s. 108, p. 932

Horoscope
how for evidence, s. 32, p. 438

Hostile witness
evidentiary value of, s. 154, p. 1306
§ SEE UNDER "WITNESS" when treated as, s. 154, p. 1303

Hypnotism evidence obtained by, s. 45, p. 564

I

Identification test conduct of, mode of, s. 9, p. 157

Identification accused in different offences, of, s. 9, p. 165 accused of, offence at night, s. 9, p. 157 articles need not be identical, s. 9, p. 148 articles, of, precautions, s. 9, pp. 147, 148 benefit of doubt in, s. 9, p. 166 court only, in, effect of, s. 9, p. 148 delay in, s. 9, p. 159
DNA evidence, by, s. 9, p. 163 finger prints, foot prints, handwriting and palm print, by, s. 9, p. 162 gait, speech or voice, by, s. 9, p. 162 hair, by, s. 9, p. 162
magistrate's supervision, under, s. 9, p. 150 methods of, factors relevant, s. 9, pp. 144, 160, 161 mixing up of under trials with convict, s. 9, p. 157 object of, s. 9, p. 143 perception, by, s. 9, p. 162 person and property, of, difference, s. 9, p. 146 personal characteristics, etc., by, s. 9, p. 161 photograph/video films, by, s. 9, p. 163 proof, s. 9, p. 155 relevant factors, consideration of, s. 9, p. 161 right of accused, to demand, s. 9, p. 149 § SEE ALSO "TEST IDENTIFICATION" sketches/photofits, by, s. 9, p. 163 sniffer dogs, by, s. 9, p. 163 suspect, of, by witness, s. 9, p. 164
TI parade, prior to, s. 9, p. 145 victim's body of, s. 9, p. 145 witness by, generally, s. 9, p. 143
——inability to give reasons for, s. 9, p. 148

Identity of deponent
presumption as to, s. 80, p. 742

Illegible characters evidence admissible to show meaning of, s. 98, p. 857 evidence as to meaning of, s. 98, p. 855

Illiterate person defence of non est factum, s. 111, p. 947

Ill-will facts showing existence of, s. 14, p. 216

Impeachment credit of witness, of, s. 155, p. 1308

Implied Admission
§ SEE UNDER "ADMISSION"

Inam Register
entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 482

Inconsistency fact in issue or relevant fact with, s. 11, p. 180

Indecent Questions
court, power of, to forbid, s. 151, p. 1295

India
definition of, s. 3, p. 14

Indian Penal Code
exception under, case of accused comes within, burden of proof of, s. 105, p. 911

Indian Succession Act provisions of, relating to wills, saving of, s. 100, p. 858

Indirect Evidence direct evidence and, comparison, s. 3, p. 34
meaning of, s. 3, p. 30

Industrial Dispute Act
burden of proof under, s. 101, p. 878

Infant
admission by, s. 17, p. 248
minor or, estoppel by, s. 115, p. 1050

Information Technology Act, 2000, s. 3, p. 15 oral admission as to contents of electronic records, and, s. 22A, p. 280 digital signature opinion of certifying authority under, s. 47A, p. 570

Information accused in police custody, from admissibility of, extent of, s. 27, pp. 349-354
——evidentiary value of, s. 27, p. 347
——place of discovery on, s. 27, p. 354
——leading to discovery, s. 27, p. 355
——police's prior knowledge of fact disclosed in, s. 27, p. 361 accused, from, fact discovered on, deposition of, s. 27, p. 338-341
meaning of, ss. 3, 20, pp. 14, 16, 265
must be received from accused, s. 27, p. 344 ——person in police custody, s. 27, p. 345

Injuries on victims body non-explanation of, s. 3, p. 63

Injury cause of, medical opinion as to, s. 45, p. 549

Inquest Report
admissibility of, s. 145, p. 1276

Inquest report
not statement of witness, s. 157, p. 1322

Insolvency Act
burden of proof under, s. 101, p. 877

Insolvency Jurisdiction conferment of, s. 41, p. 508
final judgement, order or decree in, relevancy of, s. 41, p. 498

Intention facts showing how for relevant, s. 14, p. 218 previous and subsequent events, evidence of, to show, s. 14, p. 218
proof of, s. 14, p. 218

Intentional Act
facts bearing on question whether act was accidental or, relevancy of, s. 15, p. 229

Inter partes judgment, relevancy of, s. 13, p. 205

Interest
statement against, relevant fact, s. 32(3), p. 389

Interpretation clause, s. 3, pp. 13, 16 court, meaning of, s. 3, p. 17 documents, of, general principles, s. 93, p. 846 principles of, p. 5

Investigation officer dying declaration, recording of, by, s. 32, p. 422

Issuee Estoppel
§ SEE UNDER "ESTOPPEL"

J

Joint Family
estoppel against, s. 115, p. 1066

Journals
presumption as to, s. 81, p. 744

Judg(es)
admissibility of evidence, to decide, s. 136, p. 1248
evidence of, s. 3, p. 37
magistrates and, witness, as, s. 121, p. 1171 power of, ask question about relevant/irrelevant fact, to, s. 165, p. 1348
——at any time, to, s. 165, p. 1348
——in any form, to, s. 165, p. 1347
——examine any person as witness, s. 165, p. 1349
——put questions, to, must base on relevant and proved fact, s. 165, p. 1351
——to call witnesses, s. 165, p. 1346
——to put question or order production of document, s. 165, p. 1344
witness, as, s. 121, p. 1170

Judgement(s) court not competent to deliver by, admissibility as evidence, s. 44, p. 520 criminal court, of, binding on civil court if, s. 40, p. 496 ex parte, value of, s. 13, p. 210
final, in probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction, relevancy of, s. 41, p. 498 fraud or collusion, obtained by, cases other than, s. 44, pp. 519, 525
——meaning of, s. 44, pp. 522-525
in rem, conclusiveness of, s. 41, p. 499 not in rem, s. 41, p. 501 orders, decrees or, not specified in ss. 40-42, relevancy of, s. 43, p. 513 other than those u/s. 40/41/42, relevancy as evidence, criminal cases, in, s. 43, p. 516 previous, relevant, bar second suit or trial, s. 40, p. 492 prior, civil, proceedings in, criminal proceedings, whether binding on, s. 40, p. 497

Judgment Debtor burden of proof, on, s. 101, p. 877 decree holder and, estoppel, s. 115, p. 1129

Judgment(s)
Criminal Court, of, relevancy of, s. 13, p. 209 finding of facts in, s. 13, p. 210 inter partes, not, admissibility in, s. 11, p. 190 inter parties, not, relevancy and value of, s. 13, p. 205 law acquisition cases, in relevancy of, s. 13, p. 210 order, decree or, other than those in s. 41, relevancy of, s. 42, p. 509

Judgment(s) (contd.)

other than those u/s. 40/41/42, relevancy as evidence, market value of property, as to, s. 43, p. 518 other than those u/s. 40/41/42, relevancy as evidence, s. 43, p. 518
——civil cases, in, s. 43, p. 518 parties compromise, on, s. 13, p. 211 previous, relevancy of, s. 11, p. 190 ——relevant, second suit or trial, bar to, civil cases, inter partes, s. 40, p. 494

Judicial Acts

official acts and, presumption by court as to, s. 114, p. 986

Judicial Notice

academic distinction, of, s. 57, p. 611 academic sessions, of, s. 57, p. 610 applicant, averment of, s. 57, p. 612 bank practice, of, s. 57, p. 609 building regulations, of, s. 57, p. 609 colony of Satsangis, of, s. 57, p. 611 court to take, "all laws in force in the territory of India", meaning of, s. 57, p. 599 court to take, accession, etc., for the sovereign for the U.K. and Great Britain, of s. 57, p. 597
——Articles of War for Indian Army, Navy or Air Force, of, s. 57, p. 597
——commencement , etc. of hostilities, etc., s. 57, p. 597 ——divisions of time, etc., and holidays notified in official gazette, of, s. 57, p. 597
——laws in force, of, s. 57, p. 597
——national flag of every state, etc. recognised by Govt. of India, of, s. 57, p. 597 ——proceedings of legislature, of, s. 57, p. 597 ——public office, etc., of, s. 57, p. 597
——rule of the road on land or sea, of, s. 57, p. 598
——seals of English Courts, etc., of, s. 57, p. 597
——territories under dominion of Govt. of India, of, s. 97, p. 597 educational system, of, s. 57, p. 610 facts stated in, newspapers, s. 57, p. 613 facts which cannot be taken, of, s. 57, p. 608 facts of, which need not be proved, s. 56, p. 597
——obligatory, articles of war, s. 57, pp. 599-603
——court members and officers, s. 57, p. 606 ——customary law, s. 57, p. 602
——division of time, s. 57, p. 604 ——existence and title of state, s. 57, p. 604
——hostilities with Govt. of India, s. 57, p. 605
——Indian territories, s. 57, p. 605
——laws in force in Indian territory, s. 57, pp. 599-601 ——legislative proceedings, s. 57, p. 603 ——matters not specified, s. 57, p. 607 ——matters of public history, s. 57, p. 606
——personal law, s. 57, p. 602

Judicial Notice (contd.)
——rule of the road on land or at sea, s. 57, p. 606
——seals, s. 57, p. 604
gherao, of, government's attitude towards, s. 57, p. 611 government inaction, of, s. 57, p. 611 government propaganda, of, s. 57, p. 611 illegal immigration of, s. 57, p. 611 judge's personal knowledge and, s. 57, p. 612 land price, of, s. 57, p. 609 matter of common knowledge, of, s. 57, p. 611 notorious facts, of, s. 57, p. 610 pay scales, of, s. 57, p. 609 smuggling, of, s. 57, p. 610 stamp duty, evasion of, not a matter for, s. 57, p. 613 take, meaning of, s. 57, p. 599

Judicial proceedings
'court' proceedings, if, s. 3, p. 19 evidence by witness in, s. 33, p. 445

Judicial Records
foreign, presumption as to, s. 86, p. 754

Judicial scrutiny
witness, depositions, of, s. 3, p. 82

Jurisdiction court, of, ouster of, burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 904
probate : § SEE "PROBATE JURISDICTION"

Juror
witness as, s. 121, p. 1172

Jury
power to put questions to witness, s. 166, p. 1352

K

Kidnapping appeal allowed against absentee-victim, second appeal allowed without 7-year waiting period, s. 108, p. 934 corroborative evidence of, former, statement made by information to victim's father, s. 157, p. 1322

Knowledge facts showing how far relevant, s. 14, p. 219
proof of, s. 14, p. 219

L

Labourers evidence of, number of labourers, as to, s. 45, p. 555

Land Grabbing
burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 882

Landlord
tenant and, burden of proof as to relationship in cases of, s. 109, p. 934 tenant and, estoppel in, s. 115, p. 1127

Law Books statements in, relevancy of, s. 38, p. 489

Law
custom and, s. 13, p. 196

Laws in Force
court to take, § SEE UNDER "JUDICIAL NOTICE"

Leading questions, s. 141, p. 1265 cross-examination, allowed in, s. 143, p. 1266 may be asked, when, s. 143, p. 1266 must not be asked, when, s. 142, p. 1265 prohibition of putting, in-chief-examination and re-examination not absolute, s. 143, p. 1267

Lease deed registered, variation by oral agreement inadmissible, s. 92, p. 834 unambiguous, oral evidence inadmissible, s. 92, p. 843 unregistered, evidence, as, s. 91, p. 794

Legal Advisers
confidential communications with, s. 129, p. 1207

Legal Character
meaning of, s. 41, p. 508

Legitimacy
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 905
presumption of court as to, s. 114, p. 1033

Legitimate/Reasonable Expectation doctrine of, s. 115, p. 1100

Lex fori law of Evidence is, s. 1, p. 7

Libel
defamation and, burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 873

Licence evidence as to, s. 91, p. 798

Licensee
estoppel of, s. 117, pp. 1145, 1146 person in possession, of, estoppel of , s. 116, p. 1133

Limitation
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 905

Local Custom, s. 13, p. 200

London Gazette
presumption as to, s. 81, p. 743

Lunatic
admission or denial by, s. 18, p. 261

M

Magistrate(s)
confession by accused in police custody not to be proved against him unless made in the presence of, s. 26, p. 327 definition of, for purposes of s. 26, p. 26, p. 327 dying declaration, recording of, by, s. 32, p. 421 judges and, witnesses, as, s. 121, p. 1171 police officer or, not to be compelled to disclose source of information as to commission of any offence, s. 125, p. 1195 witnesses, as, s. 121, p. 1170

Maintenance Proceedings burden of proof as to, ss. 101, 102, pp. 867, 906

Maintenance
claim by mother from her paramour, s. 112, p. 959 estoppel, operation of, in, s. 115, p. 1123

Mala Fide and Bona fide transaction, burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 888

Maps
books, charts and, presumption as to, s. 87, p. 755 plans and, criminal proceedings, in relevancy of, s. 36, p. 487 plans or, made by authority of Government, presumptions as to, s. 83, p. 746 ——private persons, by, no presumptions as to, s. 83, p. 748 prepared by private persons, presumption as to, s. 83, p. 748 presumption as to, accuracy, of, s. 87, p. 756 private, entries in, relevancy of, s. 36, p. 486 relevancy of statement in, s. 36, p. 484 waiver of, accuracy of, s. 83, p. 748

Marriage birth during, conclusive proof of legitimacy, s. 112, p. 950 communication during, s. 122, p. 1173
presumption of court as to, s. 114, p. 1031 statements as to existence of, deed or will, in, s. 32, p. 435

Married woman
abetment of suicide by, presumption as to, s. 113-A, p. 962

Matrimonial Jurisdiction
final judgement, order or decree in, relevancy of, s. 41, p. 498
special Acts conferring, s. 41, p. 505

Matters in writing evidence as to, s. 144, p. 1269

Maxims
autrefois convict or autre fois acquit, plea of, s. 40, p. 496
falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus, of, s. 118, p. 1166 falsa demonstrati non nocet, s. 95, p. 851
falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus, of, s. 3, p. 75 omnia proesumuntur rite esse acta, s. 16, p. 233 qui taci consentive videtur, s. 8, p. 135

May presume
definition of, s. 4, p. 93

Medical Certificate
weightage of, s. 45, p. 551

Medical Evidence dying declaration and, s. 32, p. 418

Medical opinion age, as to, s. 45, p. 549 death due to poison, on, s. 45, p. 549 evidence, as, s. 45, pp. 544-547 injury, cause of, s. 45, p. 549 loss of expectation of life, as to, s. 45, p. 549 mental state, as to, s. 45, p. 551 paternity, as to, s. 45, p. 550 time of death, s. 45, p. 548

Memorandum of Identification presumption and, s. 80, p. 742

Minor
estoppel against, s. 115, p. 1066
infant or, estoppel by, s. 115, p. 1050

Misappreciation of Evidence
§ SEE UNDER "EVIDENCE"

Mohammadan Law
disappearance of person, relating to, superseded, s. 108, p. 933

Mortgage deeds registered, modification by oral agreement, inadmissible, s. 92, p. 833 evidence as to, s. 91, p. 796

Mortgagee
estoppel of, s. 116, p. 1142
——denying title of mortgagor, s. 116, p. 1142

Motive absence of, effect on direct testimony, s. 8, p. 123 evidence as, when loses its importance, s. 8, p. 121 facts showing, s. 8, p. 120
failure to prove, effect of, s. 8, p. 123 importance of, when, s. 8, p. 124 incriminating circumstance, if, s. 8, p. 124 ingredient of offence, not, s. 8, p. 122 non-pleading of, effect of, s. 8, p. 123 preparation, conduct, previous or subsequent, relevancy of, s. 8, p. 118
proof of, s. 8, p. 123

MRTP Act
burden of proof, under, s. 101, p. 879

N

Negligence
burden of proof as to, ss. 101, 102, pp. 872, 906
estoppel and, s. 115, p. 1063
facts showing existence of, s. 14, p. 211

Negotiable Instruments Act
burden of proof under, s. 101, p. 880

Newspapers documents purporting to be, journal, etc., presumption as to, s. 81, p. 743
presumption as to, s. 81, p. 744

Not proved when fact said to be, s. 3, p. 92

Notary Public
endorsement by, presumption by court as to, s. 114, p. 994

Notice
agents, through, s. 14, p. 220
constructive, s. 14, p. 220 document, using as evidence, production of which was refused on, s. 164, p. 1343 ——giving as evidence, e.g., produced on, s. 163, p. 1341 production of document, for, s. 66, p. 670 registration on, s. 14, p. 220 service of, burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 907

Notifications
Acts, orders, etc. of Government, proof of, s. 78, p. 732 statement as to fact of public nature in Act or, relevancy of, s. 37, p. 487

Number of Witnesses
divorce cases, in, whether corroboration necessary, s. 134, p. 1240 police officer, material witness, s. 134, p. 1240 sexual offences, in, s. 134, p. 1241 single, food adulteration cases, in, s. 134, p. 1241

Number of Witnesses (contd.)
——unlawful assembly and riot cases, in, s. 134, p. 1241 sole, corroboration by confession, s. 134, p. 1240
——not relied on, illustrative cases, s. 134, p. 1243 ——relied on, illustrative cases, s. 134, p. 1242
——medical evidence support, s. 134, p. 1240

O

Obscenity
interpretation of, s. 292 of IPC, under, not on expert evidence, s. 45, p. 555

Obsolete expressions meaning of, evidence to show, s. 98, p. 855

Offence motive not ingredient of, s. 8, p. 122

Offensive questions court of forbid needlessly, s. 152, p. 1296

Officers, Subordinates etc.
admission by, s. 18, p. 258

Official Acts
Government Act and, presumption by court as to, s. 114, p. 990 presumption by court as to, s. 114, p. 986

Official Communication communication made in official confidence, court to decide if, s. 124, pp. 1192, 1195
——instances of, s. 124, p. 1193
——meaning of, s. 124, p. 1192
——instances of, s. 124, p. 1193
disclosure of, 'public interest, should suffer by the disclosure' interpretation of, s. 124, p. 1194 disclosure of, "no public officer shall be compelled to disclose" interpretation of, s. 124, p. 1189 ——evidence as to affairs of State, distinguished, s. 124, p. 1190 ——public officer not to be compelled to make, s. 124, p. 1189
§ SEE UNDER "PUBLIC DOCUMENT"
"when he considers.....disclosure" interpretation of, s. 124, p. 1194

Official Gazette
presumption as to, s. 81, p. 743

Opinion(s) existence of right or custom, as to, when relevant, s. 48, p. 571 experts, facts bearing upon, s. 46, p. 564
———when relevant, s. 45, p. 526
grounds of, when relevant, s. 51, p. 585 handwriting, as to, when relevant, s. 47, p. 565 relationship, on when relevant, s. 50, s. 577 usages, tenets, etc., as to, when relevant, s. 49, p. 574 palm impression, as to, s. 47, p. 565

Oral admission content of documents, as to, written admission and, s. 22, p. 279 contents of electronic records, as to, Information Technology Act, and, s. 22A, p. 280

Oral agreement ambiguous instrument, intention of parties, as to, s. 92, p. 839 conditions precedent to attaching obligation under document, s. 92, pp. 830-831 consistent with terms of document, s. 92, pp. 826, 829 construction of document, fact showing relationship to existing facts, s. 92, pp. 838, 840-841 custom or usage consistent with terms of contract, s. 92, pp. 836-838 evidence of, exclusion of contradict written terms to, s. 92, pp. 800, 806 ——addition to, terms in document form, s. 92, p. 812 ——discharge of liability by, s. 92, p. 809
——exception to, fraud invalidating document, s. 92, p. 821
——s. 92, pp. 802, 821, 826-832, 836-841
——fact invalidating document, s. 92, p. 820
——if language of document is clear, s. 92, p. 841
——suretyship, as to, s. 92, p. 818
——precise nature of deed, for determining, s. 92, p. 842 exclusion of, evidence of, s. 92, p. 812 implied warranty, s. 92, p. 828 intention of parties, acts of parties done under instrument to ascertain, s. 92, p. 839 lease deed registered, variation by, inadmissible, s. 92, p. 834 matter on which document is silent, s. 92, pp. 827-828 misrepresentation invalidating document, s. 92, p. 821 modification of contract not required by law to be in document form or to be registered, s. 92, p. 832 negotiable instruments, s. 92, p. 829 sale deed, as to, admissibility of, s. 92, p. 835 unregistered compromise deed, as to, s. 92, p. 835 written deed modified by, inadmissible, s. 92, p. 833

Oral evidence ambiguity in language of wills, admissible, s. 92, p. 843 benami transaction, as to, s. 92, pp. 815-818 contradicting intention for purpose of construing deeds, s. 92, p. 805 correction of mistake of fact, in documents to, s. 92, p. 824 decrees, as to, applicability of, s. 92, p. 818 deeds, as to, s. 91, p. 794 direct, to be, s. 60, p. 622
——what is, s. 60, p. 623
escrow, as to, s. 92, p. 832 exclusion of, "term" meaning of, s. 91, pp. 780, 781 ——application of documents to existing facts, against, s. 94, p. 848 ——documentary evidence, by, Ch. VI, p. 777
——to explain or amend ambiguous document, s. 93, p. 844 ——variation of terms in document for, s. 92, p. 810 ——words in document to be given its natural meaning, s. 94, p. 849 expert opinion, as to, s. 60, p. 628 failure of consideration in agreement, s. 92, p. 823

Oral evidence (contd.)
hearsay, on, s. 60, pp. 623-627 illegality of agreement, as to, s. 92, p. 822 lease deed, unambigous, inadmissible, s. 92, p. 843 nature of document, as to, admissibility of, s. 92, pp. 813-815 ——surrounding circumstances, s. 92, p. 815 proof of facts by, ss. 59, 60, pp. 621, 622
"Saw it", "heard it", and "preceived it" meaning of, s. 60, p. 627
§ SEE UNDER "EVIDENCE" want of consideration in, agreement, s. 92, p. 823 wills, as to, s. 92, p. 818

Order
Acts, notifications, etc. of Government, proof of, s. 78, p. 732 decrees or judgments, not specified in ss. 40-42, relevancy of, s. 43 p. 513
final, in probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction, relevancy of, s. 41, p. 498 judgment, decree or, other than those in s. 41, relevancy of, s. 42, p. 509

Originals more than one, proof of, s. 91, p. 785

Originator meaning of, s. 88A, p. 758

P

Paper
identification of, experts, by, s. 45, p. 555

Pardanashin* Ladies, good faith, transaction in, proof of, by, s. 111, p. 945

Pardanashin document, execution of, woman, by, s. 68, p. 684

Participes Criminis
drawing of inference, s. 3, p. 23

Parties from whom parties derived interest, admission by person, s. 18, p. 260 proceedings, to, admission by, s. 18, p. 252 statement made by, suing or sued in representative character, admission in, s. 18, p. 258

Partners
admissions by, s. 18, p. 257 burden of proof as to relationship in case of, s. 109, p. 934
estoppel against, s. 115, p. 1064

Partnership presumption by court, partnership, as to, s. 114, p. 1033

Party to proceeding agent or, admission by, s. 18, p. 251

Party
admission by persons expressly referred to by, to suit, s. 20, p. 263 agent of, admission by, s. 18, p. 256 subject-matter, interested in, admission by, s. 18, p. 251

Paternity
medical test as to, s. 45, p. 550

Paternity
proof of, s. 3, p. 92

Penal Code offence under sections 182, 420, burden of proof in, s. 101, pp. 872, 873

Person in authority confession made to, s. 24, p. 301
meaning of, s. 24, p. 301-304

Person in possession licensee of, estoppel of, s. 116, p. 1133

Person interest derived, from when, admission by, s. 18, p. 251

Persona designata court-tests of, s. 3, p. 18

Plans
maps and, criminal proceedings, in, entries in, relevancy of, s. 36, p. 487 maps or, made by authority of Government, presumptions as to, s. 83, p. 746 ——private persons, by, no presumption as to, s. 83, p. 748
relevancy of statements in, s. 36, p. 484

Pleaders
insulting questions put by, s. 150, p. 1293

Point of Law admission, admission on, s. 17, p. 249

Poison
death due to, medical opinion, s. 45, p. 549

Police custody construction, when, s. 27, p. 342
meaning of, s. 26, p. 328

Police Diary
statement, previous in writing, cross-examination in, s. 145, p. 1277

Police Officer(s)
confession by accused in custody of, not to be proved against him, s. 26, p. 327
——the presence of, s. 25, p. 322 confession made to private individual in the presence of, s. 25, p. 323

Police Officer(s) (contd.)
confession to, not to be proved, s. 25, p. 316 dying declaration, recording of, by, s. 32, p. 422 magistrate or, not to be compelled to disclose source of information as to commission of any offence, s. 125, p. 1195
meaning of, s. 25, p. 323
who is not, ss. 25, 26, pp. 324, 325, 330

Political agents certificate of presumption as to, s. 86, p. 754

Post mortem certificate
evidence, as, s. 157, p. 1322

Postal Service
presumption, court, by, as to, s. 114, p. 999

Post-mortem Report
evidence, as, s. 45, p. 547

Powers-of-Attorney
presumption as to, s. 85, p. 749

Preamble evidence, law of, to, p. 1 objects of, p. 4

Pre-emption
estoppel and, s. 115, p. 1129

Preparation
facts showing, s. 8, p. 126 motive, conduct, previous or subsequent, relevancy of, s. 8, p. 118

Presumption of fact, s. 4, p. 95 presumption of law and, distinguished, s. 4, p. 95

Presumption of law
disputable, s. 4, p. 95
presumption of fact and, distinguished, s. 4, p. 95

Presumption
abetment of suicide by married woman, as to, s. 113-A, p. 962 accomplice evidence existence of certain facts, gazettes etc., as to, s. 81, p. 743 admission, genuineness of, as to, s. 17, p. 240 authentication, as to, s. 85, p. 752 books, maps and charts, as to, s. 87, p. 755 cannot, by, rape, prosecution for certain, absence of consent, in, s. 114A, p. 1043 certain offences, as to, s. 111A, p. 950 certified copies of foreign judicial records, as to, s. 86, p. 754 classification of, disputable, s. 4, pp. 94, 95
——fact, of, s. 4, p. 95
——rebuttable, s. 4, p. 98

Presumption (contd.)

collections of laws and reports of decisions, as to, s. 84, p. 748 court by, registered articles/letter, delivery of, as to, s. 114, p. 994 ——account books, withholding of, as to, s. 114, p. 1013
——accounts, as to, s. 114, p. 1018
——act, notice under, as to, s. 114, p. 997
——adoption, as to, s. 114, p. 1025
——agricultural operation as to, s. 114, p. 1042
——alibi evidence, withholding of, as to, s. 114, p. 1016
——allegation, as to, s. 114, p. 1018
——benami cases, as to, s. 114, p. 1018
——burden of proof, as to, s. 114, p. 1027
——civil proceedings, in, withholding of document, as to, s. 114, p. 1011
——common course of business, as to, s. 114, pp. 997, 998 ——criminal cases, in, failure of material witness to give evidence, as to, s. 114, p. 1007
——custom, as to, s. 114, p. 1021
——death, as to, s. 114, p. 1022
——deeds, as to, s. 114, p. 1022
——delay, sufficient cause, as to, s. 114, p. 1042
——discharge of obligation, as to, s. 114, p. 1017
——dishonour of cheque, as to, s. 114, p. 1034
——document, authenticity of, as to, s. 114, p. 1018
——document/account book, as to, when cannot be drawn, s. 114, p. 1014 ——election, as to, s. 114, p. 1023
——evidence, inconsistence in, as to, s. 114, p. 1042 ——existence of, certain facts, as to, accomplice, testimony of, s. 114, pp. 968-971, 982
——bill of exchange, s. 114, p. 984
——Government and official acts, s. 114, p. 990 ——judicial and official acts, s. 114, p. 986
——natural events, common course of, s. 114, p. 971
——notary public, endorsement by, s. 114, p. 994
——registering officer, record of, s. 114, p. 994 ——stolen property, joint, possession of, s. 114, p. 977 ——possession of, s. 114, p. 973
——possession of, account for, s. 114, p. 979 ——possession of, principle applicable to other charges, s. 114, p. 980 ——warrant, issue of, s. 114, p. 990
——witness, non-examination of, s. 114, p. 973 ——continuance of, s. 114, p. 986
——facts in dispute, as to, s. 114, p. 1017
——grant, as to, s. 114, p. 1023
——gun, working order of, s. 114, p. 1021
——Hindu Law, applicability of, as to, s. 114, p. 1024 ——insanity, as to, s. 114, p. 1029 ——intention or knowledge of action, as to, s. 114, p. 1029
——interpretation of statute, as to, s. 114, p. 1040
——joint property, as to, s. 114, p. 1026
——landlord-tenant relationship, as to, s. 114, p. 1040 ——legitimacy, as to, s. 114, p. 1033

Presumption (contd.)

——marriage, as to, s. 114, p. 1031
——material witness, withholding of, as to, s. 114, p. 1005 ——medical examination, failure to undergo, as to, s. 114, p. 1016 ——minutes of meeting, confirmation of, as to, s. 114, p. 1042
——Mohammadan Law, as to, s. 114, p. 1034
——money transactions, as to, s. 114, p. 1034
——mortgage title-deed, as to, s. 114, p. 1034
——NDPS Act, under, s. 114, p. 1021
——negligence, as to, s. 114, p. 1035
——order passed after regular inquiry, as to, s. 114, p. 998
——ownership and possession, as to, s. 114, p. 1037
——partition of property, as to, s. 114, p. 1028
——partnership, as to, s. 114, p. 1033
——pledge, as to, s. 114, p. 1034
——Prevention of Corruption Act, under, s. 114, p. 1024
——principal-agent relationship, as to, s. 114, p. 1033
——public analyst, report of, as to, s. 114, p. 997 ——record of rights, entries in, as to, s. 114, p. 995
——records, non-production of by defence, as to, s. 114, p. 1016 ——refusal to answer question claiming privilege, as to, s. 114, p. 1016 ——religious endowment, as to, s. 114, p. 1042
——repeal of Act, as to, s. 114, p. 1040
——revenue records, entries in, as to, s. 114, p. 995
——sanction order, as to, s. 114, p. 994
——service of notice, as to, s. 114, p. 1036 ——settlement, as to, s. 114, p. 1023
——signature on blank paper as to, s. 114, p. 1043
——statutory, as to, s. 114, p. 1039
——student, performance in examination, as to, s. 114, p. 1042
——title of property, valid, as to, s. 114, p. 998 ——user, as to, s. 114, p. 1037
——wills, as to, s. 114, p. 1038
——withholding evidence, as to, s. 114, p. 1002 court, for, criminal law, under, s. 114, p. 1019 death of, date on which question raised, s. 108, p. 931
——no jurisdiction of court under Rent Control Act, s. 108, p. 934
——does not extend to date of death, s. 108, p. 931
——Hindu and Mohammadan Laws superseded, s. 108, p. 932
——time of, court's power as to, s. 108, p. 933 deponent, identity of, in, s. 80, p. 742 digital signature certificates, as to, s. 85-C, p. 754 document, thirty years old, as to, court to act with caution, s. 90, p. 771 documents admissible in England without proof of seal or signature, as to, s. 82, p. 746 documents produced as record of evidence, as to, 'statement' 'confession' meaning of, s. 80, p. 740 documents produced as record of evidence, as to, s. 80, p. 738 documents thirty years old, as to, s. 90, p. 760 dowry death, as to, s. 113-B, p. 964 due execution, etc., of documents not produced, as to, s. 89, p. 758 electronic agreements, as to, s. 85-A, p. 753

Presumption (contd.)
electronic messages, as to, s. 88A, p. 758 electronic record five years old, as to, s. 90A, p. 774 electronic records, as to, s. 85-B, p. 753
estoppel and, s. 115, p. 1049
evidence, not, s. 4, p. 96 fact of, when court may make, s. 4, pp. 96, 97 gazetteers, as to, s. 81, p. 744 gazettes in electronic forms, as to, s. 81-A, p. 745 gazettes, as to, s. 81, p. 743 gazettes, newspapers, private Acts of Parliament and other documents, as to, s. 81, p. 743 genuineness as to, law reports, s. 84, p. 748 genuineness as to, printed, etc. under authority of Govt., s. 84, p. 748 irrebuttable, s. 4, p. 98
maps on plans made by authority of government, as to, s. 83, p. 746 maps prepared in suit, as to, s. 83, p. 748 maps/plans prepared by private persons, no, as to, s. 83, p. 748
meaning of, s. 4, p. 94
memorandum of identification, in, s. 80, p. 742 newspapers or journals, as to, s. 81, p. 744 ownership, as to, s. 110, pp. 937-942 person dead or alive, as to, rebuttable, s. 108, p. 930 person is alive, of, plea to be raised and proved, s. 108, p. 933 power-of-attorney, as to, authentication, meaning of, s. 85, pp. 749, 752
rebuttable, s. 4, p. 98
§ SEE ALSO UNDER 'COURT' signature in a document, as to, s. 90, p. 765 simultaneous death, as to, s. 108, p. 934 statutory, examples, s. 114, p. 971 telegraphic messages, as to, s. 88, p. 756
wills, as to, s. 90, p. 766

Prevention of Corruption Act burden of proof and, s. 101, p. 874 presumption by court under, s. 114, p. 1024

Preventive Detention
burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 876

Previous conviction evidence of bad character, as, s. 54, p. 594 relevant fact, s. 14, Expln. 2, p. 228

Previous statement
witness, of, substitute evidence, not, s. 145, p. 1271

Primary evidence proof of documents by mandatory subject to exceptions, s. 64, pp. 647-649
§ SEE UNDER "EVIDENCE"

Principal agent and, burden of proof as to relationship in case of, s. 109, p. 934

Private Acts document purporting to be copy of, of parliament of UK, etc. presumption as to, s. 81, p. 743

Private documents public record of, s. 75, pp. 713, 722 public documents, other than, s. 75, p. 713

Probability facts showing, of fact in issue, s. 11, p. 187

Probate Jurisdiction
final judgement, order or decree in, relevancy of, s. 41, p. 498
meaning of, s. 41, p. 504

Probative value of Evidence
§ SEE UNDER "EVIDENCE"

Procedure
dying declaration, recording of, for, s. 32, p. 405

Proceedings held not to be 'court' proceedings, s. 3, p. 20 judicial, meaning of, s. 1, p. 8 judicial, not when, s. 1, p. 8

Professional communications disclosure of, s. 126, p. 1198 disclosure, meaning of, s. 126, p. 1202 privilege as to, 'any communication" meaning of, s. 126, p. 1203
——"Barrister, Attorney" ambit of, s. 126, p. 1201
——"in the course of.....employment" interpretation of, s. 126, p. 1203 —— "or to state the contents or condition of any document", interpretation of, s. 126, p. 1204
——chartered accountant disclosure of, s. 126, p. 1202 ——communication to attorney during negotiation, s. 126, p. 1204 ——illegal purpose, s. 126, p. 1205
——party's express consent necessary to claim, whether, s. 126, p. 1205 privilege attached to, s. 126, p. 1199
——waiver of, s. 126, p. 1200

Prohibition cases burden of proof, s. 101, p. 880

Promissory Estoppel
§ SEE UNDER "ESTOPPEL"

Promissory note(s)
suit on, inadmissible in evidence, s. 91, pp. 787-792 unstamped or insufficiently stamped, s. 91, p. 786

Proof
admission against person making them, and by or on their behalf, of, s. 21, p. 267 admission not conclusive, but may estop, s. 31, p. 385 admission, of, s. 17, p. 240
alibi of, s. 11, p. 185
attestation of document, of, s. 65, p. 685 attesting witness's denial of execution, of, s. 71, p. 698 burden of, § SEE 'BURDEN OF PROOF" cession of paternity, of, s. 113, p. 961 civil cases of criminal character, in, s. 3, p. 91
civil cases, in, s. 3, p. 91 comparisons of signature, etc., with others admitted or proved, s. 73, p. 701 conclusive § SEE "CONCLUSIVE PROOF" conclusive, of legitimacy, s. 112, p. 950 conspiracy, of, s. 10, p. 172 contents of documents, of, s. 61, p. 631
criminal cases, in, s. 3, p. 88
custom, of, s. 13, pp. 195, 201 digital signature, as to, s. 67-A, p. 679 document not required by law to be attested, of, s. 72, p. 700 document of, where no attesting witness found, s. 69, p. 694 dying declaration, of, s. 32, p. 406 entries in books of account, of, s. 34, p. 461 execution of document required by law to be attested, of, s. 68, p. 680 fact, of, oral evidence, by, s. 59, p. 621 facts judicial notice of which need not be proved, s. 56, p. 597 good faith in transaction where one party is in relation to active confidence, of, s. 111, p. 942 intention, of, s. 14, p. 218 knowledge, of, s. 14, p. 219 matters before court, of, s. 3, p. 87
meaning of, s. 3, p. 84
motive, of, s. 8, p. 123 objection to, waiver of, s. 5, p. 106 official documents, of, s. 78, p. 730 paternity, of, s. 3, p. 92 primary evidence, of, documents, by, s. 64, p. 647 public document, as to, s. 75, p. 715
——of, production of certified copies, by, s. 77, p. 729 registered document, execution, of, s. 68, p. 686 relevancy of facts and, distinguished, s. 5, p. 106 signature and handwriting on document produced, of, s. 67, p. 674 standard of, s. 3, p. 93
suspicious or conjecture is not, s. 3, p. 85 verification of digital signature, of, s. 73-A, p. 712 will, of, s. 68, p. 690

Prosecution malicious, burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 906

Proved definition of, "matters before it", meaning of, s. 3, p. 87 fact, when, said to be, s. 3, p. 84

Proviso
s. 27 whether, to ss. 24, 25 and 26, s. 27, p. 362

Public Analyst report by, presumption by court, as to, s. 114, p. 997 report of, s. 45, p. 551

Public book register of record, etc., meaning of, s. 36, p. 470

Public document(s)
certified copies of, meaning of, ss. 75, 76, pp. 724, 728 documents which are not, s. 75, pp. 720-722 Income-tax Act, records of, if, s. 75, p. 722 inspection of, right of, s. 76, pp. 725-728 list of, s. 75, p. 717
meaning of, s. 75, p. 715
official document, other, proof of, Acts, order, notifications of Government, s. 78, p. 732
——foreign country, in, s. 78, p. 734 ——proceedings of legislature, s. 78, p. 733 ——municipal body, s. 78, p. 734 official document, other, proof of, s. 78, p. 730 private documents, public record kept of, s. 75, p. 722 proof as to, s. 75, p. 715 proof by production of certified copies, s. 77, p. 729
proof of, s. 77, p. 729
record of acts is, s. 75, p. 716 record of court and record of act of court, distinguished, s. 75, p. 717 records of income-tax case, if, s. 75, pp. 722-724 tangible interest, right of inspection, s. 76, p. 726 what are, s. 74, p. 713

Public Interest document on which privilege claimed on grounds of, court has right to inspect, whether, s. 162, p. 1340

Public nature
meaning of, s. 42, p. 510
statement of fact of, contained in certain Acts or notification, relevancy of, s. 37, p. 487

Public Officer appointment of, written order of proof, not necessary, s. 91, p. 798

Public Record birth and death registers, entries in relevancy of, s. 35, p. 472 electoral roll, entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 477 electronic record, included in, s. 35, p. 469 entry in, made in performance of duty, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 469 Inam register, entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 482 marriage register, entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 475 mutation entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 481 probative value of entries in, s. 35, p. 483

Public Record (contd.)
public or other official book, register on record" meaning of, s. 35, p. 470 record of rights, entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, pp. 477, 479 Riwaz-I-Am entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 482 school, registers, entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 475
Wajib-ul-Arz entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 481

Public revenue
Revenue officer not to be compelled to disclose source of information as to commission of offence against, s. 125, p. 1195

Public Right
Custom, general interest, matter of, or statement giving opinion as to, s. 32, p. 331

Question(s)
corroboration of evidence of relevant facts, admissible, s. 156, p. 1316 court to decide when, shall be asked, s. 148, p. 1288 cross-examination, lawful in, s. 146, p. 1284 defamatory per se remedies open to witness, s. 149, p. 1293 improper, witness compelled to answer, in, s. 148, p. 1290 indecent and scandalous, court, power of, to forbid, s. 151, p. 1295 insult or annoy, intended to, court to forbid, s. 152, p. 1296 judge's power to ask, about relevant or irrelevant facts, s. 165, p. 1348
——at any time, s. 165, p. 1348
——in any form, s. 165, p. 1347 judge's power to put, or order production of document, etc., s. 165, p. 1344
——witness not compelled to answer, when, s. 165, p. 1351
——must based upon relevant and proved facts, s. 165, p. 1351
jury's or assessor's power to put, s. 166, p. 1352 not to be asked reasonable grounds, without, s. 149, p. 1292 party, by, own witness, to, hostile witness, s. 154, p. 1303
——procedure for, s. 154, p. 1305
——to, s. 154, p. 1299 procedure of court in cases of, being asked without reasonable grounds, s. 150, p. 1293 proper, witness compelled to answer, in, s. 148, p. 1290 witness, own, by party to, s. 154, p. 1299

Railways Act burden of proof under, carriers, s. 101, p. 881

Rape presumption as to, prosecution for certain, absence of consent in, s. 114-A, p. 1043 virtue of, immoral character of, impeachment of, s. 155, p. 1316

Rashness criminal, and criminal negligence, distinction, s. 14, p. 221

Real Evidence
§ SEE UNDER "EVIDENCE"

Re-appreciation of Evidence
§ SEE UNDER "EVIDENCE"

Reasonable ground to believe interpretation of, s. 10, p. 170

Reasonable Grounds procedure of court cases of question being asked without, s. 150, p. 1293 questions not to be asked witness, from, without, s. 149, p. 1292

Recitals inquest report, in, admissibility of, s. 42, p. 512

Recognised custom, in relation to, meaning of, s. 13, p. 214

Record of evidence foreign judicial, presumption as to, s. 86, p. 754

Record of rights
Bengal Regulation, under, s. 13, p. 212
burden of proof as to, s. 101, p. 879
entries in, presumption as to, s. 114, p. 995
——relevancy of, s. 35, p. 477

Recovery
delay in, s. 27, p. 361

Re-examination
previous statements of witnesses, omissions in clarification of, s. 145, p. 1273 witness of, ss. 137, 138, pp. 1250, 1260
——scope, s. 138, p. 1261
——direction of, s. 138, p. 1250
——leading questions, prohibition as to, not absolute, s. 143, p. 1267 witnesses to character, of, s. 140, p. 1265

Refreshing memory
witness, by, document use of, to, s. 159, p. 1328 witness, of, writing used in, adverse party, right of, as to, s. 161, p. 1337

Register birth, death and marriage, entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 474 marriage, entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 475 school, entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 475

Registered Document
presumption as to, s. 114, p. 994

Registered Postal Articles letter, etc. presumption as to, s. 114, p. 994

Registration Officer presumption by court, record of, s. 114, p. 994

Registration document, of, proof, if, s. 67, p. 678 notice, as, s. 14, p. 220

Relationship existence of, Pedigree by, s. 50, p. 583
——proof by marriage, s. 50, p. 584
——son and daughter, s. 50, p. 582
——adoption by, s. 50, p. 582
——joint family, by, s. 50, p. 583
——legitimacy by, s. 50, p. 583
——mahantship by, s. 50, p. 583
——marriage by, s. 50, p. 581
——other relationship by, s. 50, p. 583 opinion as to, relevant when, s. 50, p. 577
——u/s. 50 and 32(5), s. 50, p. 584 opinion expressed by conduct, meaning of, s. 50, p. 577 opinion on, relevant, when, s. 50, p. 577 special means of knowledge, meaning of, s. 50, p. 580

Relevancy of fact(s)
admissibility of fact and, s. 3, p. 23 admission as to contents of document, s. 22, p. 279 admissions by certain persons, s. 19, p. 262 ——person reference to by party, in suit, s. 20, p. 263 admissions in civil cases, s. 23, p. 281 admissions, proof against person making, s. 21, p. 268 application to civil cases, s. 14, p. 226 conduct be antecedent, contemporaneous or subsequent, s. 8, p. 129 confession by, accused affecting himself and co-accused, proof, s. 30, p. 370
——inducement, threat or promise, of, criminal proceedings, in, s. 24, p. 285 confession made after removal of impression caused by inducement, threat or promise, s. 28, p. 363 confession relevant otherwise, s. 29, p. 366 confession to police officer, s. 25, p. 316 enquiry report under Bengal Regulation, s. 13, p. 212 entries in books of account, § SEE ALSO 'BOOKS OF ACCOUNT' s. 34, p. 460 evidence by witness in earlier judicial proceedings as proof in subsequent proceedings, s. 33, p. 442 expert opinion, facts bearing upon, s. 46, p. 564 expert's opinion, s. 45, p. 526 factors of, drawing inference of participes criminis, s. 3, p. 23 facts necessary to explain relevant facts, s. 9, p. 139 facts not relevant become relevant fact, s. 11, p. 180
"if they are.....relevant fact", implication of, s. 11, p. 184
INAM fair register, entries in, s. 13, p. 212
Indian and English law, s. 14, p. 225 information received from accused, extent of proof of, s. 27, p. 335 judgment obtained by fraud or collusion, proof of, s. 44, p. 519
meaning of, s. 3, p. 22
necessary to explain or introduce fact in issue or relevant fact, s. 9, p. 141 notice through agent if, s. 14, p. 220 opinion as to existence of right or custom, s. 48, p. 571

Relevancy of fact(s) (contd.)

——handwriting, s. 47, p. 565 ——grounds of, s. 51, p. 585
——usages, tenets, etc., s. 49, p. 574 party, conduct of, s. 8, p. 128 private maps of, s. 13, p. 212 public nature meaning of, s. 37, p. 488 registration amounts to notice, if, s. 14, p. 220 relationship, opinion on, s. 50, p. 577 res gestae and, s. 6, p. 110 short hand transcripts, admissibility of, s. 7, p. 118 statement by person relating to cause of his death, § SEE ALSO 'DYING DECLARATION' ——cause of his death, s. 32, p. 389
——who is deed or cannot be found, s. 32, p. 389

Relevancy

admissibility and, distinction, ss. 3, 5, pp. 23, 105 certain evidence for proving of in subsequent proceeding, the truth of facts stated therein, s. 33, p. 442 co-owners, admission by, s. 18, p. 254 criminal court judgment binding or civil court, if, s. 40, p. 496 dying declaration, of, s. 32, p. 410 effect and, of judgments, orders or decrees, other than those mentioned, s. 41, in, s. 42, p. 509 entry in public record, made in performance of duty, of, s. 35, p. 469 fact of, forming part of same transaction, inconsistent with fact in issue or relevant fact, s. 11, p. 184
——not forming part of same transaction, s. 6, p. 115 ——forming part of same transaction, s. 6, p. 109
——proof and, distinguished, s. 5, p. 106
——same transaction in Cr.P.C., s. 6, p. 113 ——statement by persons other than eyewitness, of, s. 6, p. 115 ——statements of by standers, s. 6, p. 114
——objections to, s. 5, p. 107
——Ch. II, s. 5, p. 103
——right or custom in question, when, s. 13, p. 193 findings in criminal court not binding on civil courts, s. 14, p. 229 foreign laws, of, s. 38, p. 490 maps, charts and plans, statement in, of, s. 36, p. 484 of fact, ss. 7, 11, 15, 16, 17, 18, 26, 31, pp. 116, 180, 229, 233, 237, 251, 327, 388 ——forming part of same transaction in suit for damages, s. 12, p. 192 oral evidence as to contents of documents, s. 144, p. 1270 previous conviction in criminal proceedings, s. 14, Expln. 2, pp. 228, 229 previous judgment, convicting accused for same offence, admissibility, s. 14, p. 229
——if bar to trial criminal proceedings, s. 40, p. 496
——not inter partes if bar to trial land acquisition cases, s. 40, p. 495 probate etc., jurisdiction of certain judgment in, s. 41, p. 498 similar fact evidence admissibility of, s. 14, p. 221 statement as to any law contained in law books, of, s. 38, p. 489

Relevancy (contd.)

statement as to fact of public nature, contained in certain Acts or notification, of, s. 37, p. 487

Relevant fact(s)

absconding or fleeing from seen of crime, s. 8, p. 132 civil cases, in, character to prove conduct imputed is not, s. 52, p. 586 confession caused by inducement threat or promise when not, in criminal proceeding, s. 24, p. 285 confession made after removed of impression caused by inducement, threat or promise, s. 28, p. 363 confession otherwise, not to become irrelevant, because of promise of secrecy, etc., s. 29, p. 366 course of business, existence of, when, s. 16, p. 233 criminal cases, in, previous good character, s. 53, p. 588
definition of, s. 3, pp. 13, 22
entries made in books of account when, s. 34, p. 460
evidence of, s. 5, p. 104
fact constituting preparation and attempt for, is, s. 8, p. 126 fact necessary to explain or introduce, s. 9, p. 139 facts bearing on question whether act accidental or intentional, s. 15, p. 229 facts connected with facts in issue, s. 7, p. 116 facts in issue, other instances, s. 7, p. 118
——and, s. 5, p. 104
facts not otherwise relevant become, when, s. 11, p. 181 facts showing existence of state of mind, or of body or bodily feelings, s. 14, p. 214 grounds of opinion, when, s. 51, p. 585 judgement obtained by fraud or collusion, proof as to, s. 44, p. 519 judgment, etc., other than those mentioned in ss. 40 to 42, when, s. 43, p. 513
meaning of, s. 3, p. 23
motive, preparation and previous or subsequent conduct, showing, s. 8, p. 118 opinion as to existence of right or custom, when, s. 48, p. 571
——handwriting, when, s. 47, p. 565
——usages, tenets, etc., when, s. 49, p. 574 opinion on relationship, when, s. 50, p. 577 oral admission as to content of documents, when, s. 22, p. 279 oral evidence of statement, witness by, documents, contents of which are, s. 144, p. 1270 previous bad character not, except in reply, s. 54, p. 590 previous conviction, s. 14, p. 228 previous judgment relevant to bar a second suit or trial, when, s. 40, p. 492 question tending to corroborate evidence of, admissible, s. 156, p. 1316 right or custom when in question, what are, s. 13, p. 193 statement of relevant fact by person who is dead or cannot be found, etc. by, feeling relevant to matter is question, made by several persons, s. 32, p. 390 ——transaction mentioned in s. 13(a), documents relating to, s. 32, p. 390
——will or deed relating family affairs, made in, s. 32, p. 389 ——existence of relationship, relating to, s. 32, p. 389 ——public right, custom or matters of general interest, giving opinion on, s. 32, p. 389
——interest of maker, against, s. 32, p. 389

Relevant fact(s) (contd.)
——course of business, made in, s. 32, p. 389
——cause of death as to, s. 32, p. 389 suit for damages in, facts tending to enable court to determine amount are, s. 12, p. 192 tape recorded matter, s. 7, p. 117 things said or done by conspirator in reference to common design, s. 10, p. 166

Rent Acts burden of proof under, s. 101, p. 878

Repeal
General clauses Act, s. 7, application to, p. 6

Report of decision courts of, presumption as to genuineness of, s. 84, p. 748

Representation character suitor in, admission by, s. 18, p. 251

Representative Capacity statement made by parties suing or sued, in admission in, s. 18, p. 258

Representative in interest
meaning of, s. 21, p. 270

Res gestae
relevancy of facts and, s. 6, p. 110

Retreated confession
§ SEE UNDER "CONFESSION"

Revenue officer
definition of, s. 125, p. 1195

Revenue Record
entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 479
——presumption as to, s. 114, p. 995

Revenue stamp opinion of Assistant Master of Security Printing Press, admissibility of, s, 45, p. 555

Right
corporeal and incorporeal, s. 13, p. 194 custom or, etc., statement in, transaction creating, s. 32, p. 441 opinion as to existence of, or custom, relevant, when, s. 48, p. 571 relevancy of facts as to existence of, s. 13, p. 194 record of, s. 13, p. 212

Rigor Mortis time of death, important factor for assessing, s. 45, p. 548

Riwaj-i-am existence of custom or right, s. 48, p. 574 special custom in, s. 13, p. 203
entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 482

Ruler exemption to, burden of proof, in, s. 101, p. 877

Sale Deed cancellation of, burden of proof, as to, s. 102, p. 891 oral agreement as to, admissibility of, s. 92, p. 835 evidence as to, s. 91, p. 795

Sanction orders
presumption as to, s. 114, p. 994

Sanction
prosecution, for, burden of proof, and, s. 101, p. 874

Savings
Indian Succession Act, provisions relating to wills, saving of, s. 100, p. 858 provisions of Indian Succession Act relating to wills, of, s. 100, p. 858

Scandalous questions court, power of, to forbid, s. 151, p. 1295

Sea Customs Act offences under, burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 875

Seal
proof of, comparison with admitted, s. 73, pp. 701-704

Secondary evidence admissibility, notice to produce document when required, s. 66, p. 671
——possessor of document not required for, when, s. 66,p. 673
——produce document not required for when possession of original by fraud or force, s. 66, p. 673
——produce not required for when adverse party know of requirement for production, s. 66, p. 672 ——produce, not required when, s. 66, p. 672 cases of admissibility of, s. 65, p. 650 certified copies permitted by law, by, s. 65, p. 665 court dispenses with notice, s. 66, p. 674 document which cannot be conveniently examined, s. 65, p. 665 document, as to, certified copy permitted under law, when, s. 65, p. 665
——certified copy, s. 65, p. 663
——criminal proceedings, in, s. 65, p. 661
——inconvenience in examining original, s. 65, p. 665
——lost will, s. 65, p. 662
——non-production of document to be accounted for, s. 65, p. 652
——original consisting of several accounts, s. 65, p. 665
——original lost or destroyed, s. 65, pp. 658-661
——original not easily moveable, s. 65, p. 663
——original public document, s. 65, p. 663

Secondary evidence (contd.)
——proof of execution, s. 65, p. 667
——admissibility on failure to produce original by its possessor legally bound to, s. 65, p. 656
——contempt proceedings, in, s. 65, p. 662
——documents with person not subject to court's process, s. 65, p. 655
——inadmissible if primary evidence is available, s. 65, p. 652 ——objection to, s. 65, p. 666
——possession and production of documents, s. 65, p. 655 existence, condition or contents of documents, s. 65, p. 657
meaning of, s. 63, p. 637
possessor out of court's jurisdiction, s. 66, p. 674 ——reach, s. 66, p. 673

Secure digital signature, meaning of, s. 3, pp. 14, 15

Secure electronic record, meaning of, s. 3, pp. 14, 16

Security bonds meaning in reference to existing facts, construction of, s. 95, p. 853

Seizure and Auction
burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 882

Seizure memo
accused's signature in, s. 27, p. 342

Self defence plea of, plea of alibi and, s. 11, p. 187

Series of Letters statement forming part of, what evidence to be given, s. 39, p. 491

Series of occurrence, relevancy of, s. 15, p. 231

Serologist's report
evidence, as, s. 45, p. 548

Settlement deed
oral evidence as to, s. 92, p. 836

Sexual Assault victim of, appreciation of testimony of, s. 3, p. 69

Sexual offence
burden of proof in, s. 101, p. 874
corroborative evidence of, former statement made by victim to husband, s. 157, p. 1322

Shall presume
definition of, s. 4, p. 93
meaning of, s. 4, p. 97

Short title, extent and commencement , s. 1, p. 7

Signature
comparison of, hazardous and inconclusive, if, s. 73, p. 705
——appellate court by, s. 73, p. 707
——court's power as to, s. 73, p. 704
——magistrate whether empowered to issue of direction to give specimen, s. 73, p. 712
——method, s. 73, p. 705
——when unnecessary, s. 73, p. 706 document, in, comparison with admitted, constitutional validity of, s. 73, p. 709 proof of, comparison, with admitted, s. 73, pp. 701-704

Signing Authority
presumption as to, s. 79, p. 736

Similar facts relevancy of, civil cases, applicable to, s. 14, p. 226
——English law as to, s. 14, p. 221
——Indian Law on, s. 14, p. 225

Similar occurrence facts of, relevancy of, s. 15, p. 231

Solicitors
counsel or, admission by, s. 18, p. 256

Special custom, s. 13, p. 200

State of Body facts showing existence of, relevancy of, s. 14, p. 214

State of mind bodily feeling on, mental phenomena, simple and complex in, s. 14, p. 216 facts showing existence of, relevancy of, s. 14, p. 214 relevant, existence of, facts relevant to, show, s. 14, p. 227

Statement in writing previous, cross-examination, as to, s. 145, p. 1270

Statement of Objects and Reasons evidence, law of, to, construction, aid to, whether, p. 3

Statement
accused in police custody, not leading to discovery of fact, s. 27, p. 357 accused on police custody, by, made subsequent to discovery, s. 27, p. 357 accused, of, to police officer, to be recorded, s. 27, p. 344 admission of, proof of authorship for, s. 32, p. 428 case of death, relating to circumstances of the transaction meaning of, s. 32, p. 401 complaint and, difference, s. 8, p. 133 deception, under, s. 29, p. 367
declarant exposed to criminal prosecution, of, s. 32, p. 431

Statement (contd.)

deed or will etc., in existence of family relationship, as to, relevant fact, s. 32, pp. 389, 434
——existence of family relationship, horoscope, s. 32, p. 438
——in, transaction creating right or custom, as to, relevant fact, s. 32, pp. 390, 441
——in, existence of family relationship, marriage, s. 32, pp. 434, 435
——pedigree, s. 32, p. 436
——in, family affairs, as to, s. 32, p. 440 discharge of professional duty, meaning of, s. 32, p. 428 drunk, when, s. 29, p. 367 existence of relationship, as to, relevant fact, s. 32, p. 389 family relationship, as to pedigree, in, s. 32, p. 436
——special means of knowledge of, s. 32, p. 438
——deed or will, in, s. 32, p. 434
——entries kept by purohit, s. 32, p. 438
——horoscope, in, s. 32, p. 438 former, witness, of, may be proved to corroborate later testimony as to same fact, s. 157, p. 1317 forming part of conversation, document, electronic record, books or series of letter, what evidence to be given, s. 39, p. 491
——what evidence to be given, s. 39, p. 491 how much of, to be proved, meaning of, in, s. 157, s. 39, p. 492 inadmissible, discovery of evidence on, s. 27, p. 343 ——use of, in prosecution, s. 27, p. 343 injured of, admissibility s. 33, p. 446
maker, against interest of, s. 32, p. 429
——of against interest of, s. 32, p. 429
meaning of, ss. 17, 19, 157, pp. 242, 263, 1320 number of accused, by, s. 27, pp. 358-361 opinion or public custom, etc., as to relevant fact, s. 32, pp. 389, 431 opinion, public custom etc. made before beginning of any controversy, s. 32, p. 433 opposed to public policy, corroborative evidence, if admissible as, s. 157, p. 1323 ordinary course of business, meaning of, s. 32, p. 426 overheard, s. 29, p. 367 party to proceeding or by agent, s. 18, p. 256 person against his proprietary or pecuniary interest, by, relevant fact, s. 32, p. 389 person in ordinary course of business, by, relevant fact, s. 32, pp. 389, 425 person who cannot be examined as witness, by, corroboration of, s. 159, p. 1327 ——relevant fact, ss. 32, 33 pp. 389, 449 previous, suit, made in, contradiction of, s. 145, p. 1283 previous, u/s. 162 Cr.P.C., witness, of not to be used to contradict, s. 145, p. 1280 previous, witness of, u/s. 164 Cr.P.C. use of, s. 145, p. 1281
Statement (contd.)use of to contradict, s. 145, p. 1279 previous, writing, in, police diaries, s. 145, p. 1277 proved, relevant u/s 32/33, what matters may be proved in connection with, s. 158, p. 1327 public right, custom or general interest, matter relating to, giving, s. 32, p. 431 relevant u/s 32/33, matters which may be proved as to, s. 158, p. 1327

Statement (contd.)
several persons by expression of feelings as to matter in question, s. 32, p. 442 relevant fact, s. 32, p. 390 sleep in, s. 29, p. 367
third parties by, admission of, s. 18, p. 261 verbal, meaning of, s. 32, p. 394 warning not given before making, s. 29, p. 368 when does not amount to, s. 27, p. 343 written or verbal of relevancy of fact, s. 32, p. 393 written, meaning of, s. 32, p. 395

Statute, no estoppel against, s. 115, p. 1109

Stock witness
meaning of, s. 3, p. 52

Stolen property
burden of proof as to, s. 101, p. 873

Subscriber
meaning of, s. 3, pp. 15, 16

Subsequent conduct
civil cases, in, s. 8, p. 139

Succession
burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 907

Suicide
married woman by, abetment of, presumption as to, s. 113-A, p. 962
——extraneous cause for, court's power as to, s. 113-A, p. 964

Suit appeal or, valuation of, estoppel as to, s. 115, p. 1130 conduct of, admission during, s. 31, p. 388

Suitor representative character, in, admission by, s. 18, p. 251

Suspicion conjecture of, cannot take place of proof, s. 3, p. 85

T

TADA
confession under, s. 25, p. 322

Tape recorder
evidence, as, s. 45, p. 563

Tape Recording evidence by, s. 3, p. 41 relevant fact whether, s. 7, p. 117

Tax assessment and recovery of, burden of proof as to, s. 102, p. 886

Telegraph Messages
presumption as to, s. 88, p. 756

Television link examination of witness by, s. 45, p. 563

Tenant
admission by, s. 18, p. 255
estoppel of, denying title of landlord, s. 116, p. 1137 ——possession of property necessary, whether, s. 116, p. 1135 landlord and, burden of proof as to relationship in case of, s. 109, p. 934 licensee of person in possession, estoppel of, s. 116, p. 1133

Tenets
meaning of, s. 49, p. 576
opinions as to, relevant when, s. 49, p. 574 § SEE UNDER 'USAGES'

Tents
opinions as to, persons having special means of knowledge, of, s. 49, p. 574

Territorial Jurisdiction, s. 1, p. 7

Territories
Indian, judicial notice of, s. 57, p. 597

Test identification
accused's refusal to appear for, s. 9, p. 151 conviction on, parade, s. 9, p. 156 failure to conduct, parade, effect of, s. 9, p. 160 identification prior to, parade, s. 9, p. 145 legitimacy of, parade, s. 9, p. 151 parade, not necessary, when, s. 9, p. 146 presence of police for, s. 9, p. 151 value of, s. 9, p. 152

Testimony
sexual assault, victim of, appreciation of, s. 3, p. 69

Thirty-years old documents, presumption as to, s. 90, p. 760

Title Deeds production of, not a party, s. 130, p. 1210 witness, of, not a party, to, s. 130, p. 1216

Tracker dog evidence of, admissibility and weightage as, ss. 3, 45, pp. 41, 541

Trade custom, s. 13, p. 200

Trade Marks and Patents
burden of proof as to, s. 101, p. 879

Trade Marks similarity of, registrar's opinion as to, s. 45, p. 554

Transaction
"asserted" meaning of, s. 13, p. 213
'claimed' meaning of, s. 13, p. 213 good faith in, proof of, s. 111, p. 942
meaning of, ss. 6, 13, pp. 110, 204 proving right or custom, s. 13, p. 212 same, relevancy of facts forming, s. 6, p. 109

Transfer of Property Act
burden of proof under, s. 101, p. 880
s. 41, estoppel under, s. 115, p. 1049

Translation of Documents
§ SEE UNDER "DOCUMENTS"

Tribunals not court in technical sense, s. 3, p. 19

Trustee
estoppel against, s. 115, p. 1065

Truth drug statement made under influence of, inadmissible, s. 45, p. 564

Typewritten document identification of, expert, by, s. 45, p. 542

U

Unintelligible terms meaning of, evidence to explain, s. 98, p. 857

Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Act burden of proof under, s. 101, p. 877

Usages
meaning of, s. 49, p. 576
opinions as to, persons having special means of knowledge, of, s. 49, p. 574
——when relevant, s. 49, p. 574

V

Vakil
questions asked by without reasonable grounds, s. 150, p. 1293

Vicarious liability
burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 892

Video Tape
evidence, as, s. 45, p. 563

Voluntary confession
§ SEE UNDER "CONFESSION"

W

Waiver
burden of proof in, s. 102, p. 884 constitution and, s. 115, p. 1104 estoppel and, difference, s. 115, p. 1102 principle of, essential elements, s. 115, p. 1101 witness, evidence by, of, s. 33, p. 460

Wajib-ul-Arz
entries in, relevancy of, s. 35, p. 481
custom in, s. 13, p. 204

Will(s) admitted to probate provable by probate, s. 91, p. 798 ambiguity of language between two, oral evidence admissible, s. 92, p. 843 construction of, s. 92, p. 843 deed or, family affairs, relating to, statement made in, relevant fact, s. 32, p. 389 deed or, statement made in, family affairs, s. 32, p. 440 Indian Succession Act, provision of, relating to, saving of, s. 100, p. 858
oral evidence as to, s. 92, p. 818
presumption by court, as to, s. 114, p. 1038
proof of, s. 68, pp. 690-692

Wilson's Manual existence of custom or right, on, s. 48, p. 574

Witness(es) accomplice as, s. 118, p. 1154 accomplice competent, against accused person, s. 133, p. 1230 accomplice when competent, s. 133, p. 1218 accused as, against himself, companies Act under, s. 132, p. 1215
——Customs Act under, s. 132, p. 1215
——criminal proceedings, in competence of, ss. 118, 120, pp. 1153, 1169 admission and former statement of, s. 21, p. 272
admission by, s. 18, p. 255
adversary as, s. 118, p. 1166 adverse circumstances to, s. 3, p. 62 advocate as, s. 118, p. 1165 answer to relevant questions by, s. 132, p. 1216 approver as, ss. 118, 157, pp. 1154, 1320 arbitrator as, s. 121, p. 1172 attesting, production of, s. 68, p. 683 categories of, chance, s. 3, pp. 42, 60
——child, s. 3, p. 50
——eye, as, s. 3, p. 54
——habitual criminal, as, s. 3, p. 54

Witness(es) (contd.)

——independent, s. 3, p. 49
——interested person, s. 3, p. 44-49
——natural, s. 3, p. 61
——partisan, s. 3, p. 44-49
——police and other officers as, s. 3, p. 50
——poor, illiterate, s. 3, p. 53
——previous convict as, s. 3, p. 54 ——relative of party, as, s. 3, p. 42
——rustic, s. 3, p. 50
——stock, s. 3, p. 52
——women, s. 3, p. 50
——staff member, as, s. 3, p. 61
——locality, of, s. 3, p. 61
——character, to, s. 140, p. 1265 child, appreciation of evidence of, ss. 3, 118, pp. 50, 1167 ——competence of, s. 118, p. 1155
——corroboration, s. 118, p. 1159
——credibility, s. 118, pp. 1161-1164
——preliminary inquiry, English law, s. 118, pp. 1156, 1157 civil cases, in, production and examination of, s. 135, p. 1245 claim for protection of witness bona fide, s. 132, p. 1214 communication between spouses during marriage, as to, disclosure by a spouse prohibited, s. 122, pp. 1173, 1174
——crime against other spouse, s. 122, p. 1176
——by a spouse with the consent of the other permitted, s. 122, p. 1174
——meaning of, s. 122, p. 1174
——what is prohibited, s. 122, pp. 1174-1176 compelled by court to answer, proper questions, s. 148, p. 1290 compelled to answer by court, refusal by, adverse inference from, s. 148(4), p. 1288
——when, to be, s. 147, p. 1287 competence of, omission to take oath, s. 118, p. 1152 competence to testify, s. 118, p. 1152 competent and incompetent, s. 118, p. 1150 competent, civil proceedings in, parties to suit and their spouses, s. 120, p. 1168 competent, criminal proceedings in, spouse of accused , s. 120, p. 1168 confidential communications with legal advisers, s. 129, p. 1207 contradictions by, opportunity to explain, s. 145, p. 1274 corroboration or contradiction of previous statements by when used, s. 145, p. 1272 court to decide when question to be asked to, s. 148, p. 1288 ——compelled to answer, s. 148, p. 1288 court's power to order, out of court, s. 135, p. 1247 credibility of, evidence, s. 3, p. 79 credit of, cross-examination, as to, s. 146, p. 1284 criminal cases is, leading questions to, s. 143, p. 1268 cross examination of, delay in, ss. 137, 138, pp. 1250, 1253, 1263
——absence of opportunity to, effect of, s. 138, p. 1255
——co-accused/co-defendant, s. 138, p. 1258
——court, called by, s. 138, p. 1258 ——court's leave for, s. 165, p. 1350

Witness(es) (contd.)
——generally, s. 138, p. 1256
——hostile, s. 138, p. 1260
——no right of, s. 138, p. 1260
——omission to, s. 138, p. 1258
——previous statements in writing, as to, s. 145, p. 1270
——procedure for, s. 154, p. 1305
——question lawful in, "shaking the credit by injuring the character", s. 146, pp. 1284, 1286
——to discover who he is, etc., s. 146, p. 1285
——veracity, to test, s. 146, p. 1284
——indecent and scandalous questions, s. 146, p.1287
——tape-recorded statement, s. 147, p. 1287
——re-calling after, when allowed, s. 138, p. 1261
——several accused, defendants, s. 138, p. 1257
——tendering, for, s. 138, p. 1259
——time for, court's power to limit, s. 138, p. 1262
——who can do, s. 138, p. 1254
——in, leading questions may be asked, s. 143, p. 1266 ——range of, s. 138, p. 1255 dead, evidence, admissibility, of, s. 33, p. 447 defence, for, s. 118, p. 1155 demeanour of, s. 3, p. 81
denial of previous conviction by, proof of, admissible, s. 154, p. 1299 document by, production of, on court summons, admissibility of, s. 162, p. 1340 documents, production of, by, s. 162, p. 1338
dumb, s. 119, p. 1167 enmity of, with accused, s. 3, p. 76 evidence by, affidavit is not, s. 33, p. 445
——earlier judicial proceeding, in, relevant in subsequent proceedings, s. 33, p. 443 ——judicial proceeding in, s. 33, p. 445 ——judicial proceedings, in proof of relevance, s. 33, p. 446
——relevancy of, in second judicial proceeding between same parties, identity of matter in issue, s. 33, p. 457 ——relevancy of, in second judicial proceedings between same parties, s. 33, p. 452
——waiver of, s. 33, p. 460
——belatedly examined, s. 3, p. 38
——not cross-examined, s. 3, p. 38
——not named in FIR, s. 3, p. 82
——inquest, s. 3, p. 82
——requisition memo, s. 3, p. 82
——principle as to acceptance of, s. 118, p. 1166 examination of, court, by, s. 138, p. 1261 ——court's power to put questions, s. 138, p. 1262
——generally, s. 138, p. 1251
——impeachment of witness unworthy credit, for, s. 155, p. 1310 ——order of, provisions of s. 311 Cr.P.C., complementary to, s. 138, p. 1263
——order of, s. 138, p. 1250

Witness(es) (contd.)

——questions tending to corroborate evidence of relevant facts, admissible, s. 156, p. 1317 examination-in-chief, cross examination and re-examination of, s. 137, pp. 1250, 1252 eye-witness as, s. 118, p. 1166 false evidence by English law and Indian law differ as to perjury, s. 154, p. 1299 former statement on same facts by, corroborative evidence, as, s. 157, pp. 1324, 1327 ——cases on, s. 157, p. 1327 ——committed court, in, s. 157, p. 1324
——occurrence of fact and time of making, s. 157, p. 1325
——proof to corroborate later testimony of, s. 157, p. 1319
——may be proved to corroborate later testimony as to same fact, s. 157, p. 1317
——same facts by, proof to corroborate testimony of, effect of s. 162 CrPC, s. 157, p. 1320 identification by, generally, s. 9, p. 143
——of suspect, s. 9, p. 164 impartiality of, impeachment, denial by, s. 154, p. 1299 impeaching credit of, unworthy of credit, s. 155, pp. 1308, 1310 impeachment of, "liable to be contradicted' meaning of, s. 155, p. 312
——acceptance of bribe, etc. for, s. 155, p. 1311
——criminal character of rape victim as, s. 155, p. 1316
——FIR, for, s. 155, p. 1314
——inconsistency in statements, proof of, s. 155, p. 1312
——ss. 162, 164 CrPC, under, s. 155, p. 1315
——tape-recorded statements, for, s. 155, p. 1314 ——unworthy of credit, reasons for believing, s. 155, p. 1316 incapable of giving evidence, s. 33, p. 449 incompetent, defective intellect, s. 118, p. 1167 independent, evidence of, s. 3, p. 49 information as to commission of offences, s. 125, p. 1195 injured, s. 3, p. 59
inquest report, not a statement of, s. 157, p. 1322 interested person as, s. 118, p. 1165 judge's power to, call, s. 165, p. 1346
——examine any person as court, s. 165, p. 1349
——put questions to, or production of documents, etc., s. 165, p. 1344 judges and magistrate as, powers of appellate court as to, s. 121, pp. 1170-1172 judicial scrutiny of dispositions of, s. 3, p. 82 juror as, s. 121, p. 1172
juror, and magistrates as, s. 121, p. 1172 jury, powers of to put questions to, s. 166, p. 1352 jury's or assessor's power to put questions to, s. 166, p. 1352 leading questions to, not to be asked, when, ss. 140, 142, p. 1265
——s. 154, provisions of, composed, s. 143, p. 1268 leper, as, s. 118, p. 1164 lunatic as, s. 118, p. 1166 material, withholding of, presumption as to, s. 114, p. 1005

Witness(es) (contd.)
matters in writing, evidence of, as to, s. 144, p. 1269 medical officer as, s. 118, p. 1165 not excused from answering on ground that answer will criminate, s. 132, p. 1213 not to be called in, professional communications, s. 128, p. 1206 number of, ss. 3, 134, pp. 62, 1237 number, of, single, testimony of, s. 134, pp. 1238-1240 oath of, necessary not conclusive, s. 132, p. 1214 obstruction of, adverse party, by, s. 33, p. 452 official communication, s. 124, p. 1189 oneself, against, s. 3, p. 62 oral statements, previous, no cross-examination, as to, s. 145, p. 1273 parties to civil suit and their wives and husbands competent, s. 120, p. 1168 partisan, s. 133, p. 1228 person of easy virtue as, s. 118, p. 1165 person summoned to, depose and sworn, s. 139, p. 1264 ——produce a document is not, no cross-examination of, s. 139, p. 1263 person who furnishes evidence, s. 138, p. 1264 police officer as, s. 118, p. 1165 power of attorney, holder, as, s. 118, p. 1164 presence of, delay and expense in obtaining, if reasonable, s. 33, p. 450 previous statement of, suit, made in, contradiction of, s. 145, p. 1283
——u/s. 164 Cr.P.C. of, use of, s. 145, p. 1281
——u/s. 162 Cr.P.C., not to be used to contradict, s. 145, p. 1280
——by, use of, s. 155, p. 1313
——in writing or reduced to writing, s. 145, p. 1272
——prior depositor of, value of, s. 33, p. 459 production and examination of, commission on, s. 135, p. 1246
——criminal proceedings, in, s. 135, p. 1247
——material witness, s. 135, p. 1248 opposite party as, s. 135, p. 1246
——order of, s. 135, p. 1245 production of documents, etc. compelling of, s. 131, p. 1212 production of title deeds of, "title deeds" meaning of, s. 130, p. 1211 ——not a party, s. 130, p. 1210 professional communications, disclosure of, s. 126, p. 1168 ——privilege as to, extends to clerks or servants of barristers, etc., s. 127, p. 1206 protection of, for answers, s. 132, p. 1216 protection to, from intimidating, s. 3, p. 82 question by party to his own, s. 154, p. 1299 ——statements under sections 162 and 164, Cr.PC, s. 154, p. 1308 question shall be asked and compelled to answer, court to decide, when, s. 148, p. 1288 question when to be asked, court to decide, proper questions, s. 148, p. 1290 questions by party to his own, court's discretion as to permit, s. 154, p. 1301 questions not to be asked from, reasonable grounds, without, s. 149, p. 1292 questions testing veracity of, evidence to contradict answers to, exclusion of, s. 153, p. 1297 re-examination of, direction of, ss. 137, 138, p. 1250
——generally, s. 138, p. 1260
——scope, s. 138, p. 1261

Witness(es) (contd.)
refresh memory of, writings used to, adverse party, right of, as to, s. 161, p. 1337
——"any witness' meaning of, s. 159, p. 1330
——documents, use of, to, s. 159, p. 1328 ——reference to, s. 159, pp. 1330-1333, 1336 ——account books for, s. 159, p. 1331
——age certificate for, s. 159, p. 1331
——document which is or is not contemporaneous, for, s. 159, p. 1332
——document, copy of original, for, s. 160, p. 1336
——documents not admissible for, s. 159, p. 1333
——dying declaration, for, s. 159, p. 1332
——horoscope for, s. 159, p. 1330
——panchanamas, s. 159, p. 1331
——police diaries for, s. 159, p. 1331
——post mortem report, s. 159, p. 1331
——special diary for, s. 159, p. 1332 ——document for, adverse party's right to cross-examine, s. 161, p. 1337
——ss. 159, 161, pp. 1333, 1337
——document, copy of original, for, s. 159, p. 1333
——s. 159 and s. 160 compare, s. 159, p. 1330
——right optional, s. 159, p. 1330
——ss. 159 used 160, distinction, s. 160, p. 1336 relevant matters in question, court not to enter upon a roving enquiry, s. 145, p. 1273
rustic, s. 118, p. 1164
rustic, s. 3, p. 50
scribe as, s. 118, p. 1164
§ SEE ALSO "ATTESTING WITNESS"
§ SEE UNDER 'COMMISSION OF OFFENCE' § SEE UNDER 'OFFICIAL COMMUNICATION' statement made during investigation user section 161 Cr.P.C. by applicability of provision to, s. 132, p. 1214 statement of, during investigation use of, only to contradict, s. 145, p. 1279 statements to police, use of, s. 145, p. 1278 sworn by mistake, s. 139, p. 1264 television link, examination of, by, s. 45, p. 563 testimonial compulsion and, s. 118, p. 1167 testimony to facts stated in document referred to in section 159, by, s. 160, p. 1333 untraceable, evidence by, admissibility, s. 33, p. 448 who cannot be called as, statements by, relevant fact, s. 32, p. 389 who may testify, s. 118, p. 1149
women, s. 3, p. 50

Words used in peculiar sense, evidence as to, s. 98, p. 856

Written admission oral admission as to contents of document, and, s. 22, p. 279

Indie University Library

1326 MIA / 13/918

REFERENCE COPY NOT TO BE ISSUED

GENERAL CONTENTS

CHAPTERS

PART I - RELEVANCY OF FACTS

I. Preliminary.
II. Relevancy of Facts.

PART II - ON PROOF

III. Facts which need not be Proved.
IV. Oral Evidence.
V. Documentary Evidence.
VI. Exclusion of Oral by Documentary Evidence.

PART III - PRODUCTION AND EFFECT OF EVIDENCE

VII. Burden of Proof.
VIII. Estoppel.
IX. Witnesses.
X. Of the Examination of Witnesses.
XI. Improper Admission and Rejection of Evidence.

Subject Index

In the annals of legal history, only a few books have made s much impact and held so much of sway as RATANLAL & DHIRA on THE LAW OF EVIDENCE. Time has never beaten or battered acknowledged work. Like an immortal classic, its appeal has never withered but only grown with the passage of time. Its journey through 19 editions over a vast span of eighty six yea a profound testimony to its intrinsic worth and scholastic wea and a tribute to its master creators who are revered to this d by its vast readership with amazing sincerity and candid ferv

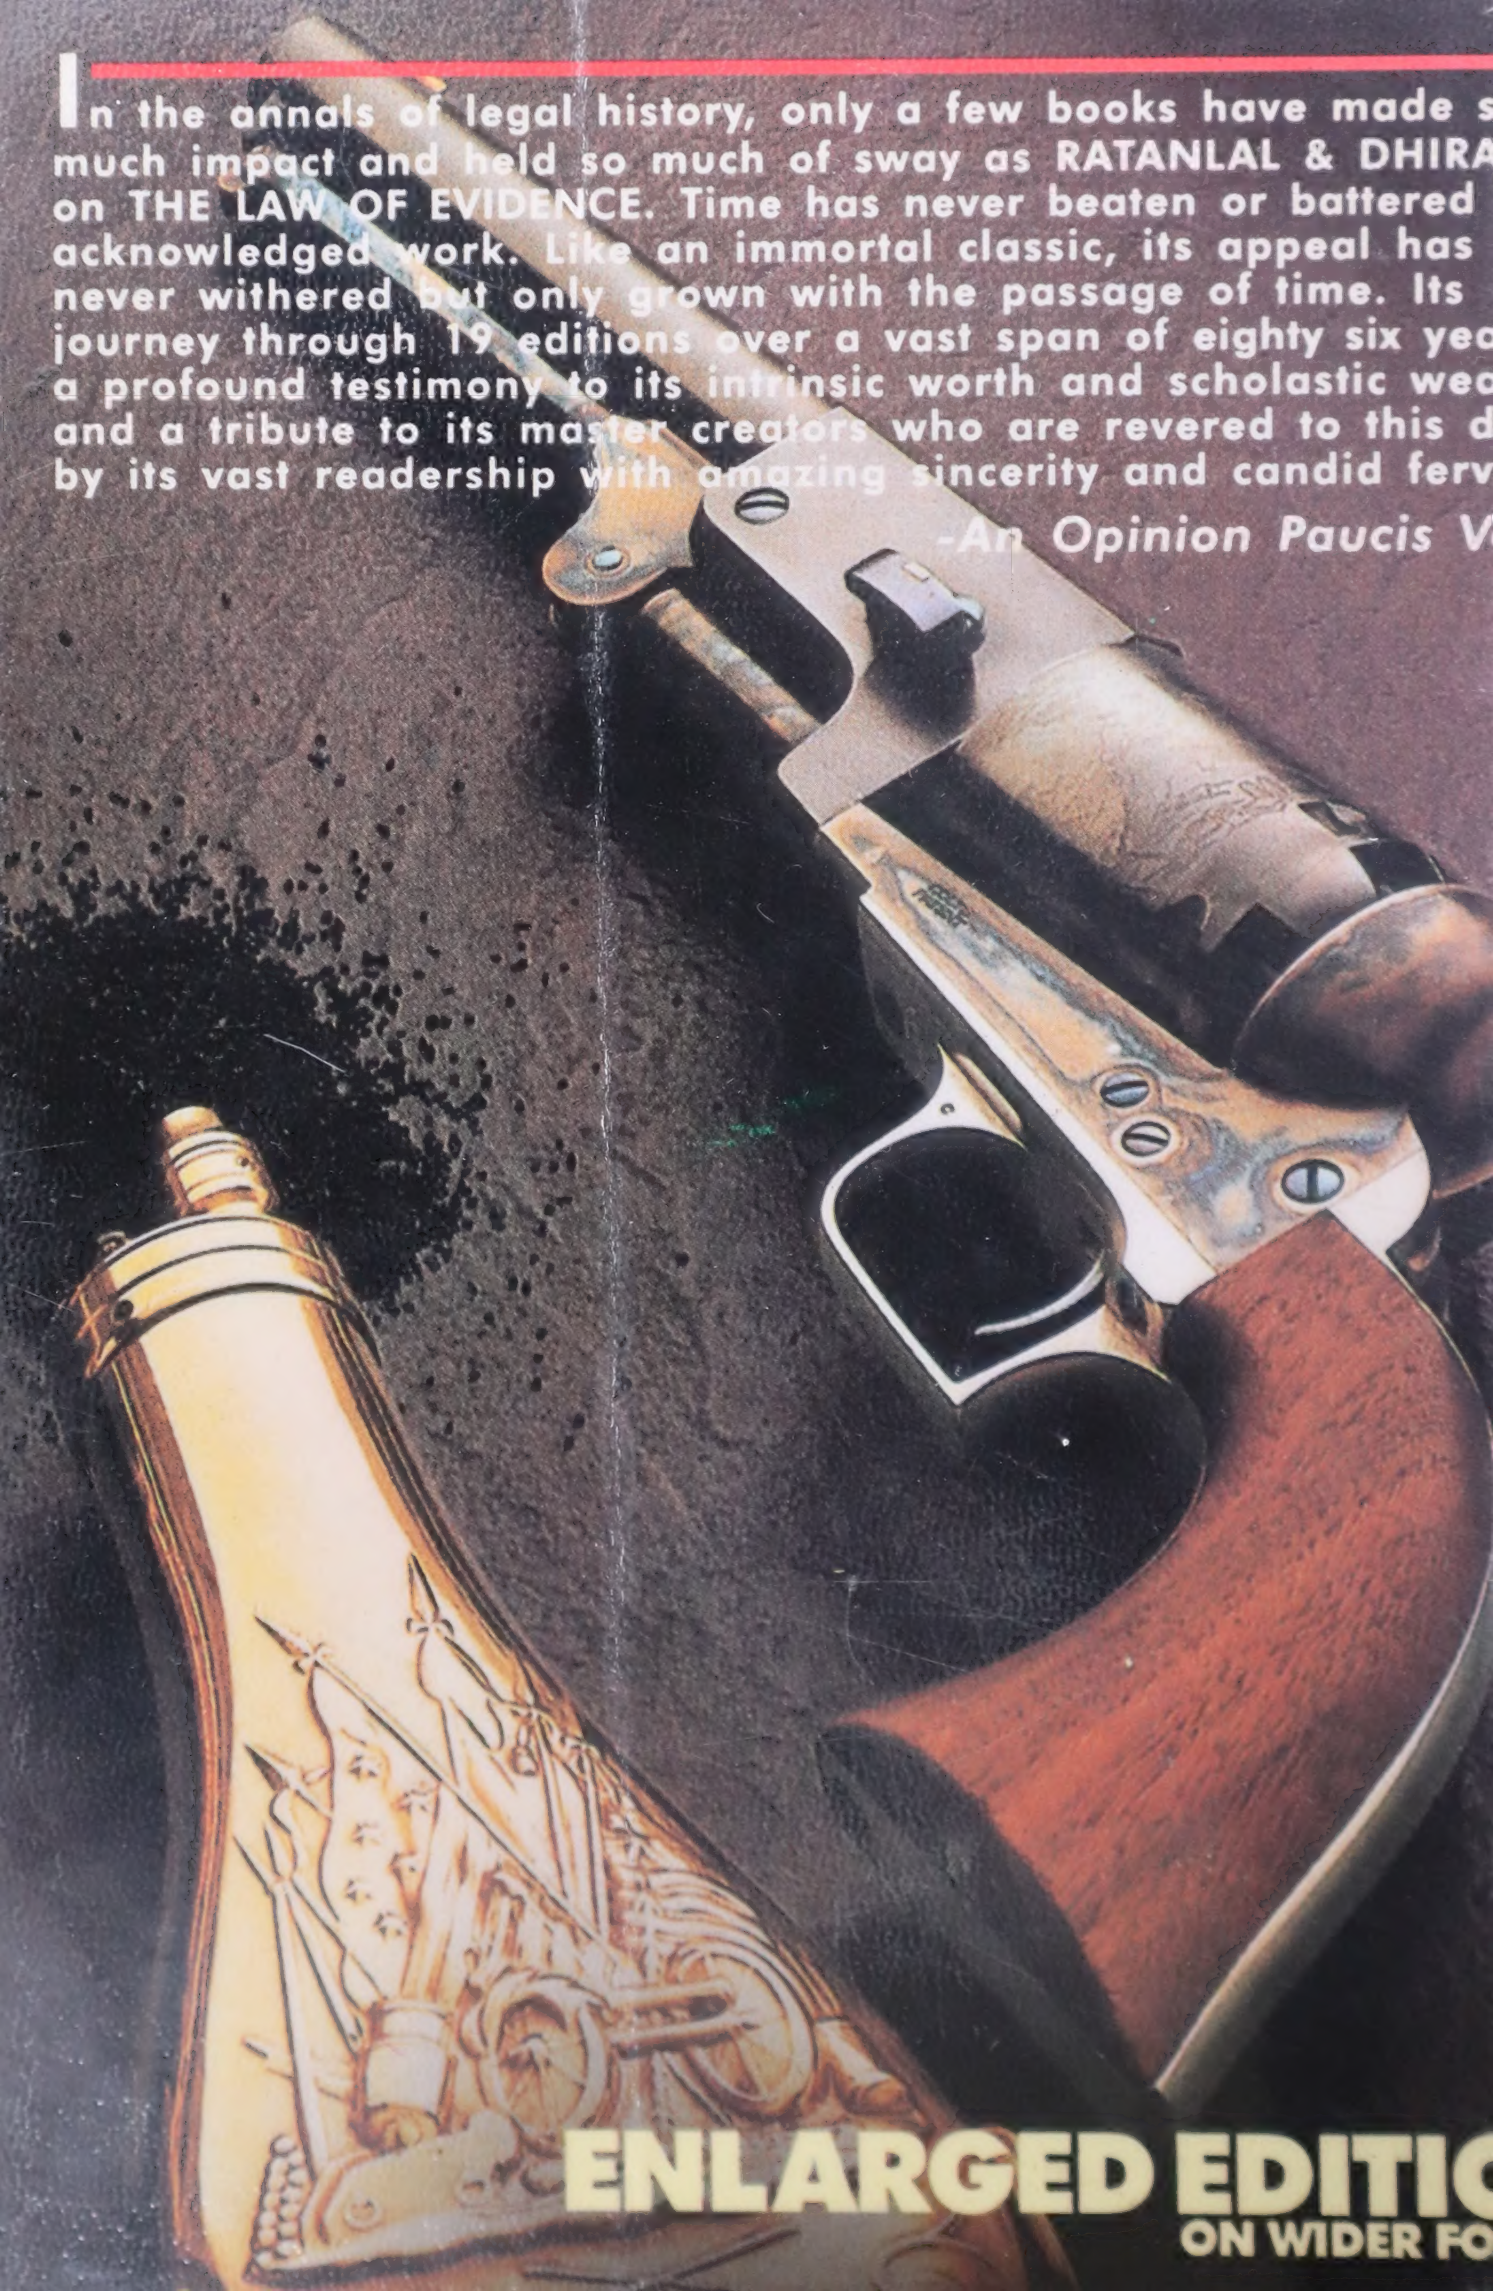
-An Opinion Paucis V



ENLARGED EDITIO

ON WIDER FO